ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

After last year's landmark 40th anniversary edition of The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide, where could we go but onward into our fifth decade? As always, I would like to thank my wife, Caroline, for her support during this process.

For capturing the power and the energy of the character for our Thor cover, I don't think we could have done any better than definitive Thor artist Walter Simonson and color artist Laura Martin. Likewise, for the beauty, spirit and vitality of our Supergirl and Batgirl cover, artist Amanda Conner and color artist Paul Mounts were the perfect choices. Equally up to the task for our spectacular limited edition Marvel hardcover for The Hero Initiative were maestro John Romita, Sr., inker Tom Palmer, and color artist Dean White, who plied their crafts brilliantly for such a great cause. My personal and our collective thanks to all our cover artists, as well as to our "About This Book" artist Gene Gonzales.

Thanks as well go to our Mark Huesman and J.C. Vaughn, who this year not only produced the Guide, but also The Overstreet Hall of Fame special, an issue of Comic Book Marketplace, and The Overstreet Guide To Collecting Comics for Free Comic Book Day 2011 (and of course the weekly Scoop email newsletter).

Our new articles this year include contributions by Brady Bonney, Charlie Novinskie, Nicky Wheeler-Nicholson Brown, and Rob Hughes.

Special Thanks to the Overstreet Advisors who contributed to this edition, including Grant Adey, Bill Alexander, David Alexander, Tyler Alexander, Lon Allen, Dave Anderson, David J. Anderson, DDS, Matt Ballesteros, Stephen Barrington, L.E. Becker, Jim Berry, Jon Bevans, Peter J. Bilelis, Dr. Arnold T. Without their active participation, this project would not have been possible.

Additionally, I would like to personally extend my thanks to all of those who encouraged and supported first the creation of and then subsequently the expansion of the Guide over the past four decades. While it's impossible in this brief space to individually acknowledge every individual, mention is certainly due to Lon Allen (Golden Age data); Mark Arnold (Harvey data); Larry Bigman (Frazetta-Williamson data); Bill Blackbeard (Platinum Age cover photos); Steve Borock and Mark Haspel (Grading); Glenn Bray (Kurtzman data); Gary Carter (DC data); J. THE BEST COMIC BOOK PRESSING IN THE INDUSTRY.

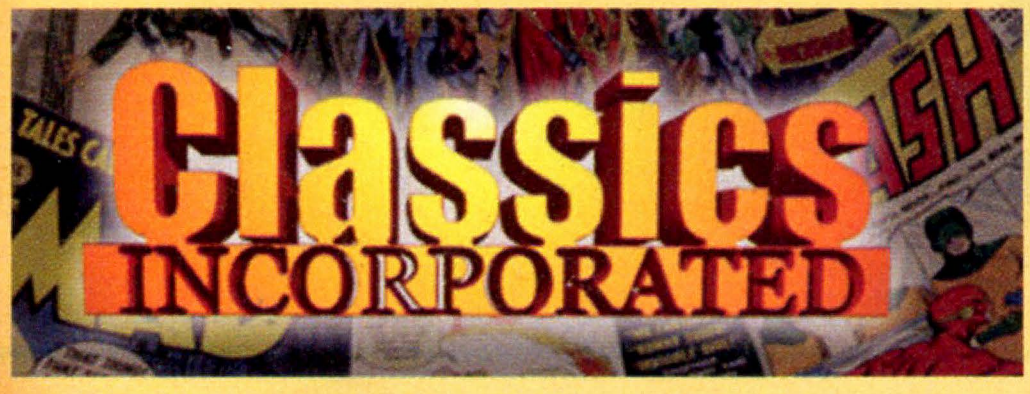
Pressing is the most radical concept to emerge in the comic book market since CGC. Matt Nelson, owner of Classics Incorporated, offers the most effective, safe pressing in the industry--and the most trusted eye for any comic book in any grade. He has evaluated over 100,000 vintage comic books the past decade including many of the most valuable and scarce comics in the world. No one else can offer a more complete knowledge of a book's grade, value and demand in the marketplace.

Our multi-step comic book pressing process has evolved through thousands of hours of research and experience from pressing tens of thousands of comic books. Another key to successful pressing is to understand how it relates to CGC's grading standards which we have mastered through thousands of CGC submissions each year. Without doubt, we identify and maximize your collection's potential better than anyone else in the industry.

This copy of Amazing Fantasy #15 was submitted to us as a CGC 6.0.



After our expert pressing and resubmission to CGC, the book received an unrestored grade of CGC 7.5 and a value increase of $25,000.

Be wary of others who offer to press comics; they usually don't maximize your books' grades, or worse, damage occurs from improper pressing. There are countless kinds of comics and types of defects, so there is no simple way to press a book. You must consider the company who has invested the most research and development into a process that accounts for all variables. Just ask around. Our reputation is second to none! Our website classicsincorporated.com answers many questions about pressing, such as:

- What exactly is pressing and how did it begin?
- How do I spot good pressing candidates?
- What grade range is the best for pressing?
- What is your success rate with pressing and restoration check?
- Is it possible to press 9.8s into 9.9s?

"Unbelievable! Out of 18 CGC graded comics I submitted you, 14 went up! And four made a double jump in grade! I was unsure about this whole thing, but you took the time to explain the process to me. You guys are top-notch. Consider my mind blown."

CGC Grading Services

CGC is the only expert third-party comic book certification service, having graded more than a million comics in its 10 years. Our industry-leading grading team is prohibited from the commercial buying and selling of comics, to ensure accuracy and impartiality. Each book is evaluated by three of our experts, and any detected restoration is noted.

Community Resources

With a membership in the CGC Collectors Society, collectors can interact on our Message Boards, receive monthly eNewsletters, access our Comics Population Report and more. Most notably, members can showcase their collections online in the CGC Registry, and compete in the annual CGC Registry Awards.

SELL Your Comic Books

www.mycomicshop.com/sell

Visit our web site to find out why collectors and dealers just like you sell us over 120,000 comics a month. Our easy online selling system lets you turn your unwanted comics, graphic novels and related items into cash or store credit.

> Thanks so much for being there. For personal reasons, I've needed to liquidate my prized comic collection of 40 years. I procrastinated, moved them around, sold a few on eBay, but really just let them sit for a very long time. Then, finding you, you purchased my bulk as a collection, but advised me to sell my older and key issues via your online want list system where I'd likely do better. I appreciated that you tried to help ME on what to do vs. just "sell it to us cheap". I think I'm about at $10,000 just from you. So, finally, I'm about to send my prizes, and I have confidence you will be fair. I'm also impressed that you upgrade many of my comics above the grades I gave them, even though it meant you'd owe me even more money! So, thanks for turning something that could have been very, very difficult into a process that was easy and painless.

"COMICOLOGIST"

WORLDWIDE COMICS

The nation's largest dealer of vintage CGC comic books!

We focus our inventory on the rarest, most sought-after comic books in the marketplace today, including Silver and Bronze Age comics in 9.4 to 9.8, classic Golden Age covers and key issues, and pedigreed comics. Our tireless search brings you an endless supply of high quality material, listed in our "new arrivals" section of wwcomics.com almost every day.

Unlike auction houses that tend to favor the consignor, especially when bidders run prices up to nosebleed levels, we offer a set price for our comics. Consider us old school! We will also negotiate with you on the price of many comics listed on wwcomics.com for more than 30 days.

Whether you're looking for Timelys in 9.4, Mile Highs, a solid Amazing Fantasy #15 for your collection, or a CGC 9.8 run of Iron Fist, wwcomics.com is the place to find it all.

AND THERE HAVE BEEN LOTS OF OTHER CHANGES, TOO. WE'VE BEEN STUDYING THIS FOR FOUR DECADES NOW AND ONE THING IS REALLY CLEAR...
THE MORE YOU KNOW ABOUT COMICS, THE MORE YOU WANT TO KNOW. AND WE'VE BEEN HAPPY TO HELP PEOPLE LEARN FOR 41 YEARS.

ONE OF THE COOL THINGS ABOUT COMIC BOOKS IS THAT THERE ARE LOTS OF NEW ONES TO DISCOVER...

AND THERE ARE LITERALLY HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF DIFFERENT BACK ISSUES, TOO!

BACK ISSUE COMICS RANGE FROM LESS THAN COVER PRICE TO $1,500,000.

A COMIC BOOK FOR $1.5 MILLION? HARD TO BELIEVE, HUH?

THE FIRST COMIC TO HIT $1 MILLION WAS ACTION COMICS #1, THE FIRST APPEARANCE OF SUPERMAN.

THE SECOND, JUST A FEW DAYS LATER, WAS DETECTIVE COMICS #27, THE FIRST APPEARANCE OF BATMAN.

ANOTHER ACTION #1 SOLD FOR $1.5 MILLION JUST A SHORT WHILE AFTER THAT.

MANY OTHERS HAVE SOLD FOR RECORD PRICES IN THE LAST YEAR OR SO, EVEN WITH THE TOUGH ECONOMY NATIONALLY.

THE GRADE AND SCARCITY OF THE ISSUES HAVE A LOT TO DO WITH THAT. WE'LL GET INTO THAT IN JUST A BIT...

OVERSTREET MARKET REPORT 2011

FOLLOWING RECENT RECORD-SETTING GOLDEN AGE SALES, IT WAS SILVER'S TURN TO SHINE

by Robert M. Overstreet

This CGC-certified 9.6 copy of Amazing Fantasy #15 broke the $1 million barrier with a record-setting sale at $1,100,00. Also impressive were sales of this CGC-certified 9.4 copy of Tales of Suspense #39 for $147,500 and this CGC-certified 9.6 copy of X-Men #1 bringing $200,000.

SILVER AGE KEYS SET RECORDS: The Silver Age saw its first $1 million comic when a CGC-certified 9.6 copy of Amazing Fantasy #15 sold for a record $1,100,000. A CGC 9.0 sold for $150,000; Amazing Spider-Man #1 in CGC 8.5 sold for $28,680; Avengers #1 in CGC 9.4 went for $100,000, #4 in CGC 9.4 brought $22,705; Brave & the Bold #28 in CGC 9.0 realized $31,700; Fantastic Four #1 in CGC 9.4 went for $300,000, and a CGC 8.0 copy sold for $47,800; Green Lantern #1 in CGC 9.2 went for $16,730. Incredible Hulk #181 in CGC 9.9 brought $150,000. Iron Man #1 in CC 9.6 brought $3,883.75. Sgt. Fury in CGC 9.0 went for $10,157.50; Tales of Suspense #39 in CGC 9.4 sold for $147,500 with a CGC 9.2 also selling for $49,750; and X-Men #1 in CGC 9.6 got $200,000.

While the demand for scarce, high grade copies of key comics shows no signs of ebbing, after the $1,000,000+ sales that occurred in the first quarter of 2010, record prices were also realized for lower grade copies of rare, vintage comic books.

A CGC-certified 5.0 copy of Action Comics #1 went for $436,000, while a CGC 3.0 sold for $300,000. Action Comics #7 in CGC 7.0 brought $175,000. All Negro #1 in CGC 3.0 brought $5,377.50. Archie Comics #1 in CGC 5.0 sold for $34,000, in CGC 8.5 sold for $167,300! Batman #1 in CGC 5.5 sold for $55,268.75; in CGC 3.0 brought $26,290, a #3 in CGC 9.4 sold for $32,265. Detective Comics #27 in CGC grade 7.5 sold for $657,250 and another copy in CGC 7.0 brought $492,937.50. Also a CGC 6.0 sold for $575,000 and a CGC 3.5 brought $240,000! A Flash Comics #2 in CGC 9.4 sold for $49,331.25, Mile High copy. Looney Tunes #1 in CGC 9.2 sold for $38,837.50. Marvel Comics #1 in CGC 6.0 sold for $71,700, in CGC 4.0 brought $38,837.50; a Marvel Mystery #9 in CGC 6.0, Larson pedigree, sold for $22,705, #46 in CGC 8.5 sold for $9,560. More Fun #52 in CGC 6.0 went for $28,680. A Pep Comics #22 in CGC 5.0 sold for $50,000. A Superman #1 in CGC 4.5 went for $90,000, #2 in CGC 9.2 sold for $85,000, #24 in CGC 9.4 sold for $41,825. Suspense Comics #3 in CGC 5.5 brought $15,535. Terry-Toons #1 in CGC 9.0 sold for $3585.

In looking back, the collapse of the U.S. housing bubble, which peaked in the fall of 2005, caused the stock market and other financial markets to plummet. The Dow Jones Industrial Average fell over a 17 month period from a high of 14,164 (reached on October 9th 2007) to a low of 6,469 (in March 2009).

Since that time, the stock market has recovered most of its losses passing 12,000 early this year. As unemployment remained around 9% officially (the real number is estimated by many to be double that) throughout 2010 into 2011, the economy stayed sluggish with businesses continuing to close or go bankrupt and housing continuing to lose value. However, during this same period, gold, silver, copper and other commodity prices boomed.

For the past three years, interest paid from CDs and other financial investments have been extremely low. With the declining value of the dollar, everyone's savings continue to shrink. However, among the best places to invest today are the collectibles fields including comic books. Comic book sales continued to show record prices paid for key rare, vintage issues in both the Golden Age and Silver Age periods resulting in numerous price increases in this edition. At the same time, second tier books continue to sell at and below Guide levels, and some cases prices had to be reduced to bring this edition more in line with the current market.

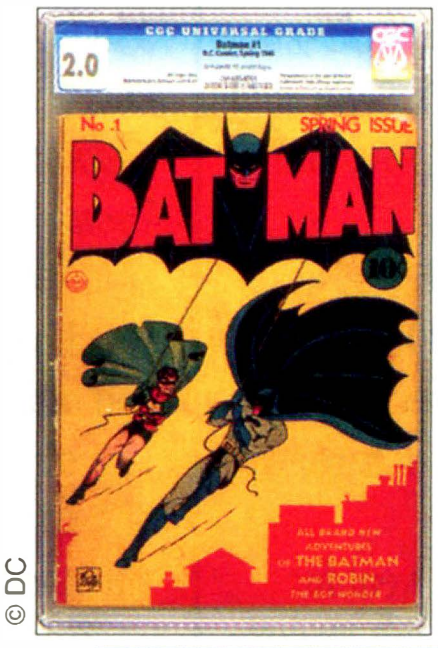
Even before their record-setting May 2011 sale of Frank Miller and Klaus Janson's Page 10 of Batman: The Dark Knight Returns #3 for $448,125 made everyone take notice, Heritage reported comic sales of $23,077,321 in 2010 with an additional $14,454,281 in comic illustrated art. This auction company has been very successful in marketing comic book investing to their large customer base which introduces comics to other markets they reach such as coins, art, fossils, minerals and Indian artifacts.

Metropolis reported 2010 as their best year in sales to date. Selling the two copies of Action Comics #1 through their sister company ComicConnect.com, for a $1 million and $1.5 million, brought them – and the industry as a whole – a lot of publicity (See their market report for other record sales of Gold and Silver keys). As Vincent Zurzolo, Jr. states "As evidenced by these sales, you can see that the vintage comic book market is strong. Key Golden and Silver Age comics are doing very well." and he also writes, "More common late Silver and Bronze Age issues have seen a reduction in price," adding "with more high grade issues coming into the market place, it will take some time for demand to catch up and prices to rebound."

Eric Groves in referring to the $1,500,000 dollar sale, wrote, "That sale, and others, verified the intrinsic value of the comic book as a genuine American artifact." He continues, "It also demonstrated that even in difficult economic times, the high end items still sell – to those who can afford them. In wrapping up, he states "Economists may say the recession is over, but high unemployment persists. Disposable income is down and to some extent, the Age of Frugality is upon us. There is a bright side for collectors in that bargains abound. It is a good time to buy." Not only did high grade copies of the Golden Age keys sell for record prices, they also brought record prices in low grade. A few examples to report are: An Action #7 in CGC 3.0 sold for $20,315, in CGC 1.8 brought $116,000 and in CGC 5.0 went for $465,000. A Batman #1 in CGC 2.0 auctioned off at $23,302 and a 1.0 brought $14,340! A Detective #27 in CGC 3.5 sold for $240,000. Detective #31 in CGC 2.5 sold for $14,340! A Marvel Mystery #9 in CGC 2.5 sold for $7767. A Superman #1 in CGC 1.8 for $28,000! As you can see, demand for these top key books in any grade couldn't be higher.

Buddy Saunders wrote, "I've been both surprised and pleased at the strength the comic market displayed in 2010. With so much of the economy down and unemployment high, comics held strong. Our stores enjoyed modest sales increases, and our website experienced its best year yet."

We have seen an upsurge in demand for many Silver Age books throughout 2010.



Harley Yee reported, "The 2010 market continued many trends from 2009 with high grade Marvels and Marvel keys being the top sellers." He continued, "Early Archie stuff has always been scarce, but recently has seen a surge in prices with early Pep issues setting record prices." And that's not even mentioning the six-figure sale of an Archie #1 in February 2011.

Dave Alexander wrote, "Silver Age has become the most popular time period for collecting," and added "The top Marvel titles are still the top Marvel titles and the high grade copies of Amazing Spider-Man that have sold in the six-figure range have provided additional Original art also set records as Frank Miller and Klaus Janson's Page 10 from Batman: The Dark Knight Returns #3 soared above pre-auction expectations with a final price of $448,125.

Low grade Golden Age enjoyed strong sales, as evidenced by a CGC-certified 3.0 copy of Action Comics #7 selling for $20,315. A Batman #1 with a CGC-certified grade of 2.0 brought $23,302.

positive publicity for the hobby."

For Golden Age books, he said, "Timely titles have hit high levels and are hard to find. Superman and Batman titles have the highest demand," and also said, "The big growth area is in Romance titles. We have located about 3,000 Romance issues in the last year. Many Romance books sell for huge multiples of Guide values. Certain icon covers go for 10-20x Guide prices."

© AP

Archie Comics #1 leaped into six-figure territory. A CGC-certified 8.5 sold for $167,300.

Jason Hamlin of Brett's Comic Pile wrote "I can't count the number of people at conventions looking strictly for ultra-high grade keys. At every show we get asked multiple times a day, and a VF just won't do for many."

Jon McClure reported, "When it comes to the truly scarce, bad copies of key or variant issues bring good money from those who must have them. Mostly, the same books are on everyone's lists."

Dave Anderson, DDS, stated, "The really good material is stronger than ever and the prices realized reflect this." He continued, "It is currently difficult to get 50% of Guide values for more common, less desirable titles. However, this gap between high end and lower end material may eventually result in the lower end material looking more attractive due to the lower prices, so there is a good opportunity to purchase this material now while it is still possible to get it for well below Guide values."

As you can no doubt detect from the sampling of comments shared in this introduction, 2010 showed thousands of price changes, mostly positive, reflected in this edition. Please refer to individual listings which include these changes. Additionally, the following market reports were submitted from some of our many advisors and are published here for your information. While the opinions in these reports belong to each contributor and do not necessarily reflect the views of the publisher or the staff of The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide or Gemstone Publishing, they will provide important insights into the thinking of many key players in the marketplace.

See you next year!

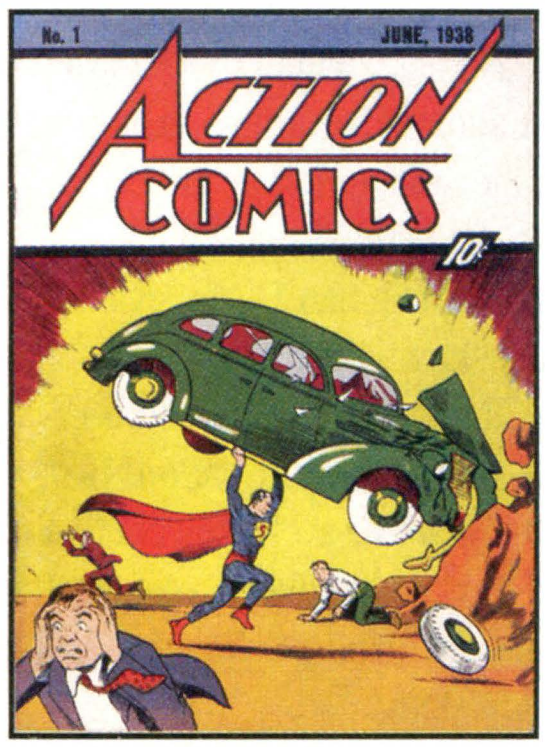
Overstreet Celebrates 40th Anniversary at Comic-Con

The celebration the Guide's 40th anniversary saw a major change for the release date, with a move to Preview Night at Comic-Con International: San Diego, which was July 21, 2010. As part of the celebration of the Guide's four decades of service to the comic book hobby and industry, Comic-Con International: San Diego invited Bob Overstreet to be one of the show's special guests.

"Remarkably, this was the first time Bob had ever allowed a show to pay his way to the convention. He's worked studiously over the years to avoid any conflict of interest, but we managed to twist his arm to allow fandom to honor his accomplishments," said J.C. Vaughn, Associate Publisher of Gemstone Publishing.

During the show, Bob had autograph stints at the Diamond Comic Distributors booth (joined at one point by Guide cover artist Mark Chiarello) and at an exclusive session at the Hard Rock Hotel suite of The Hero Initiative.



"The 40th anniversary received a great deal of attention, and both the fans and dealers seemed very happy about the new release date," Overstreet said. "On the day of its release, we got word that the Captain America hardcover of #40 had sold out. Many fans brought copies of the new editions to be signed, but I also autographed a lot of older ones, too. It was a great experience."

The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide #40 also marked the first time a limited edition has been produced as a fundraiser. "The limited edition Conan #1 recreation cover for The Hero Initiative was a big hit last year and helped raise a lot of money for a great organization. John Romita, Jr. did the pencils on it, and this year John Romita, Sr. has done the pencils for our second Hero Initiative fund-raiser. I suspect it will be as well received as the first one, and I hope Guide #41 is received as an excellent kick-off to the Guide's next 40 years," Overstreet said.

Grant Adey
Fats Comics Australia

Greetings from Australia, this is my second proud year as an advisor. In this report I'll discuss the trends in this neck of the woods. The books that are hot and sought after appear to be universal. Silver Age to Bronze Age keys sell quickly in VG or better, small bagged lots of 5 to 10 Silver Age comics are hot cakes when I'm able to do a good smash. Surprisingly more parents are becoming involved in their children reading, a very strong swing towards morality. I have split my dollar boxes for the first time in nine years. A special section for children which has Archies, Disney, Cartoon Network, Westerns, etc. is pushing the pile of ho hum dollar books out into the abyss. Super hero is still king, always was, always will be. Golden Age collectable comics are almost "all engines stop", appealing to mostly 50+ collectors these people seem to have other things on their priority list at the moment.

After nearly 10 years of trying to get Australians to embrace original comic book art there appears to be a little light on the horizon, I sold 2 Ray Moore Phantom strips for $2000usd each and a Wilson McCoy Phantom strip for $770. 6 Glenn Ford Phantom pages, 4 Glenn Ford painted covers for a little over $3500, all these prises were achieved by auction. An amazing result given this outruns what I've sold in the previous 8 years. Phantom reigns supreme in Australia outselling any other title. In later 2010 I was fortunate enough to buy a large lot of comics, books and items from the Lee Falk Estate. CGC noted "from the estate of Lee Falk" on the label of the 400 comics I had graded. Many thanks to CGC, without their foresight & recognition these books would have sadly been lost into my inventory. Vincent Zurzolo and the ComicConnect group took the Falk collection to market for me with absolute record breaking, I mean throw away the Guide blinder results, a staggering 52x Guide on a large chunk of the comics. I watched the New York auction on my laptop at the shop counter, I saw the bids and went "nah" "nah" and then to the roar of my regular customers "its kicked again" "extended time". I could only compare it to a bunch of guys gathered around a radio listening to the World Series. Every once in a while the stars align to give an outcome that can probably never be again. It's good to be there when the wheel goes around.

The last half of 2010 was turbulent business conditions and 2011 has started here like a train wreck. Brisbane was hit with disastrous floods which crippled the states economy for January and well into February and beyond. Fats Comics being the "last of the Mohicans" old school comic book store in Australia. All other comic book stores are new only, well, without these guys I would be doomed ... Special thanks goes to my Yankee buddies who keep pulling my leg out of never-ending bear traps: Jared Stern of Maryland, Jamie & Gino at Southern Cal. Comics. Bruce Ellsworth and Mike Clarke for their fantastic help throughout the year. From the furtherest outpost this is Slim signing off till 2012.

Greetings from Central California, where the recession of 2010 is still a happening reality. I collect and deal mainly in Bronze Age books and would first off like to say I observed a Green Lantern #76 in CGC 9.8 grade sold for a record high Bronze Age sales price ($37,343.75) at auction in late 2010. I would also like to mention that a copy of Archie's Mad House #22 15c price variant, the "Holy Grail" of Archie 15c price variants, surfaced in July 2010. I was thrilled to actually see a scan of the book when an Archie enthusiast and collector I know was kind enough to send me a scan of it. In addition to this, another key Archie 15c price variant book, Archie's Girls Betty and Veronica #75 surfaced in 2010 as well, which I myself purchased in VG+ grade for $85.00, a bargain and steal of a price for that key book. Collector interest in Archie key books definately appears to be picking up at an incredibly fast rate, especially with Golden Age keys like Pep Comics #22 and Archie Comics #1 leading the way, with both books continuing to set record high sales at auction that land well over Guide.

The original owner of a copy of Detective Comics #27 was featured in a story in the local newspaper here in Central California. The owner purchased the book at a market in 1939 and 71 years later, when the book was placed up for auction, it sold in November 2010 in CGC 7.0 grade for a little less than a half million dollars, which is quite a profit on a dime investment!

Anyone out there ever seen an Amazing Spider-Man #122 or Tomb of Dracula #10 comic book in a 44-page format? The book definitely exists, as do other Marvel comics that were published with a cover date of 7/73 that contain the wrap-around four page Mennen sweepstakes Army ad insert on slick paper. It acts like a double cover on the books and precedes the comic stories inside them. These Variant Bronze Age Marvel books also contained a Mark Jewelers four page centerfold ad insert, making them 44 pagers and quite unique in format size. Only a very small percentage of the print run was printed thusly, intended for distribution in overseas U.S. military bases. These dual ad Marvel insert editions are seldom found in high grade and are uncommon in any grade!

Happy hunting and comic collecting to everyone out there.

The key words for collecting in 2010 & 2011 have been price adjustments. For many items, we have seen wild swings in prices during the past 14 months. Many relatively obscure and modestly priced items in the Guide have absolutely blown through the roof. There are many comic books that do not sell very often and are not available at shows regularly. Think of it like this, when a dealer sells a $10.00 Guide item for $95.00, is he going to call the Guide publishers to share the information, or is he going to spend his time trying to find a few more copies before the word spreads? Other items, particularly those whose prices have become high but are commonly available, have had a downward trend. What many collectors overlook is that the information in this book is about a year old. In many instances the pricing information is outdated before the proofed copy has been sent to the printer. We applaud the efforts of everyone who has an active part in working on this guide. The effort to document a hobby like comic book collecting is monumental, and there is a huge value to be found in studying each edition of the Guide. In our opinion the most useful aspect of the Guide is to understand the relationship of values between books. When you can understand the relationships between the values you will be on your way to successful collecting. Those who have accumulated wealth from the hobby have mastered this concept.

Adventures of the Year: There were some wild experiences in the past year. We did not attend many conventions and instead confined most of our buying to larger original collections. This required a substantial amount of time on the road but resulted in a fantastic payoff. We deal in tons of paper collectibles in addition to comic books and this almost always insures that we will never leave any place empty handed. The best collection we scored had 14 boxes of various sizes full of Golden Age and Silver Age comic books and a large box of Radio Premiums. We had been aware of this collection for several years and even thought we had it pin-pointed in 2008 when we made a 1600 mile round trip only to find that the people had abandoned their residence about a month before we arrived. We had received the original tip from a distant relative of the family who was really interested in the finders' fee that we had offered him and we heard from him again in 2010. This time his info was up to date. WOW, what a score! There were only two Timely comics and only one had a cover. The DC and Fawcett issues were impressive. Lots of Wonder Woman and Captain Marvel titles were highlights of this group along with 1950s Atlas issues. There was even a blast of Quality issues highlighted by a long Blackhawk run. Oddly enough there were almost no pre-code horror comics except for the Atlas issues. Being able to sort through a large collection such as this is loads of fun and does provide a sociological perspective on individual collecting habits. Unfortunately we missed out on a lot of that fun as we took a zigzag route back to Florida and stopped to visit some of our top clients who bought over half of the collection. This collection came from an area that is jam packed with comic dealers and collectors and we are fortunate that the family did not attempt to contact any of the local stores or convention dealers.

We were able to buy out several struggling eBay dealers in 2010. Competition has become fierce on the internet and rising sales costs have caused many casual sellers to bail out. Our policy is to "buy everything" so we had loads of material pass through our hands. We generally do not deal in comic books published after 1975 so we had tons of material to pass on at low wholesale prices. This area had the largest price fluctuation of all. Sometimes lots of 5000 books would only bring 8 cents a book and other times we would get in the area of $1.50 a book. The quality of books did vary and our need to create space often had an impact on our price. We decided not to increase the size of our 5000 square foot warehouse this year so we were forced to move wholesale lots quicker.

The most harrowing deal of the year was the one we did not buy. We received a call from a fellow who said he had Superman #1 and about 100 other "old" books. (Maybe this is the time to insert that "old" is a relative term. We field calls weekly from people who offer us "old" comic books from as far back as 1998. These are not "old".) But, back to my story… He didn't seem to have a complete grasp of what he was selling but it seemed like an opportunity that should be investigated and it was less than 200 miles away. It was dark and damp when I arrived. The apartment was old, almost run down and in a seedy transient part of the city. That is not necessarily a bad thing; some of our best loads have come out of dives. Going up the stairs I noticed that there was paint splashed on the walls and steps, it looked strange. When I got inside his dimly lit abode I was overwhelmed by a grotesque odor, there were about 40 kitty litter trays; every surface seemed to have one. It appeared that when one filled up he did not bother to clean it out, he just bought another one. At least 20 cats were in the place, I couldn't count them, and they were jumping around like crazy. It was obvious that he had been drinking and among the mass of junk piled up everyplace, were overflowing ash trays and grocery bags full of fast food cartons and bottles. I saw a couple of beaten Silver Age comics on the coffee table covered with letters and newspapers. With blood shot eyes and slurred speech he explained that his wife was in jail and that they had had a "paint fight" in the stairway which led to the arrival of the police who hauled the old girl away after finding some outstanding warrants. He wanted to raise bail money with the books. Among the load of junk and animals in this dive one thing did stand out, I noticed a revolver on the kitchen counter. It is strange how your focus can suddenly be drawn in one direction. I was instantly aware that the cylinders had bullets, that thing was loaded! He had his friend, a swarthy looking individual, who did not speak fluent English, clear out a space and bring out two grocery bags that housed the comics. The first few were mundane Silver Age issues in average condition, then he pulled out his treasured piece. It was Superman Annual #1, not the original Superman issue from 1939. Have you ever tried to argue with alcohol? It does not work. Although he had a dog eared two year old price guide with a marker on the Superman page I was not able to explain the difference between the first issue and the Annual. He had dollar signs in those blood shot eyes and he had mentioned $10,000 more than once. My discussion was calm but he was heading towards getting heated and his intoxicated buddy was backing towards that kitchen counter. Fortunately he stumbled over a couple garbage bags and sprawled out on a rickety sofa. With that movement the old guy's attention was diverted and tension was broken. I did the only thing I could think of. I told him I did not deal in expensive books like he had but I would be happy to give him the names and numbers of a couple dealers who did handle "Valuable Books". I gave him a couple numbers and got out of there. I still haven't heard from the guys whose numbers I left with him.

Golden Age Books: As always our most popular sellers and largest sales volumes came from Golden Age titles. Timely titles have hit high price levels and are hard to find. We did not receive many Timely want lists last year. Superman and Batman titles have the highest demand and this trend has continued from 2009 into 2011. Superhero books are tops with Horror/Sci-fi, Jungle, newspaper reprint, War, Crime, and Romance genres being the next most popular in that order. The big growth area is in Romance titles. We have located about 3000 Romance issues in the last year and there is a real feeding frenzy for them. Many of these issues sell to non-traditional buyers who purchase no other types of comics and are not involved in the hobby or with price guides. This is the only area where we see an abundance of female collectors. Many bachelor collectors may want to look into getting into this area of comic collecting, if for no other reason than to connect with lady collectors who have similar interests. Many Romance books sell for huge multiples of Guide values. Certain icon covers go for 10-20x Guide prices. You might ask "What are the popular icon covers?" Look at a long run of any of these titles and certain issues will jump out at you when you have seen enough of them. We've been selling comic books full time for over 42 years. Some concepts took us over two decades to develop and understand. We can't share all our secrets here, but study the products and certain concepts will become more concrete to you. As we mentioned before, don't look at just the listed prices, but look for relative values. Detailed research can be done by examining the items on our website, DTAcollectibles.com. We still find that books from the 1947-1953 era are harder to locate than books from the WWII era. If we compare the books lost to the paper drives of WWII to the limited print runs and limited distribution areas of the 1950s era, it seems logical that fewer books were available after WWII. As a side note I can remember as a child that my parents often went to a neighborhood grocery store that carried comic books published only by Magazine Enterprises. That was OK with me as I was fascinated by the Ghost Rider, Tim Holt, and The Durango Kid who was a big B-Western movie hit. I also found Straight Arrow comics there and I was an avid follower of the radio series and I ate tons of Shredded Wheat to get the Straight Arrow premiums. Who distributed these comics and why only Magazine Enterprises has always been a mystery to me. To add to the mystery list, there was a small Mom & Pop grocery a few blocks from this store that only had a single comic rack that had only eight pockets to display eight titles. The only comics I ever saw in this store were Ajax/Farrell publications. This publisher did not print many books and to think that a distributor would exclusively carry their titles and no others is really a mystery to me. Maybe a grocery distributor had hooked up with Ajax. If anyone has any insight into this I would love to hear about it.

Pulps like Argosy with Tarzan covers were big movers.

Silver Age Comics: This has become the most popular time period for collecting. Actually many of these comics are really entertaining to read. The comic book movies have had a huge influence on the collecting hobby. The Marvel movies have often been true to the story line of the comic books and I think this has given the comic books more relevance to new collectors. The top Marvel titles are still the top Marvel titles and the high grade copies of Amazing Spider-Man that have sold in the six figure range have provided additional positive publicity for the hobby. The titles that are coming on strong now are Tales to Astonish, Tales of Suspense and Strange Tales. Watch out for Strange Tales if you have an investor mentality. Strange Tales, you heard it first right here.

Green Lantern has been the standard bearer for the DC line. The Showcase Green Lantern issues and #1-10 of the Silver Age series could be considered hot items. Try to find issue #7 which features the origin of Sinestro. Other DC titles that had positive movement in 2010 are Mystery in Space, all the War titles including late comer Weird War, Hawkman, Brave and the Bold, Showcase, all Romance titles and most of the 80 Page Giants.

Good Girl Art: Comics and other publications featuring girls have always been popular. GGA comics have been through various cycles of demand during the last 25 years. Their ups and downs have been related to price and not content. Recently we have seen new demand for these unique comic books.

Collectors who were new to our mailing list have been rapidly depleting our inventory of Fiction House and Fox titles. Not only do they devour our comic book inventory but they are also trying to deplete our inventory of True Crime, Men's Adventure and pulp magazines with Good Girl Art covers. The pulp titles from Fiction House have been in high demand. Jungle Stories and Planet Stories are just as popular as Jungle Comics and Planet Comics. We have two clients who buy doubles and triples of all GGA items. The hot artist in this area is now George Gross. His comic book work is limited but pulps and true crime magazines with his covers are extremely popular. True Detective Cases, Women in Crime, Best True Fact Detective and Police Detective are among the most popular. Try to find some of these. While you are at it, pick up some copies of Rulah, All-Top, Phantom Lady, Sheena, Jo-Jo and Nyoka. These comics are fun to read and to show your friends, the stories do not feel dated and the books are not stuck in a past time period.

Western Comics: The movie and TV related books were our top sellers in this area. Just like the recent Marvel and DC movies influence many comic buyers, those who appreciate the old Westerns seem to have current availability of old films and TV programs. Many old Westerns show up on cable TV and lots of films are available on DVD. The top of this list is Roy Rogers, the quintessential "good guy" whose screen life spanned over 20 years, and his name is still well known today. Many issues of his long running Dell series are easy to locate and some can be found at almost any comic book convention in the US. Try to complete the run of his comics. Roy Rogers appeared in the first photo cover Dell movie Western edition, Four Color #38, published in 1944. Try to find a nice copy of that one. Gene Autry, Hopalong Cassidy, Rocky Lane, Tim Holt, Lash Larue, Gabby Hayes, Rex Allen, Monte Hale and Tom Mix all had exciting film careers with their adventures appearing in comic books of the 1940s and 1950s. Many of these comics are available at most comic shows but each title has a few issues that are harder to locate. You probably will not get rich if you plan to invest in these titles but they are an important part of Americana and they do provide a lot of entertainment for the cost. Non-film related Westerns were steady sellers during 2010. The best Dell title of this group is clearly Turok, Son of Stone. I think this is the only 1950s Dell Western that was eventually turned into a video game. DC titles like All-American Western and All Star Western were very popular. Tomahawk was the most requested DC title but with over 130 issues it had the longest run of any of the DC Western series. The hottest non-film title was again Red Ryder. Whether it was the impressive Fred Harman art, the universal "good vs evil" theme or the Western background that continues to please collectors, we cannot determine what creates the most demand. We do know that we are always happy to see these comics when they are included in collections that we acquire. The few Fox Western titles usually sell quickly. Any issue with an Indian cover was a potential "hot" item. The Fiction House title Indians and the Dell series Indian Chief set world record prices for us.

Pre-Code Horror & Sci-Fi: These books had another banner sales year. Issues that were referenced in Seduction of the Innocent were very fast to sell. If you want some laughs, find the Ladies Home Journal issue from 1953 that has an article on comics and the Seduction book. Books with "Injury to the eye", snakes, skulls, torture, dismemberment, vampires, the occult, hangings, Rocket ship covers and extreme violence were most sought after. The copies that came our way in 2010 were all from collectors with changing tastes, not original owner Horror collections turning up, and believe me, we were looking for them.

Pulp Magazines: Again in 2010 Edgar Rice Burroughs pulps were our top volume mover. Burroughs' universally known character, Tarzan, was the first "bigger than life" superhero. Titles that featured Tarzan stories, such as New Stories, Argosy, Amazing Stories, and Blue Book were constant sellers. One strange phenomenon we have noticed is that other than the first Tarzan pulp in 1910, the Tarzan pulps generally sell for less than the equivalent hard back book edition which usually appeared after the pulp was on the stands. John Carter Of Mars issues had increased demand which was certainly enhanced by the announcement of the movie based on this famous Mars series.

The most popular hero pulp has been The Shadow but that position weakened with the economic collapse. We are not sure exactly what the relationship of these two events was but The Spider is now the most sought-after hero title followed closely by Doc Savage.

War and aviation pulps had increased demand. The concept of aviation was first popularized in the pulps of the early 1920s and those editions are very collectible today. Wings, War Stories by Dell, Battle Birds, Dare-Devil Aces, G-8 and His Battle Aces are some of the many titles that brought air adventure to the common man. These pulps are historic artifacts that would enhance any popular culture collection. Don't wait forever to obtain a few of these, the supply is not large.

Underground Comix: Still a fertile area for study and research. The recent Underground Price Guides have helped to identify and document many obscure editions. It has recently come to light that many limited edition, local publications have a commonality with the Undergrounds and there is lots of undocumented material to be researched. As in the past, Robert Crumb is the king here. Did anyone miss the film about his life or American Splendor about his friend, Harvey Pekar? These are both interesting parts of comic book history.

Magazines: The top seller here has been Heavy Metal which first appeared in the U.S. during early 1977. Moebius was one of the top artists to contribute material to this series. Now, almost 35 years after its first appearance, copies are highly sought after. For years issues seemed constantly available and now they have been absorbed into the population. Recently a CGC 9.8 copy of the first issue was sold in a private transaction for almost $1000. Mad Magazine issues pre-1964 have had a good turnover. Warren Publications are steady sellers; lots of collectors enjoy Vampirella, Famous Monsters, Eerie and Creepy. The sleeper this year has been Sick magazine. Joe Simon worked on the early issues and we have had multiple requests for copies of the first dozen issues.

Fanzines: We have been fortunate to have had one of the largest original fanzine collections to exist. The collection was originally amassed by the famous McGeehan brothers of California. It had virtually every comic book fanzine to be published prior to 1975. Many of these were very limited editions with print runs of 10 copies or less. These are really helpful in documenting the origins of organized comic book fandom. The earliest fanzines that were pivotal in generating an organized hobby appeared in 1960 through 1963. It is interesting to note that this was the also the beginning of the Marvel era. Obviously the dawn of Marvel's Silver Age set a stage that enhanced collector-to-collector communication which has led to the strong hobby that we enjoy today. Much of the collection was sold in 2010 and the remainder will be offered in 2011. Many of the titles were unknown to me prior to seeing the collection.

Original Art: We had nonstop interest all year from art collectors. Much Silver and Bronze Age art is being held tightly in private collections. Pieces that passed through our hands did exactly that…pass through our hands. Almost none of them were here long enough to receive an inventory number. We are happy to receive any comic book art, and even look forward to getting modern pieces. We did have a couple of Pulp magazine cover paintings that were here only temporarily early in the year. As we write this we have concluded a negotiation to acquire 47 pieces of art and really look forward to their arrival. As a general rule, covers dominate the value scale. Magazine, illustration and newspaper art also did very well during the year and we have leads on two collections that we hope to own shortly. We hope to hear from more art collectors in 2011.

Our Future: Considering some of the dismal forecasts for 2010, it was actually a really good year. Obviously many books had downturns in value but that is to be expected in any type of marketplace. We found out that comic books are not immune to economic market forces. The bright spot is that there is still rampant enthusiasm among collectors. I don't think any outside force will ever decrease the fun of collecting comic books. People love those comics, and so do I.

This year's market report is easy to write as there is a lot of consistency seen throughout all of the various collector markets. The really good material is stronger than ever and the prices realized reflect this. Action Comics #1 and Detective Comics #27 are truly scarce in high grade and the million dollar sales achieved will likely seem cheap in a short amount of time. However, it is currently difficult to get 50% of Guide values for more common, less desirable titles. Supply is plentiful and demand is low, so to extrapolate from the Action #1 and Detective #27 sales and compare these sales to the rest of the comic market as a whole is incorrect. However, this gap between high end and lower end material may evertially result in the lower end material looking more attractive due to the lower prices, so there is a good opportunity to purchase this material now while it is still possible to get it for well below Guide values.

New comic sales were exceptional for the second straight year with DC's Brightest Day and Batman: The Return Of Bruce Wayne leading the way. Marvel sales are strong but the local fan base is getting a little annoyed with the constant re-launching of titles and more and more X-books.

The rest of the new comics sales are splintered with Dark Horse, Image, IDW and Zenescope filling out the spectrum. With the debut of The Walking Dead TV series, Image has seen a moderate increase in new and back issue sales. The first six issues, though, are hard to find. Zenescope's Grimm Fairy Tales line of comics sell well. Early issues of the flagship series have become too pricey for most collectors. Broadsword's Tarot, Witch of the Black Rose, are impossible to keep in stock.

Collectively, the Batman titles sell extremely well as do the Green Lantern titles. The Superman titles sales are up over the previous year. Uncanny X-Men, X-Men Legacy, Wolverine and all of the Avengers series are strong sellers. Amazing Spider-Man is still a steady seller despite the screwy storylines Marvel has foisted on its readership. And surprisingly enough, Archie Comics sales are up with recent back issues doing moderately.

Our shop continues to be the only one in a relatively large area along the Alabama, Florida and Mississippi Gulf Coast. You have to go to Biloxi, Miss., or Pensacola, Fla., to find another shop. And ours is only part-time.

Comic-collecting supplies sell very well as do special orders for action figures, statues and T-shirts.

Newer back-issue sales of Spawn are very strong, mainly because they're still cheap. X-titles (including Wolverine) have flooded our back-issue warehouse. Thousands have walked in the door with former collectors dumping them for little or nothing. We sell these from 25¢ to $1.00 each. With the exception of a couple of certain issues (New Mutants #98, Uncanny X-Men #266), we are drowning in X-issues.

Lower grade DC and Marvel comics from the 1960s and 1970s do well when not priced over $5.00. We have a special section for these.

DC back issues, with the exception of Batman titles, are very slow. Silver Age Batman and Detective are strong movers while Amazing Spider-Man is a distant second for Marvel. Low-grade early issues do a little better.

As usual, CGC comics are almost impossible to sell as well as any comic over the $200.00 mark. Mobile is a very tough market when trying to sell comics in this price range. Golden Age comics can take a while to move. Bronze Age sales are perking up for DC and Marvel, mainly because they are still cheap. There has been more interest in Gold Key's Magnus, Robot Fighter of the 1960s.

The Conan black and white magazines sell extremely well but only if they are not priced over $2.00 each. The EC horror and science fiction reprints still sell but are harder to come across.

Miscellaneous horror and science fiction comics from the 1950s (DC and Atlas) sell moderately but only if the price is right. Low-grade issues sell better because the pricing. Classics Illustrated still has an audience with us, regardless of the printing. The 1950s Dell Comics, even at more than 50-percent off, just gather dust and space.

We have abandoned trying to sell comics on eBay. Too many people have no idea how to grade or market comics. However, those who do, make it a great market for bargains on older issues. Heritage Sunday Night Auctions have been a gold mine this year with lots of groups being won well under Guide prices even with the buyer's premium and shipping.

Chicago Wizard-World: The Chicago Wizard-World convention was again fantastic with more dealers and bargains than we could count. Harley Yee (one of the best in the business) as usual, had a great selection of top Golden Age and Silver Age comics as did Metropolis Comics. Vincent Zurzolo and the gang had a great display. While there were a lot more celebrities this year, the selection of comics was terrific.

I once remember my father walking into my bedroom when I was 12 years old or so, asking what I was doing. "I just bought a perfect mint copy of Incredible Hulk #181 and I'm trying to find a mylar bag for it." My father, who didn't understand this hobby before (and still doesn't I guess) asked me what I paid for it. "$25.00 (this was 1983)"..."WHAT? $25.00 for ONE comic? Better you should put that $25.00 in the bank...in 20 years time, the interest accumulated would turn that into $500.00 at least." I tried to explain the significance of the book and the condition, and that in perhaps in 1 year's time I could at least double that investment. "No one except for you would pay that kind of money." Twenty plus years later, I retell that story to him and show him a CGC copy in 9.9 sells for an astonishing $20,000+. "I guess you showed me..."

So does that mean that comic books are solid investments? That you should clear out your bank account and take that extra $50,000 from your 2% annual savings account and put it into some Hulk #181s or X-Men #94s? Sell that lakefront property that's probably worth only half of what you paid for it 4 years ago, and try to purchase an Action #1? Sure...and while you're at it, see if you can get some of "them thar' magic beans" too. Maybe they can lead you to the goose that lays golden eggs. People who are making their money now within this hobby/industry are the ones who took a chance and bought that copy of Flash Comics #1 for $200.00 30 years ago and sold it for $400,000+. How long until that copy goes for $410,000? Five, ten years from now? And who's to say that prices won't fall? Hard to believe? The Wall Street Journal had an article on the rising collectible prices on comics. They placed it on par almost with the housing crisis.

I have people who come into my shop every day...EVERY DAY...asking for a comic that will make them money in a year or two. They are normally disappointed in my answer that the industry does not work like that, and they think I dont want to share my "secrets". Fine. Here is (one of) my secrets: don't invest in something that you have absolutely NO knowledge about. If you still persist, if you still want to make your "fortune" in the comic market, then for G-d's sake...DO YOUR RESEARCH!

OK...enough with the sermon. On to the market report...

New Comics: In general a very topsy turvey market. Comics that we used to order 100 copies of, now MAYBE 1/2. There are many Marvel & DC comics that we are down to ordering single digits of (ie: Mighty Crusaders 4 copies, Thor: Mighty Avenger 5 copies, etc). This is due in part to TWO problems. 1) TOO MANY comics being published. We only need ONE Thor title! We only need ONE Justice Society title! People are so confused by all of the spin off titles, many people drop the character altogether. Besides, with the economy getting worse (NOT better as the media states), more people are dropping books left and right due to too many titles and, of course, 2) EXPENSIVE COVER PRICE! $2.99 For a new comic seems to be an average acceptable limit. $3.25-3.50 kind of pushes the envelope...$3.99 makes it difficult to reach into the wallet. I have one customer who bought EVERY title on the rack. After the price jump he scaled back to maybe 1/2. I understand print cost is rising, but a full $1.00 (thats over a 30% price hike) does not seem like a viable option. DC just announced that they are lowering their cover prices back down to $2.99 (for their REGULAR titles), but is it too little, too late? Guess we'll see in a few months.

DC Comics: By far, Green Lantern has been leading the pack. Ever since Blackest Night, the popularity of the regular series, as well as Green Lantern Corps and Emerald Warriors, has been overwhelmingly popular. So too has the sequel Brightest Day. Many of the spin-offs to Brightest Day have been doing well also. Specificaly Birds of Prey, Flash, and Justice League: Generation Lost. All three titles have done exceedingly well.

Batman and Robin by Grant Morrison has also been doing very well sales wise, outselling the regular Batman series by 30%. Don't expect this to last however when Morrison is gone from the book...only to start the laughable Batman, Inc. ongoing series. Really? You are taking a character, shrouded in mystery, who is regarded, at best, an urban legend, and then you're going to GLOBALIZE him? On the positive side, there is a big buzz regarding David Finch's new Dark Knight series. I for one am looking very forward to it, as a regard Finch as one of my favorite modern day artists. On the opposite end, although Neal Adams is my all time favorite artist on Batman, I find Batman: Odyssey absolutely unreadable. Good thing that the artwork is so pretty. It sells better than most Batman mini series, but, in my opinion it would sell better if the story was better.

Superman and Wonder Woman both got shots in the arm as J. Michael Strazcinski (JMS) began his writing on each book. However, Superman has dropped in sales yet again (He's just going to walk the USA? Doesn't seem very "Super" to me), and Wonder Woman, although still very good in sales at the moment, is confusing not only many readers, but myself as well. Now it has been announced that JMS is leaving both titles to do more Graphic novel work for DC, specificaly a sequel to the hit Superman: Earth One original hardcover graphic novel. Earth One Superman was enjoyable, but is it really something that can be set to a sequel?

My sleeper pick this year is THUNDER Agents. This title will do well, not because of the history of the characters (which not many collectors know about), but because it is being written by comic's newest sensation, Nick Spencer, from Image's Morning Glories. The 1st issue was a complete sell out for us, and many people are really hot for the reorder. I can see this being a $10.00 comic soon IF the demand keeps up.

The Vertigo line needs a hit. Fables, although still a great book, has just about outstayed its welcome. Probably the best seller of this line (at least at our shop), it, by far, outsells ANY Vertigo title. Scalped and Unwritten, sell well, but NOTHING like previous comics such as Preacher or Sandman (although, as TPBs go, Scalped sells better than Fables trades ...go figure). Titles that were highly lauded as the "next big thing" have either languished in sales, or have been canceled. The approach of single one shot hardcovers have been accepted as a "ho-hum". Even American Vampire, which did well when Stephen King was one of the writers, dropped dramaticaly when King left the book (almost a 75% drop!!!). At least I will give credit to DC/Vertigo for trying something different. How To Understand Israel In 60 Days Or Less HC was a great example of how outside the box Vertigo can be...now if only we could sell more.

Marvel Comics: Avengers (the NEWER series...NOT to be confused with New Avengers) leads the pack for most ordered Marvel series for us. Secret Avengers is second (although a DISTANT second), and can anyone tell me why New Avengers is still being published? This title is an oxymoron, as there is ALREADY a NEW Avengers book. It doesn't make sense (except for a sales point explanation...it's still Bendis). Captain America (despite being a $3.99 book now), still has a steady readership, as does Amazing Spider-Man, Thor, and all of the core books. Any spin-off, mini series, or one-shot fodder are treated as such and can be found cluttering up the rack. For example, Thor sells a respectable 50-60 copies for us. The 2,678,087 mini series that follow, sell anywhere from a high of 20 copies (For Asgard) to a low of 5 (Mighty Avenger). The readers have spoken...they just want ONE title, with maybe ONE HIGH CALIBER mini or one shot per month.

Even the great Deadpool line has been taking a hit. Yes, I know he is Marvel's second most popular character right now (Wolverine is still first), but we do not need 2 Deadpool titles per week. It's overkill. Especially for a character who does not yet have his own film franchise...YET.

Marvel's ICON line is a semi-hit. Taking the once independent comics done by previous indy writers and making them Marvel titles...BRILLIANT! Casanova by Matt Fraction is enjoying a second life, however, David Mack's Kabuki just sits. Even the once-powerful, do-no-wrong Brian Bendis's comic Powers sells a small fraction of its previous run. However, Scarlet (Bendis's new series) is selling pre-Image power numbers (which is a good thing), and showcases Bendis's abilities as a cutting edge writer again. Mark Millar's Kick Ass 2, Nemesis, and Superior are ALL triple digit sellers...when they are on time. There should NOT be a 4 month gap between issues...EVER!

Marvel's MAX line has some decent books out also. Deadpool Max hit the ground running and seems poised to stay for awhile. Punisher MAX, by far my favorite comic is also selling well (Jason Aaron's rendition of this character and his cast is even better than Garth Ennis's rendition). The problem with this line, is that there are basically only a few titles under this imprint. This is one of the few exceptions where I think that there should be MORE titles from this line.

Image Comics: The Walking Dead still sells very high here. Even the TPBs, which are one of the few to sell in the double digits. The anticipation of the AMC TV series swelled up the demand even further. Invincible (by same writer Robert Kirkman) is a far distant second, selling maybe 1/3 the copies of Walking Dead. We sold a first print #1 back in April for an astonishing $300... and about 3 weeks later prices on-line were $400-500! Chew (which is poised to be a new TV series) has dropped slightly in readership, but the TPBs more than make up for it. Early back issues have been selling consistantly high, with a Chew #1 1st print going for $100.00!

Speaking of Chew, there has been a lot of mass speculation in many Image titles recently...almost like it was back in the early 1990s. Morning Glories and Skull Kickers have both been speculated on and high end back issues (Morning Glories #1) have been sold as high as $50.00. Even the one shot Sea Bear & Grizzly Shark (a drop dead funny comic) had been speculated on and sold as high as $30.00 (we sold it on eBay for that amount). So what is going on with all of the speculating with Image comics all of a sudden? Two trains of thought: 1) Quality of said titles are VERY high. Word of mouth on these new Image titles have got collectors wanting to try something out of the norm, and 2) Print runs of these books are exceptionaly LOW. Skull Kickers #1 had about a 3,000 1st print run. That's approximately ONE per shop on the average.

Green Lantern (#29 SDCC edition shown) is leading the pack of current DC titles.

Independents: IDW has come out with some unlikely hits. The Last Unicorn sold better than some Marvel and DC comics. The Star Trek and Angel titles have stayed steady, but the break out title from IDW is True Blood. We ordered very heavy on this title, and were NOT disappointed. Back issue sales of #1 have gone as high as $10.00 and is already into a 4th print. Hopefuly, IDW can get the license to other high profile cable series. Dexter would be a natural! At the same time, why isn't anyone doing any of the Adult Swim properties?

Dynamite Comics best selling title is The Boys. Constantly consistent in its readership and sales, and that also includes the TPBs The license for Green Hornet must be very expensive, because there are just WAY too many titles for this character. The only one that sells well is Kevin Smith's Green Hornet and, to a lesser extent, Year One. However, the rest just languish. Warlord of Mars has some promise as the first issue sold respectively well, but Last Phantom just sat. I also do not think it was a good idea to buy the Dabel Bros. properties out, as none of them are selling (and by none, I mean NONE).

BOOM! has renewed my faith in the comic companies again, as they have aggressively been touting their kids comics. Mostly all Disney properties, but as of now, parents have been coming in every Saturday to grab a few for their children. But with the good comes the bad. Stan Lee's Weapon Zero is aptly named. Lee might have wowed the comic community 50 years ago, but his ideas today seem trite and uninspired. Even with other people writing and fleshing out the characters, no one seems to care.

It's my sincere pleasure to submit a report for The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide this year. As this is my first report following a career of collecting and dealing on both coasts and spanning more than 25 years, I humbly add my comments and hope that I can add a few interesting observations. Though I don't own a storefront shop, I am active in buying and selling comics in the Northwest and I also spend a fair amount of time watching, buying and selling comics on ComicLink, ComicConnect, Heritage, and, especially, eBay.

As we enter 2011, we face a set of new challenges and innovations in our hobby, ranging from the advent of online comics to the continuing explosive growth of high-grade CGC keys, all coupled to an economy and political climate that is, at best, uncertain.

Online comics, without question, appear to be the wave of the future. I recently attended an art show featuring the private original comic art collection of Mike Richardson, the founder of Dark Horse Comics, in Milwaukee, Oregon where he repeatedly stressed the importance of finding a way to compete in the emerging market of online comics. My sense of online comics is that they will never be able to compete with the experience of reading a paper comic. But I'm also a 42 year-old guy who doesn't own a smart phone and can just barely send a text message. It's hard to say, but I wouldn't be surprised if we see some big changes over the next few years in terms of a new readership emerging. How will it affect our hobby of collecting comics? Really, the important question here seems to be - Will there be another generation that falls in love with old paper? Will they take over the reigns and continue to drive sales and interest in our old, beautiful comic books? Only time will tell.

Clearly, for now, the interest in old comics is strong enough as they continue to sell at record prices. But the world of comic collecting now mirrors the population of our country as a whole. Here we have a fraction of collectors with money to spend on the eye-popping gems and the rest who have little surplus cash for comics. The good news here is that there are any number of ways for the have-nots to get their comic fix for little or no money. If you're just interested in reading, head on over to the library and take your pick of trade paperbacks. If you're interested in dealing, troll Craigslist. This free website has become a major source of comics over the past few years. For those willing to put in the time, Craiglist is a great source of cheap comics and a place where you can, occasionally, find a fantastic deal. Be prepared, however. Competition for comics via Craislist has recently increased to frenzied levels with so many people out of work and looking to turn a quick buck by being first at the sale so they can buy in bulk and flip them on eBay. What do I mean by "frenzied"? Here's a quick story: At one sale this past summer, I picked up a handful of '50s Dell Westerns from under a stack of Life magazines and started to flip through them, excited by what I might find. From across the room, a middle-aged woman yelped, "I'm buying all the old comics!" She came rushing over, plucked the books from my hands, and went to the register where the home-owner confirmed that he'd made a deal with her for every comic in the house. When I asked if I could just look at them, she said no then confirmed that she intended to sell the books on eBay and informed me that if I was interested in buying them from her, that's where I'd find them within a day or two.

Despite that example, the good news for comic buyers during this recession continues to be that you can find some fantastic deals on comics if you're willing to put the time in. Even with original owner '40s and '50s collections, sadly, becoming a thing of the past, there is no shortage of old comics available, especially on eBay which I consider to be the premier marketplace. Love it or hate it, eBay continues to define the market with its thousands of comic listings on any given day. It's a fun and mostly fair place to pursue collecting, and has become the true bellweather for the hobby.

Golden Age: '40s and '50s comics of every stripe are interesting to someone. It's simply an issue of supply and demand. So when it comes to Timely, DC, pre-code horror, WWII covers, good girl art, pedigree comics, artists like Frazetta, Wolverton, Baker and anything strange, rare, and high-grade, the Guide typically is just that - a guide. I've watched numerous un-slabbed books go for crazy multiples of Guide simply because those comics rarely make it to market and when they're presented as "attic-finds" with no reserve in what looks to be VG condition, all bets are off. Try winning an eBay auction for Weird Mysteries #5, Mister Mystery #12, or any USA Comic with a Schomburg cover in decent shape. In terms of selling Golden Age non-key comics, be prepared to take in around 30% of Guide or less on non-superhero material in mid to low grade. Things do sell, but it's an unpredictable market and definitely seems more tentative than years past.

The top Atom-Age horror comics, most issues of Weird Mysteries, Weird Tales of the Future, Mister Mystery, and Menace seem a little undervalued with the key covers by Wolverton and Baily (Mister Mystery #12, Weird Mysteries #3 and #5 and all the Wolverton covers from Weird Tales of the Future typically sell at multiples of Guide.) Same with early Thing! Ditko covers.

Silver Age: Spidey is still the king. So engrained in our culture is Spider-Man that he is one of the characters, along with Barney and Mickey Mouse, that my 2-year-old daughter recognizes and points out whenever she sees him. But if he is the king, his court includes all the usual suspects – Hulk, Iron Man, Thor, Daredevil, X-Men and The Avengers as well as the DC counterparts led by Batman and Green Lantern. Other DC comics, though incredibly cool and, actually, in many cases, harder to find, still haven't found the same sort of reliable fan-base as the big Marvel boys. I love those random copies of Anthro and The Spectre, and the tales of The Legion in Adventure, but sometimes, I have a hard time selling them.

By the time these words are in print, we'll be living in a whole new world of Super-Hero films including Thor, Captain America, and Green Lantern. Hopefully, the influence of these blockbusters will continue to generate interest in the characters but my feeling is that once the movies have come and gone, those titles will cool as people look to the next big thing.

Bronze Age: These are the books that I read as a kid growing up and they are still my favorites. Non-key high-grade Bronze sells reliably but, again, it's not unusual to see these books sell for considerably less than guide. As more and more '70s comics are discovered, I don't expect this trend to change. For the next generation of collectors, the quest for a nice copy of Hulk #181, Green Lantern #76, X-Men #94, and House of Secrets #92 is what I imagine when I think about the '80s and what it must have been like to try and find books like Amazing Fantasy #15 or Brave and the Bold #28. Anyone have a time machine I can borrow for a day or two?

The Northwest Convention Scene: The Portland Comic Show continues to be a fun one-day show and something to look forward to in the Spring and Fall with a focus on old comics and a ton of new-issue bargain hunters on the prowl for the gem lost in the 3-for-a-dollar box. The Emerald City Comicon, on the other hand, has become a huge destination show for collectors and dealers from all over the country. Thanks to Jim Demonakos, this show featured Stan Lee and Leonard Nimoy as guests in 2010 and, despite moving into a larger venue in Seattle's Convention Center, was so crowded at one point that you literally couldn't move in certain areas of the room. Dealers reported good sales and next year's show promises to be even better as it moves from 2 to 3 days. Thanks to Jim and his team for creating the premiere Northwest comic event.

Notable comics bought and sold this year include:
Amazing Fantasy #15 CGC 4.5 $7,600
Amazing Fantasy #15 CGC 5.5 $10,500
Avengers #1 CGC 4.5 Signature Series (Stan Lee) $1,430
Avengers #1 VG $735
Brave and the Bold #28 VG $535
Captain America Comics #14 VG $580
Captain America Comics #46 VG $2,800
Daredevil #1 CGC 7.5 Signature Series (Stan Lee) $2,600
Mister Mystery #12 VG+ $920
Showcase #22 VG+ $1,000
Thunda #1 GD/VG $170
Weird Tales of the Future #5 VG $356
Young Allies #9 FN- $349

I've noted in many closing reports that advisors often say, "Buy what you love," and while that is certainly true, I've also seen that CGC has, essentially, turned the high-end 9.2 and over category of key comics, into a financial market. I made two major purchases this year acting as, essentially, a broker for buyers who had no love for comics. In both situations, it was all about the investment. While I was happy to help, it just goes to show how our hobby has evolved from the days of Good, Fine or Mint to CGC 9.4 Signature Series.

So in closing, I will echo my fellows and say, definitely, buy what you love . . . but I'll add that, if you can afford it, it's probably not a bad idea to buy a CGC'd copy of Amazing Fantasy #15 either. Good luck in 2011.

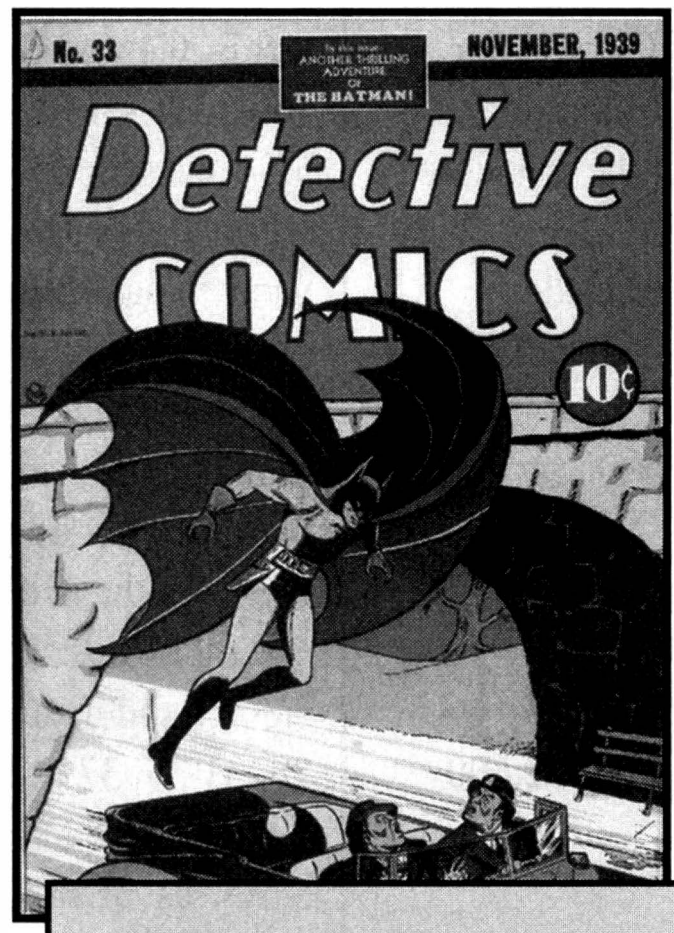
The big news at the time of this writing is the continued (but slow) economic recovery and unprecedented change in Egypt. In the hobby, the big news was that individual comic book sales were reported to have topped $1 Million. And, a very positive trend is that comic book heroes are enjoying greater Silver Screen exposure. Over the next three years, more than a dozen such films are slated to be released, including another installment of both Superman and the Dark Knight, the Avengers, Captain America, Thor and Green Lantern. I think this is tremendously positive, as many of these heroes will be new to mainstream audiences, potentially drawing more people into the collecting aspect of our hobby. Finally, as a general statement, I think 2010 was a good year in the hobby, especially for the collector.



Availability: Overall, there was a lot of Golden Age material for sale. Very little of it, however, was comprised of the choice early issues from the more popular titles, although this wasn't readily obvious. What I mean is that at any given time you could have bought an Action #7, a Detective #31, a Green Lantern #1 or a Marvel #1, so it appeared that there were many of these books in the marketplace. But the fact is, the vast majority of these books, including Action #7 (CGC 2.0 – 4.0), Detective #29 (2.5 – 5.0), #31 (5.0 and 5.5) and #35 (2.5 – 4.0), Green Lantern #1 (9.0 and 7.0), Young Allies #1 (9.0) Captain America #1 and others (too many to name) that were for sale in 2010 were the exact same copies that had been cycling through the hobby over and over again for the past few years. Take those copies out of the picture, and there weren't very many other copies of these types of books around. Similarly, books that remained scarce in the marketplace included More Fun (except #54, 59 and 67), Jackpot (almost all), Pep #22 – 44, Fantastic (most) and many of the Raboy *Master*s (especially #24, 26-28, 31-35, 37 and 40 – which feature some of the very best WWII covers ever produced). And, unlike books from the Silver Age or Bronze Age, this scarcity statement about very early Golden Age is not qualified by availability in a given grade. With that said, most post-1941 Golden Age books were generally available. Finally, locating books in nice shape from the late 1940s – early 1950s also remained a challenge. Just try putting together a nice run of *Detective*s from this era or a run of Perfect Crime with an average grade above Fine.

Market Performance: I think it's fair to say that the hobby slightly resembled the villain Two-Face, in that it was primarily comprised of two overlapping, but mostly discrete personalities. And, market performance was somewhat dependent on "personality." On one side of the coin, there are the "blue chip" titles, comprised of books with characters that have mass appeal because they've transcended into Pop Culture. These titles consistently draw the most interest and are the best performers. On the other side of the coin, there are titles, many of which are very popular within the hobby and often do very well, but that don't, relatively speaking, command the same widespread interest level. The line between these two categories is not perfectly clear, as this second category comprises many keys (like More Fun #52 and 53, Adventure #40 and 73, etc.) and eye-candy books (like Adventure #79, More Fun #65, All-Select #1, Mask #1, etc.) that all do well. In terms of eye-candy books, I've found a growing interest in books with classic WWII covers. Even from a personal perspective, I've had more dealer requests this year than any other to sell (and at hefty prices) many of my WWII cover books (like National #7, most all *Master*s between #21 – 45, Action #19, 40, 43, Adventure #79, More Fun #72 and 75, Daredevil Battles Hitler, Captain Marvel Jr. #4 and 13, Pep #20 and 34, Real Life #3, etc.).

In terms of how Golden Age books sold in 2010, some set record high prices. In fact, when a collectible grade copy of any early Action with a Superman cover or any pre-Robin Detective with a Batman cover came to market, there was a "buzz." And that "buzz" often resulted in over-Guide prices being paid. As a general observation, however, there was a lot of price resistance and, except in rare cases, that "buzz" didn't necessarily equate to the same Guide multiples being paid as in the past. Furthermore, in many cases, quality books sold for less in 2010 than they did when these exact copies were sold some 3 – 6 years ago. At first blush, this would seem to defy the laws of supply and demand, given that many Golden Age books remained scarce. For instance, Suspense Comics, as a title, is quite scarce and virtually all issues feature a classic cover. Yet when several Edgar Church copies from this title were offered in 2009, each sold for far less than when last offered. This trend continued in 2010, as many titles, including Wings, Star-Spangled, All-Select, All Star (except for #3, 8, and 33) etc. performed similarly. I've also observed that, with ever-increasing prices, more people have curtailed collecting uber high-grade run books (even blue chips) as well as titles that feature forgotten characters.

There's a buzz when pre-Robin Detective Comics issues (#33 shown) come to market.

I think this is a function of several factors – first, conservative spending in a tough economy. Second, prudent purchasing, as limited funds and ever-increasing prices mean people are forced to make tough decisions. Third, the sheer volume of Golden Age material flooding the market, especially by the various auction entities, has caused an over-saturation of material relative to available disposable income being allocated toward the hobby. This last factor has been present for some time, but coupled with a tough economy, its ramifications are now being felt. Given these factors, to conclude that scarcity of a given book should determine its price would misconstrue the laws of supply and demand, as the data would suggest something different – general availability of most material outpaced demand.

From a collector's perspective, this is opportunity knocking, as more has become affordable. I bought several books I've been hunting for years, including a very nice, white-paged copy of Action #12 for a very reasonable price. I even completed my Captain Marvel Jr. trilogy origin, by purchasing a Whiz #25, which is superior (and at a lower price) to another copy that a New York dealer has had for sale for years at a non-negotiable static pre-recession price. And, as indicated above, discriminating purchasing has not affected demand, especially for the cream, while lower grade Golden Age books were, once again, recession-proof. Indeed, blue chips keys were on-fire, almost regardless of grade (even single folios from key *Action*s and *Detective*s do well!). As such, I continue to believe that Golden Age is still a rock-solid segment and a prime area not only for collecting but also investing.

With respect to the Bronze Age, this era offers a ton of value for the collector. It showcases some of the finest talent – like Wrightson, Steranko, J. Buscema, Adams, Aparo, Romita and Byrne – and most any book from this era can be acquired, even if on a budget. And, unlike Golden Age, if you're a grade collector, you can locate virtually any book from this era in grade without much difficulty. For the Bronze Age high-grade collector, the challenge is in knowing what price to pay. I believe the guiding (general) principle is that there is nothing rare or unique. I reported 4 years ago that most highly collected books sold at "ridiculous" prices in any grade above 9.4, as many hobbyists thought books in 9.6 and 9.8 were uncommon or rare. This is no longer the case. The new standard for most Bronze Age books is 9.8. And, 9.8s are no longer unique, even for almost all keys (as of this writing, even the coveted Green Lantern #76 has 26 copies graded above 9.4). Given this dynamic, demand for "the best" likely will mean an increasing number of 9.8s and expect the number of 9.9s to increase, in turn redefining the Guide multiples at which books in 9.6 and 9.8 should be purchased.

So 2010 provided some interesting dynamics. The economic climate generally caused sale prices to flatten, yet sales volume (from $ - $$$$ books) confirmed a broad spectrum of interest, an indicator of continued stability and interest. With respect to Golden Age, some books proved to remain in extreme demand and continued to sell at record-setting prices, while those that were not moved quite well so long as priced right. Top-tier Bronze Age continued to excel. And, while dealers heavily discounted most Bronze Age in order to sell it, the lower prices for the more common material meant hobbyists could more easily quench their collecting thirst. Finally, I owe Malama Miller a big thank you for being my original partner in (collecting) crime, having introduced me to the world of comic books all those years ago. If you'd like to contact me to discuss comic books, I'd be happy to hear from you at pbilelis@yahoo.com. Good luck hunting in 2011.

This year, I decided to focus on a rather new aspect of our hobby: Trade paperbacks.

Trade paperbacks, or TPBs, as they are most commonly known, have been around for a long, long time, dating all the way back to the Fireside reprint volumes of Marvel and DC comics that started in the mid-1970s and ran up until around 1984's X-Men: Dark Phoenix Saga, which was published by Marvel, but still carried the listings for all the Fireside Marvels that had been published.

Dave Sim was one of the early TPB pioneers with his Swords of Cerebus collections and, later on, his phone book-format TPBs of the entire Cerebus run. Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles collections from First Comics of the Mirage series were published, as well as a TMNT Collected volume (which is highly-sought-after now and costs anywhere from $250-$1,000).

From there, Marvel published a few trade paperback collections here and there, but it wasn't until DC's Batman: The Dark Knight Returns was published in two TPBs (and in hardcover) -- one a Warner bookstore edition and another for the new direct market -- that trade paperbacks really started to catch on. From that point, we got Watchmen, John Byrne's Man of Steel, Batman: A Death in the Family, Justice League: A New Beginning and many others.

Alan Moore's Saga of the Swamp Thing reprints in trade paperback started with his first arc on the series and then his second and it was just a few years before his entire run was collected. By that time, the full run of Sandman was being collected by DC.

Marvel published a lot of its more important stories in trade paperback, including Thing: Project Pegasus, Hawkeye, Machine Man by Barry Windsor-Smith, Iron Man: Demon in a Bottle (which was first called "The Power of Iron Man"), New Mutants: Demon Bear and others.

In the 1990s, reprinting stories in the trade paperback format became commonplace and both Marvel and DC started churning out the TPBs, as did Dark Horse, Malibu and Valiant and many of the independent companies also produced reprint tomes.

As the newsstand market diminished and the direct market took over by the late 1990s, comic book companies began to realize that there was a new market that was still untapped -- the bookstores. If comic companies could get their publications into bookstores, that would open up a whole new revenue stream. Comic writers and artists also liked the revenue from royalties, and getting their product into the hands of the bookstore crowd meant more money. So, most every writer started writing for the trade, which meant decompressed storytelling. Where a single story could have fit into a single issue of Amazing Spider-Man, now it was stretched out to fit a four-issue arc, which made for a really nice trade paperback. And that TPB was sold to bookstores as a "graphic novel," which, in more recent years, even got its own aisle in many of the larger bookseller chains like Books-A-Million and Borders. (I'm not even going to discuss Manga here, because that would take way too many pages).

As the bookstore market grew, companies like DC and Marvel decided to put nearly EVERYTHING into TPB.
But, not everything published as a TPB has a print run like Watchmen, which has been printed consistently since 1987 in TPB and hardcover and Absolute Editions and ...

We all know comic book collectors love rarities. We search out the Gerber Photo Journals for rare 8s and 9s and pay big money for 10s when we can find them. Now, we're paying big bucks for TPBs, too.

Some TPBs are very rare (Marvel's Master of Kung Fu Max TPB is extremely hard to find), while others are readily available whenever you want to click on eBay or any comic shop web site.

During the early 2000s, Miracleman became white hot. Single issues were selling for multiples of cover and the rarer, later issues were selling upwards of $100 for high-grade copies. The Miracleman Eclipse Comics trade paperbacks were also selling well. Miracleman TPB volumes 1-2 were selling for around $50-$75 for nice copies, while volume 3, Olympus, was selling for around $150. I bought my first copy -- a VG -- from S&G Collectibles in Sevierville, Tenn., in 2001 for $162 and tax because I wanted very badly to read the rest of the Alan Moore run and I knew the TPB was very hard to find at the time. From then on, I've kept a close eye on many of the rarer TPBs: Like Broadway Comics' Fatale: Inherit the Earth, which sells for around $50 in TPB and is almost never seen in hardcover. Like Batman: Prodigy, which sells regularly for around $35-$50, because of its Nightwing-centric storyline.
Like the Thanos TPBs by Jim Starlin and Keith Giffen, which all sell for upwards of $50 each or more if a bidding war ensues on eBay.

In early 2011, I was completely surprised by a sale on eBay of a trade paperback I had been buying regularly for under $20. A first print Squadron Supreme, which contains writer Mark Gruenwald's ashes in the ink, sold on eBay for $612 plus tax. Yes, you read that right -- $612 for a Squadron Supreme trade paperback! The entire 12-issue series sells as cheap as $10 in some places and the TPB sold for $612.

Many of today's TPBs are printed to order and don't have very high print runs, which leads to collectors seeking these out and paying high prices to own copies. One artist told me that the trade paperback of a series he drew was so rare the company publishing it didn't even send him a copy.

The rarity of some TPBs causes them to skyrocket in price, especially if its a TPB of one of the more popular characters, like the Kyle Rayner Green Lantern, whose trade paperbacks all sell for above cover price. Green Lantern: The Power of Ion is a $100 TPB when it pops up and many of the other Rayner GL trades sell for around $30 each.

The Wally West Flash trade paperbacks that reprint stories written by Geoff Johns all sell for $25-$50 each.

VALIANT trade paperbacks, such as the two Magnus Robot Fighter and two Solar TPBs are expensive, ranging from $35-$40 each and the Solar hardcover sells for over $100 when it pops up for sale.

Malibu's Ultraverse, which was sold to Marvel and hasn't been seen since, published three trade paperbacks of Prime, The Strangers and the Marvel crossover called Godwheel, and those are normally priced around $20 each. Not bad for companies that have been out of business since the 1990s!

Nowadays, almost as soon as TPBs go out of print, they go up in value, like the Batgirl Rising trade paperback that has cover price of $17.99, but sells for $35-$40. All because dealers can tag it as "OOP," which means it is out of print. The Marvel Omnibus line of oversized hardcover collections also has some rarities, like the Jack Kirby Eternals which sells for around $150 and Grant Morrison's New X-Men, which is an easy sale at $200. The Brian Michael Bendis Daredevil Omnibus HCs are in the $200-$250 range, as is the Garth Ennis Punisher and the Tomb of Dracula Volume 1. The Ed Brubaker Daredevil Vol. 1 sells for over $100 a copy, as copies of those TPBs that make up the Omnibus all sell for cover price or lower.

Imagine the thrill of seeing the original art for Amazing Fantasy #15.

The Gotham Central HC line is reprinting the Gotham Central comic series, which was first reprinted as trade paperbacks. Volume 1 of the hardcover Gotham Centrals is an easy sale at $90, which is three times its cover price. Many of the Nightwing trade paperbacks are also high-dollar items, selling for around $30-$50 for the rare volumes.

This is an ever-growing corner of the comic collecting hobby. Many collectors dismiss TPBs and HCs as merely reprints. But, for those of us in the know, we are keeping our eyes on how much growth back issue sales of TPBs and hardcovers have made in the last few years and we understand that as collectors try to complete their collections, they will need these and will have to pay larger sums of cash to put these into their longboxes.

Comic Book Collecting Association
Steve Zarelli, CBCA President

It's hard to believe time has passed so quickly, but February marked the first anniversary of the Comic Book Collecting Association. While every other major collecting hobby such as coin collecting, autograph collecting and book collecting has at least one – and often several – collecting associations, the CBCA is the only such group representing comic book collectors, dealers and enthusiasts. Among our members are collectors of all genres, prominent dealers and industry pros.

Our mission is simple -- promote the comic book art form and hobby of comic book collecting by encouraging fellowship among comic book enthusiasts, providing information and education to the public, and helping to facilitate the buying, selling, and trading of comic books and related material in an environment of trustworthiness and integrity. Our growing numbers demonstrate that our message has resonated with many members of the hobby.

Staying true to our mission of Fellowship, Education and Ethics, we'd like to highlight some of our accomplishments and successes in year one:

- We published four editions of our newsletter, The Comic Book Quarterly
- We hosted a website and forum, which received over a quarter-million hits per month in 2010 (comiccollecting.org)
- The CBCA sponsored an Amateur Art Contest
- The group hosted a dinner at the New York Comic Con
- We sponsored a giveaway of one free year of GPAnalysis to a lucky member
- We coordinated a viewing of the Amazing Fantasy #15 art that was attended by members and industry pros
- We established a member discount to Collectibles Insurance Services as well as to Susan Cicconi's Restoration Lab
- The CBCA was sought by the media to comment on several high profile comic-related stories.

But, our work has just begun. Looking forward to 2011, our plans include:

- Offering an online grading guide
- Adding more educational content to our website
- Sponsoring a scientific laboratory study on the effects of pressing on paper
- Hosting member events, seminars, adding more member discounts and much more...

We can only do this with the support of the community and a robust membership. If you are not a member, we ask you to consider joining and becoming engaged in the association. As we always say in our emails and newsletters, your feedback and input is greatly appreciated and essential to our success.

Our hobby is evolving every day and we have great optimism for the art form we all love. Working together, we can all contribute toward a healthy and vibrant hobby that will continue to thrive for generations to come.

The World economy is still struggling… yet here, in this "Microcosm of Coolness" known as Comic Dealing and Collecting, our chosen hobby is alive and well. I, myself, have been buying (and selling) "with vigor" (to borrow an old J.F.K. expression).

Among our 2010 purchases by GDCOMICS are:

- Over $120,000 in 1960s Marvels (including comics from Fair/Poor to Very Fine, and better!
- Runs of 1950s – 1960s DCs (#1-up of Superboy, Jimmy Olsen, Lois Lane, Showcase, Green Lantern, Justice League, and many others…)
- Golden Age (early 1940s misc. publishers, #1s at 70% of Guide, runs of Shadow and Green Hornet at 60% of Guide, a wonderful collection of 1940s Weird, Wonderworld, etc… and much more!)
- Original Art: Everything from 1960s Marvel art to assorted 1980s DC and Marvel stuff and a stack of 1960s Millie the Model art!
- A Classics Comics collection
- 1,000+ Pre-Code, of every variety: Fiction House, Romance, Horror, Hero, War, etc!

Golden Age (1930s to 1955): I always enjoy buying these – from 'mainline to miscellaneous' – from Poor to Mint… truly, I do! I find that I've been fortunate to get in a few thousand of these "Goldy Oldies" this year, often paying 50%-70% Guide for them, even in lower grades. I was happy enough to get in Captain America's (Weird Tales) #73, paying near Guide for a GD/VG (3.0) copy. In fact, during the year, I've kept many Golden Age books for "meself" including: Dead Who Walk, Haunt of Fear #17 (with the three grisly ghouls on the cover), Crime Suspense #19 (Choking cover), All-Negro #1, Action #23 (1st Luthor with a beautiful, old-school Superman cover… timeless!), Weird #2-5 (low grade, but I love those "Weird" covers), several 1940s Timely superhero comics… and much, much more! Timelys are the best sellers, with Captain America leading the pack. Most go for over-Guide, and I pay for 'em accordingly, and quite happily.

Beautiful old-school Superman covers are irresistible. (Action Comics #23 shown)

DCs: It's been a while since I've had a run of More Fun Comics with The Spectre, and I'd love to get a set of 'em! (#52-107) Beautiful covers they are. Last year I bought a set of Action #89-299, plus about 40 earlier issues. These books sold well, and still do. In general, pre-code All Stars and titles with Batman, Superman, Flash, Green Lantern, and/or Wonder Woman still sell well enough and I always enjoy obtaining collections of those. Non-superhero Golden Age DCs (Western, Crime/Mystery, and especially Funny Animal) do not sell very well (though I'll buy them as part of a collection of oldies.)

Other Golden Age: In general, most late 1930s/early 1940s Superhero comics are decent sellers (although some titles, have lost some of their luster in recent years. Most Centaurs (Amazing-Man, Amazing Mystery Funnies, etc.) are still great sellers. Hangman Comics (MLJ Pub.), I haven't had in years, admittedly, because they're great books!

For Fiction House, *Planet*s sell well. Jumbo Comics sell fantastically from #1-10; #11-50 sell pretty well; #51-up sell OK. Jungle Comics sell, but not as well. Early Quality issues of all titles sell solidly and have great art, characters, etc. Middle and later 1940s Quality Comics sell fairly slowly, for the most part. MLJ are solid sellers for the most part, with great covers and "primitive art within". For Fox, Mystery Men, Weird, and Wonderworld are good sellers in all grades… and "cool to the eye". I love to buy misc. Golden Age; any size collection!

Silver Age: Early 1960s Marvels are the pillars of our industry in my experience - especially the #1 issues. They are, so-far, the best investment comics overall, with Amazing Fantasy #15, Fantastic Four #1, and Incredible Hulk #1 almost doubling in value in the Guide over the last two years (in Good, Very Good and Fine grades.

Marvels from mid-1960s to 1971: The main titles like Avengers, Captain America, Daredevil (to a certain extent), Fantastic Four, Hulk, Iron Man, and X-Men are solid sellers, and in our VG and better, sell quite well! Thor sells OK, and Strange Tales, Tales of Suspense, Tales to Astonish only sell well in nicer shape for us. Sgt. Fury, though a "fun-to-read" title, doesn't sell so well for us. But, I find that sellers are happier when I take "the good" AND the "not-so-good". Sets of 1960s Marvels (especially the better titles) sell well for me. I avidly buy them "a collection at a time".

1955 thru 1971 DCs (10¢ Cover Price): In our VG and better, Superhero 10¢ cover DCs sell quite well, especially the early Showcase and Brave and the Bold, and 10¢-c Batman comics. Also, the Flash #105 and Green Lantern #1 are solid sellers. In GD/VG and less, they sell "variably"… they can take quite a while to move (except for Showcase #4 and #24, which move well in all grades). Earlier Mystery In Space and Strange Adventures move well, as do Our Army at War.

DCs (12¢-15¢ Cover Price): If they are in our nice VG-/VG and better, I can usually move them pretty well, especially in "Sets-By-Title". I had several runs of VG-/VG and better DCs, ranging from Green Lantern to Jimmy Olsen… every one of those sets, sold! I buy these nicer DC collections avidly!

For GD/VG and lower grades, they mostly don't sell well, so I often discount them 20%-33% or more, and even then, "they ain't swift"! Batman issues sell better than most and Green Lantern #76 is an instant seller!

Archie, Harvey, Dell and Gold Key sell slowly for me (though I personally enjoy reading Archie comics to this day!)

1970s (Bronze-Age): Comics from this era have been under-valued for decades now. Price-wise, they are starting to have their day. I have sold over 10,000 "better 1970s" to happy comic dealers, both here and overseas, in the last year. Dealers and collectors especially like them in 'nice, clean shape', which is our VG and better. Some of the best 1970s comics are Defenders #1-10; Marvel Team-Up #1-10; Ghost Rider #1; Tomb of Dracula (a "great read with great art"); early 1970s Batman and Detective; Amazing Spider-Man #100-150; X-Men #94-142, plus Giant-Size X-Men #1; Hulk #121-182; Iron Man #60 and earlier; Avengers #100-150; and Fantastic Four #112.

1980s - 2000s: We at GDCOMICS have been paying more attention to this era. My able crew has been putting more and more of them in order. Generally speaking, our policy is to charge 75¢-$1.00 for most comics in nice shape that are $4 and less in NM- Overstreet.

For more expensive 1980s thru 2000s, we generally do all-right with 'em, as long as we charge about 25%-33% of NM- Overstreet for them. In general, we find that comics from the later 1990s thru the 2000s sell better because of their limited print run, and because of their cover price in relation to our 75¢-$1.00 whole price on them.

General Buying in Today's Market: I love buying old comics (in all grades!), Original Art, and Pulps. We have over 50,000 1940s-1971 comics, and approximately 200,000+ 1970s and early '80s comics, plus hundreds of thousands of 1980s-2000s comics, but I want to keep supplying myself for many lifetimes!

Finder's Fees: As a comic dealer, I find offering cash incentives to comic-collection-finders a great way to help the market thrive. Last year, we paid a fellow comic-dealer from down South approximately $10,500 in Finder's Fees in three months, for three collections that he sold to me. I take pride in always paying "the fee" for information leading to a deal (as long as I don't already know that the deal exists). Why not? As corny as it sounds, "just do the right thing".

eBay: We sell on eBay under GDCOMICS, and although eBay is very labor-intensive, we maintain a continuing, and substantial presence on the "bay-of-ee's" as I like to call it. The only problem is, eBay is so labor-intensive that we can only maintain 2,000+ oldies on there ('30s thru '60s comics, plus maybe a very few 1970s books). We also list on eBay a number of our "Sets for Sale" (1950s thru 2000s) and a lot of wholesale "Package Deals" ('50s thru 2000s). On eBay, we have a 100% satisfaction rating.

Website (www.gdcomics.com): We have a newly-revised website which serves the "Web-Goals" of: very secure, easy navigation, and easy Checkout! In addition, we've added vast amounts of comics 1940s thru the 2000s, plus we have a newly-expanded staff, that is "tres computer-savvy" with the goal of keeping the website "goin' and flowin".

For non-computer users, we will have a print catalog every once in a while. If you seriously collect and/or deal comics, just feel free to give us your contact info.

Have a GR-REAT! collecting and/or dealing year. - Gary D.

Big B Comics

For us the year 2010 started off slowly but as the year progressed so did our sales. Our back issue sales were down at the beginning of the year, I think largely in part to local collectors tightening their budgets. Many familiar faces from year's past have stopped coming around. I do not think this is an isolated issue. We exhibited at 2 Toronto Comic Cons in the spring and attendance at both was pretty abysmal. I swear I saw tumbleweeds blowing down the aisles of Wizard World Toronto.

For the first 6 months of the year, collections were few and far between. Luckily we did manage to find a nice little collection of Marvels just in time for the August Toronto Fan Expo (our big convention for the year). The collection cost us $8,000 and was nice because it was heavy on multiples of Marvel keys in affordable grades. It's nice going into a convention with multiple copies of Iron Man #1, Captain America #100, Fantastic Four #112, Sub-Mariner #8, 34, Conan #1, Amazing Spider-Man #121, 122, etc. A nice collection of about a dozen rarer Canadian Whites (AA and Maple Leaf) also came in just before the convention. We had a successful Fan Expo and we saw no evidence of a "market correction", at least not for the nice solid comic books being bought up by the collectors. Attendance was the polar opposite of the spring Toronto shows. The fire marshal was refusing entry as the building was over capacity and lines were stretching down several city blocks.

In October of 2010 we purchased a very large comic collection for $60,000. There were about 7000 books, all from the mid 1940s to the mid 1970s. Nice deep runs of the main Marvel and DC titles were present. Keys included a CGC 2.5 Amazing Fantasy #15, a raw Amazing Spider-Man #1 in GD/VG, a raw Fantastic Four #1 in GD+, a raw run of X-Men #1-10 in solid mid grades, 3 copies of

Ed Brubaker's Captain America is a great example of good story-telling. (#14 shown)

Fantastic Four #12, Sgt. Fury #1, Tales to Astonish #27, Detective Comics #58, Justice League of America #1, Casper #1 and on and on. The collection had a large run of early Harvey Comics and an excellent Dell run. It was nice to see a collection of this size surface and it was even nicer that we were able to pick it up. The only bad thing about a collection like this is that it meant that I, my price guide and the night lamp had to spend weeks together; we were almost inseparable. It's hard work and it really is an intricate dance looking at the comic book, going through the Guide and trying to figure out which books will bear Guide, get over Guide, or sell at a fraction of Guide. It was refreshing to note just how tied to the Guide we still are.

I think in recent years the Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide has become the most overlooked and undervalued tool in the hobby. While investors and speculators depend more on the real time results delivered by websites like GP Analysis, the Overstreet remains the backbone of the hobby. I'd say well over 90% of comic books trading above bargain bin prices are not tracked by any websites but many people treat those online sales as gospel. That 90% of sales happens in comic shops, comic book conventions, want ad posts and private sales. All these transactions are anchored by the Overstreet Price Guide. It has become evident that any comic book that is not one of the stars of an online auction is going to underperform in that auction. Take a quality early run book from Marvel in low to mid grade and post it on an auction. The result is usually a sale at a fraction of Guide. But this is just a very tiny segment of the market for these types of books. It is also a very limited selling window for a comic book surrounded by flashier comic books. I'll even venture to say that a good percentage of the buyers scooping up these bargains are dealers willing to keep inventory and wait out a higher price. Way more 4.0 copies of say Amazing Spider-Man #50 sell untracked than they do tracked. Because the tracked data is so limited these higher unreported prices actually make the data available online inaccurate. In actual fact the average prices realized for these books are much closer to the Overstreet values. Sure, the Overstreet is an annual printed price guide and by its nature cannot reflect quick market changes. But again these quick changes affect a very small percentage of comics and the speculators and investors represent a small fraction of collectors. For the vast majority of the comic books that we sell, a measure against the Overstreet Price Guide remains the main determinant of price.

On the retail side, 2010 was a year of challenges for many direct market comic book stores in North America. I know we had to work very hard just to stay at roughly the same sales level as 2009. Many other retailers that I speak with report sales being down anywhere from 10-30%. Very few of my retailing brethren reported any kind of positive gains in 2010. The biggest loser by far was new comic sales as a 33% line wide price increase and general consumer apathy towards much of Marvel's output resulted in a lot of customers cutting back on spending or falling out of comic collecting all together. The drop-off for DC was not as pronounced. Many pundits blame online piracy and/or legal digital downloads and though I'm sure this can account for some percentage of the drop in sales at the retail level, I am much more confident in putting the majority of the blame on bad stories and line saturation. When the big 2 produce good stories that people want to read, people come out to buy them. When they produce pap that is easily passed by, well, we are seeing the result. The sad thing is that genuinely good comics tend to get lost in the shuffle as many people are more apt to throw their hands up in frustration than to do the hard (and costly) work of searching out the good stuff. This just means that, more than ever, it's incumbent on retailers to do the work for them and point people in the right direction.

Let's get back to line saturation, because I really think this is a monumental problem in the industry. I see the mistakes of the early '90s being repeated all over again and it is frightening. As I do my weekly orders for new comic product I really have to scratch my head at 9 different Captain America comics or 11 different Thor comics, most priced at $3.99. Where exactly is the market for that? I place token orders or big fat zeros for many of them and no one amongst my customer base seems to be missing them. Marvel obviously wants to package as much material together in time to release graphic novels pre-movie, but I'm sure when it comes to ordering time I won't be ordering many of these graphic novels either. If the stories all look pretty much the same and there is little to no consumer interest, I just don't see the market for them. I would rather sell backlist products that I know are good stories that will get people into the shop looking for the next thing. Ed Brubaker's Captain America is a great example, but sadly Marvel has let many of these volumes go out of print while they churn out numerous mini-series without any identity whatsoever. I really just don't get it.

Sadly this looks to be a trend that will continue into 2011. The dearth of quality product shipping in the 1st quarter is going to really put a lot of stores into a bad spot. We have already seen large numbers of stores closing across North America in 2010. A 2010 census by Phil Boyle of Coliseum of Comics in Florida put the number of direct market comic book stores in the U.S. at roughly 1800. This was based on collecting hard data and actually contacting stores to verify their existence. The most commonly held number prior to this was 3000 stores in the U.S., but this was based solely on numbers of accounts with Diamond Comics Distributors. That is a pretty shocking difference and I think the worst is yet to come in 2011. There will be areas of the country that become drastically underserviced but at the same time there will be opportunities aplenty for smart and enterprising retailers to fill those voids.

It's not all doom and gloom though! 2010 had its fair share of hits as well. At the top of the list we have Bryan Lee O'Malley's Scott Pilgrim. This series of 6 graphic novels was a sales juggernaut for most of the calendar year and was important for the fact that it brought new faces into our stores. And, just as important, they were young faces! Robert Kirkman's Walking Dead was a similar smash success. This wonderful zombie apocalypse story was already one of our top sellers for several years. The added exposure of a hit TV series catapulted it to a whole new level. Both series prove that well done, engaging, and entertaining stories in comic book format can be extremely successful, and not just because of the added exposure in other media. The Walking Dead show aired just 6 episodes on a specialty cable channel not widely available in many markets. Scott Pilgrim the movie was a box office flop. But both series sell phenomenally well in comic book form because, as comics, they have mass appeal and are good. Period.

I think the next few years are really going to be telling for the comic book industry, particularly on the retail side. There are a lot of stores in cities across North America that opened in the late '70s and early '80s. Those stores that have had consistent ownership for the past 30 years will now have owners that are looking at retirement. Will they be able to sell their businesses? Are there buyers out there for them? If they close, will new stores come in to take their place? These are big questions and I don't know if we have the answers. Again, there are opportunities for well-run businesses to flourish in this market. Whether it be in collectible comics or whatever 2011 version of Scott Pilgrim is waiting out there for us all, here's to hoping that the collections come in big and fast and that Diamond is never out of stock.

Finally, Marc and I once again want to thank the staffs of Blue Beetle and Big B for their hard work and all of our great customers who continue to support us.

Cloud Nine Comics

Greetings, I've been buying and selling comics for over 25 years now, starting on the East coast in CT, and now on the West coast in Oregon. Feel free to visit Cloud 9 online at: www.cloudninecomics.com or email me: ken@cloudninecomics.com, you can always contact me as well for a private showing if you're coming to the Portland area. The website continues to evolve and improve with more 1 to 1 ratio cover scans, better design, and now direct links from GPAnalysis to our CGC slabbed books. Cloud 9 is also a CGC Authorized Dealer, so feel free to contact me if you have questions about CGC or would like to receive a discount on submitting your books to CGC. This year I was able to travel to the East coast and Midwest to shop, hitting about half a dozen stores in New England, and ones in Madison, Chicago, and Iowa City, which helped give me a sense of what was available across the country, and at what prices things were selling (or not selling).

The Year Overall: Other than the early record sales of Action #1 and Detective #27, which many advisors talked about in our 40th Guide, my overall feeling was 2010 was worse then 2009, and this is due to several reasons. First off, the economy! Unemployment is still around 10% nationwide, we're still at war, and the housing market is flat at best with interest rates at an all time low. Does this affect you folks out there who buy your couple books a week to read? Probably not, but for those of you that have a box at the local shop and normally bought 5-10 titles each week, you may now be buying 2-5. Oh yes, and that $4 cover price is ridiculous. Remember when cover prices, if they went up, went up $.10 or $.25, but to go right from $3 to $4? How about $3.25? Cheers to Vertigo for having a $1.00 cover price on some of their new first issues (even if it's only a few).

Other than economic related reasons, I saw less quality material come to the marketplace this past year. I feel this was not only locally in the Pacific Northwest, but nationally as well from my travels or weekly searches on the internet. On eBay, I'm also seeing more comics coming up for sale as "Buy It Now" only, instead of as auctions, which I feel takes away from the purpose of an auction site. There seemed to be very few interesting collections that came up for sale this year, most were Silver – Modern Age superhero. Where are the horror, Archie, jungle, or sci-fi collections? Locally I saw one large EC collection come in for the first time in almost a decade, and one superhero collection surfaced which another local dealer purchased, other than that, not much new in the Pacific Northwest.

After the economy and lack of quality material, I also saw some disturbing new trends arise in the value of some blue chips (even in high grade!). Incredible Hulk #181 in CGC 9.8 has consistently sold between $15,000-$25,000 for years now, with an average around $20,000. This year at present there have been 5 copies sold in this grade with 3 selling for $12,600, $13,351 & $11,950, that's 3 record low sales for the same book at its highest grade in the same year. Also, Silver Age Blue chips have finally stabilized for the first time in years almost across the board. Tales of Suspense #39 CGC 9.2 sold for $49,750, and in 2009 a 9.2 sold for $50,000, even Amazing Fantasy #15 has been flat in most grades this past year. So, demand is still there for this great investment books, but buying and flipping these books in a year or two, may not happen again for some years down the road. From what I've seen a book will get hot, sometimes doubling or even tripling in price, then cool off for 4-7 years, then get hot again, although who knows if the returns will be as large. In summary, now is a great time to buy, if you can find the right books to buy. When will that Tales of Suspense #39 CGC 9.2 will hit the $100,000 sales mark? 2012? 2015? 2020? You be the judge, but my bets are sooner than later.

Below are some thoughts about specific time periods, some books I've purchased, some books I've sold, and some basic thoughts on pricing in our beloved price guide.

Golden Age: It seems there is still steady demand for these great books, but I'm seeing increased resistance from buyers due to pricing. I'm not sure if the prices are right and people are just pinching their pockets, or if the Guide needs to remain flat for a year or two for inflation and interest to return to these books. I would like to know where are all of the Centaurs? Were 90% donated during the war paper drives? Try putting together a complete collection of this publisher! Finding copies of The Arrow on eBay in any grade is often difficult, and the asking price is usually double Guide. Female characters I think are still undervalued such as Wonder Woman, Sun Girl, Miss Fury, Blonde Phantom, Mary Marvel, or the first appearance of Star Sapphire in All Flash #32, (you know she'll be in one of these Green Lantern movies.)

At shows I've been finding more people asking for or collecting their favorite artists for this time period than putting together a run of a title or publisher. I think Nedors and Fiction House are way undervalued in general as they are much more difficult to find then Timelys or DCs. Try putting together a run of Black Terror or Planet Comics in Fine or better. It may not cost as much as a Detective Comics run, but it may be more difficult to find these books, forget about in grade. Exciting Comics #9 (1st Black Terror) & #39 (Nazis giving poison candy to kids) could skyrocket very soon, both sell way above Guide, and the highest graded CGC sale of #9 is only a 5.5, and there have only been two CGC sales of #39, so yes, very scarce. Buy what you love from this time period, as most books will cost one a decent bit, and there just aren't that many of them out there. Sales wise, I don't do much presently in this time period, but I did sell some Blackhawk, Startling Terror Tales, Sensation Comics, Blue Bolt and Archies.

Atomic Age: I'm buying more, selling more, and seeing more people ask for books from this period, which to me parallels the Bronze Age in diversity and affordability. EC horror books are regularly in demand, although usually at a small discount below Guide, war and Archie titles seem too cheap to me given their scarcity. There are quite a few cool crime/detective books from this period with some great artists doing just a few random issues. Ken Shannon issues seem quite reasonable with great artwork. Early 10¢ romance books were in high demand and selling at a good percent of Guide if I could keep them in stock. Pre-code Horror is always in demand, but pricing is a bit resistant, although I think it's more economic based than the Guide being too high. I'm seeing less and less Avon one shots in shops and at shows. Try collecting all these! Some titles I sold this year include: Prize Comics Western, Mysterious Adventures, Tales From The Crypt, Strange Tales of the Unusual, I Love You, and Journey Into Fear.

Silver Age: Amazing Fantasy #15 has finally cooled off after around a decade of insane increases. Still a great investment in all grades, but it may finally not be doubling every 3 years like it has been. My sales from this time period are about 70% superhero, 10% Archie, 10% Romance, and 10% Dell/Gold Key, however, over the years I've been buying mostly superhero, so I have a much larger stock. Starting this year I am actively going to search out less superhero comics, and more from other genres, as although their ticket prices are usually much lower, they seem to be much more liquid books for me when I get them in. Amazing Spider-Man interest was low for the 2nd year in a row, other than issues #1-10. Incredible Hulk #1-6 are still very much in demand, with #1 showing huge gains in all grades. Fantastic Four has picked up steam after a few cool years with more interest in #1-10, 25, 26, 48-50 & 52. Avengers #1 has cooled quite a bit, however issues #2-50 are selling regularly as people try and complete their runs on a still very affordable title. X-Men, other than #1 have just been collecting dust for several years now (the movies really weren't that bad!), and even this first issue has been basically flat price wise. Captain America has been hot for all issues, and #100 has been selling above Guide in all grades. Thor and Journey Into Mystery are selling fairly regularly, but not close to the Avengers volume wise. Daredevil, now this one is strange to me, as many of my dealer and collector friends save "Daredevil's a soft book, or that books dead in the water, etc…", yet show after show, I sell more Daredevil keys or filler issues than other Marvel superheros typically (I have to include Bronze sales here with this title due to Bullseye & Elektra sales). Sub-Mariner to me is a soft book, however issue #8 sells quite well in all grades and is due for a large increase in Guide. Iron Man #1 is one of the most liquid books from this time period, and needs to go up in Guide in all grades by at least 25%.

DC wise, Green Lantern #7 (1st Sinestro, which I talked about in the Guide last year) seems to now be more available since everyone has caught on about this book. It is still very tough to find, and needs a huge increase in Guide of about 300% in all grades as CGC 3.0-4.0's are selling for $300-$400 at present. Issues #14 & 16 (1st Sonar & S.A. Star Sapphire) seem way undervalued and are very hard to find about VF. The first issue is doing quite well in FN or higher, but lower grades copies still out-supply demand. Teen Titans books above FN seem quite hard to find, and #1 in high grade seems very affordable if you can find one, same for their first appearance in Brave & the Bold. Showcase #22 is currently one of the hottest books on the market if you can find one. Flash #105-110 still seem very undervalued to me, as he's probably one of the most well known characters of all time, and a huge player in the DC universe. *Wonder Woman*s are very affordable, and tough to find in any grade, especially FN or higher. Adventure Comics haven't been showing much demand other than a few people collecting the Legion run starting at #300. These are very hard to find in VF or higher, and have great story lines.

Archies sell almost as fast as I get them in, although usually at a discount off Guide. Another character to watch is Richie Rich, whose first appearance in Little Dot #1 seems very affordable, as do most of his titles. Romance titles are very much in demand with high grade selling at or above Guide, and low to mid-grade moving briskly, but slightly below Guide. In general, sales were slower this year for this time period as there is becoming resistance to pricing. Some titles/books I sold include: Tales of Suspense #39 CGC 3.0 for $1100, Iron Man #1 FN $120, Journey Into Mystery #121 VF $50, Green Lantern #7 CGC 5.5 $340, Daredevil #1 GD-/1.0 $120, Batman #171 VF- $115, Avengers #2 FN- $200, #9 VG $70, Amazing Spider-Man #14 CGC 7.5(rest.) $500.

Bronze Age: My best selling period for at least the 3rd year in a row. People are filling their runs for quite cheap, as many books are still available in VF/NM/9.0 or higher for quite affordable prices, and FN to VF copies can usually be found for $3-$5. I saw an increase in demand for DC horror this year (in grade), as many of these have some of the best covers of the decade. Keys that sell often with little price resistance include: Green Lantern #76 (which is now has the highest sale price from this time period with the only CGC 9.8 selling for $37,344!), Hulk #180-182, Amazing Spider-Man #121, 129 & 194, Iron Man #55, Werewolf By Night #32 (this one needs to go up about 100% in all grades in Guide!), Fantastic Four #112, Daredevil #131, 168, Ghost Rider #1, Marvel Spotlight #5 & 32 (1st Spider-Woman needs at least a 25% increase in all grades), X-Men #94 (interest returning after several slow years), Giant-Size X-Men #1, Avengers #94, 95 (Neal Adams), Star Wars #1 35¢ price variant, Cerebus #1, Weird War Tales #1, Captain America #117 (1st Falcon), and Iron Fist #14 (regular or variant).

One book I feel is a huge sleeper (and maybe it's because it's a DC) is Superman's Pal Jimmy Olsen #134 (1st Darkseid). He almost took over the universe a few years ago, and now he's the main villain on Smallville's last season. If only Superman will fight Doomsday or Darkseid in a movie!

House of Secrets #92 is still in demand, but showing price resistance. Tomb of Dracula #1 & 10, same thing. People want them, but aren't shelling out Guide for them at present. Green Lantern Neal Adams run is doing well, but the X-Men Byrne run has almost tanked in value for some odd reason. I love Wonder Woman 15¢ covers without costume, as they are harder to find, great covers, and showing great annual returns. Shorter run titles are showing demand like Night Nurse, Beware The Cat, Black Panther, Black Goliath, and Champions. Conan #1 is showing price resistance, and interest has been down on issues 23 & 24.

Gold Key/Whitman Funny Animal books sell quite well for 50¢ - $2, but not much more as it's usually parents buying these for their kids to read. Demand for Charltons has been up for cheap copies to fill runs, as well as high grade, as they are one of the most diverse publishers from this period.

Early Bronze Age has been showing substantial gains in Guide over the last 5 years or so, but the end of the Bronze Age has been virtually flat in Guide. This is also a great time period for people to invest in, as finding high grade NM-/9.2 books from this period in collections is becoming much more difficult than 3-5 years ago.

Some sales for me this past year include: Amazing Spider-Man #129 VF/NM $400, #121 VF $100 & VF- $75, Daredevil #168 VF $50, Green Lantern #76 CGC 5.5 $210, CGC 5.0 $155, Hansi The Girl Who Loved the Swastika nn FN- $38, Hulk #180 FN $45, #182 FN $25, Weird War Tales #1 VF $100, Werewolf By Night #32 FN+ $1075, and Star Wars #1 $.35 variant CGC 6.0 $1200!

Copper/Modern Age: Increased interest and sales in these periods continues in the 1980s and the late 1990s to the present. The most requested titles by far are Deadpool, Walking Dead, G.I. Joe, Chew and now Morning Glories. Image is the most dominant publisher in the last 5 years as far as collectability by a long shot. Marvel and DC seem interested in just re-launching their superheroes over and over with an occasional "World Ending" event to pull buyers in. I think it's time these two publishers hired some new writers with fresh ideas to bring to the table and do things that Image, Vertigo, Dynamite, Dark Horse and other smaller publishers are doing. I'm only reading a few current titles, as this isn't my main focus collecting wise, and these are Buffy the Vampire Slayer season 8 (story wandered a bit during the issues in the 20s, but the last half a year to year has been quite good again), the House of Mystery re-launch starring Fig which contains great stories within the overall story by guest writers and artists, Mouse Guard, and Four Eyes, although I have no clue what's going on here as it's been one issue in the last year I believe, which is too bad, as it's a great story about dragon fighting during the Great Depression. Deadpool is probably the most requested character for me at shows this past year, with copies from the '97 series selling almost as fast as I put them out. The entire series needs line listings with #1 at about $25, #2-10 in the $10-$15 range, and the last 20 issues or so when Marvel had their lower print runs in the $10-$35 range (#54 & 55 with the Punisher should be around $35 for NM- copies). The Walking Dead is possibly the most successful comic ever. CGC 9.8's are now regularly selling for $600 with a 9.9 selling for $1825 this year, although this 9.9 sale is down from a $2000 sale in '09), and 9.6 Sig. Series selling for an absurd $1500! The first issue in Guide should be around $200, with issue 2 at $100, 3-5 at $75, 6-10 at $50 and so forth. Never has a series gone up so fast so far, and not slowed down. Chew #1 is doing the same with CGC 9.8's now hitting $200 in just over a year, although I'm not sure if this one will have the same legs. Transformers have been slow for the last year or two, but still seem quite affordable to me and strong title overall. New Mutants #98 (1st Deadpool) has cooled off considerably with 9.8s now selling around $200-$250, which is probably due to it being fairly common. The Moon Knight 1980 series is one to keep an eye on, and due for price increase as it's quite hard to put a run together in VF/NM/9.0 range or higher. G.I. Joes are selling in all grades quite regularly, and the entire title deserves upward movement in Guide. Cry For Dawn, Zelda, The Tick, Alien (1st series), Bone, Grendel/Primer #2, Albedo (especially #2, which needs to be doubled in Guide in GD-FN), THB, and other low print run indies are great investments, and deserve upward movement in Guide. Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #1-10 are much harder to find than they used to be, and #1 deserves a line listing as sales are much more consistent than they once were. I would suggest a NM- price of $2000-2500 and a GD listing of $250. New Teen Titans #1 & 2 are selling regularly, and need a price increase, especially #1. Amazing Spider-Man #252, 300, 361, and 431 all sell consistently at Guide and deserve increases. Amazing Spider-Man #431 should have its own line listing of $12 and be one of the first breakthrough issues in this title from this period. Amazing Spider-Man #361 (first Carnage) will become a classic Copper Age cover, and most likely one of Spidey's most important villains. Vol. 2 issues #15-36 are still quite desirable and tough to find, and deserve line listings, with #36 having a top listing of $20. McFarlane's runs on Spider-Man and Incredible Hulk are consistently in demand and could move up. X-Men after the Byrne run seem quite affordable, as do issues #158, 201, 210-214, 222, 244, and 266, this last one due for a decent price increase as it's a classic cover from this time period and always in demand selling at or above Guide.

Cool miniseries are still in demand like Ronin by Frank Miller, as well as his Wolverine series, and 30 Days of Night, Batman: The Dark Knight, Origin, Crisis On Infinite Earths, 300, Watchmen, etc. Miracleman across the board is due for a price increase with focus on issues #1, 15, 20-24, especially issues 15, 23 & 24 which sell way above Guide in all grades. Sweet Tooth is a title to keep an eye on, as sales locally are consistent and the story idea is good. DC Comics Presents #26 (New Teen Titans preview) is a solid key.

Other books that sell regularly and need increases in Guide are: Grimm Fairy Tales #1, Fables #1, Sandman #1, Preacher #1 (early Vertigo #1's in general), and Hellblazer #1 (this whole series seems a great buy as it's one of the longest running Modern series). Another book to keep an eye on is Superman: The Man of Steel #18 (1st full Doomsday, and possibly a Copper Age classic cover). Superman doesn't have that many villains to fight, and this is arguably his most difficult, who I'm sure will make it to the big screen at some point. NYX #3 is also a book that is still performing well, and has started to get a second wind this past year, as this character continues to be developed by Marvel.

Valiant's… ah yes, so many produced, so many sold, so many available… or are there? Harbinger, Solar, X-O Manowar, Rai and Shadowman seem to be obtaining some demand/value. Gold variants still sell consistently. These books are now 15+ years old with some corners starting to get blunted, and a little stress on the spines. Buy these now for $.50-$2 if you can find them, as my thoughts are people have ignored these for so long or simply not cared enough to preserve them properly, that over the next 5-10 years, it will be much more difficult to find raw 9.6s or better. This is a great period to find keys that are available often in $1 boxes at shows or for only $3-$5, that in 5-10 years could very well be $25+ books. Some sales include: John Byrne's Next Men #23 NM $45, Fables #1 NM $45, Sandman #1 NM $45, New Mutants #1 NM $5, #98 NM- $62, Amazing Spider-Man #238 FN+ $30, #300 CGC 9.6 $210, CGC 9.4 $105, CGC 9.0 $80, #361 VF $6, Vol. 2 #1 NM+ $20, #36 NM $35, #529 NM $15, Chew #1 NM $30, Deadpool #1 NM $25, G.I. Joe #1 VF/NM $25, #21 VF/NM $30, Kick-Ass #1 CGC 9.6 $55, and X-Men #266 NM $60.

Suggestions For Pricing Spreads: Keep most of the Guide at current pricing. People are still collecting, but other than the richest 1% of our market, Guide prices are not being met for any time period, and often sale prices aren't even close to Guide (25-50% below for common issues of Silver-Bronze with line listings).

For key issues from Silver to Modern, Good pricing should go up, and in many instances considerably, such as books where their Good listing is in the $10-$40 range. Albedo #2 doesn't sell below $200 in any grade, so $32 for GD seems below the market by a ton, same is true for Cerebus #1, TMNT #1-4, Iron Man #1, Incredible Hulk #180-182 (181 should be at least $100 for GD, if not $125 as CGC 2.0s sell for $200 regularly), Green Lantern #76, Werewolf By Night #32, Tomb of Dracula #10, Captain America #100, etc… I don't think the tradition of VG being double of GD is valid, as people often will pay a good amount just to own a low grade copy, much more so then current Guide.

As for more common/filler issues, GD could go up, but VF and FN pricing could remain the same. VF and higher could go up, especially for Silver Age superhero, Archies, Romance, Horror, and other titles that are more collected/sold. NM- pricing is still low for most collected titles, and for the majority of key issues.

More consideration needs to be given towards Copper and Modern age books, as new keys like Amazing Spider-Man #431 are emerging, as well as titles like Deadpool, Chew and The Walking Dead where the entire title is in need of line listings, sometimes huge increases in guide are needed. NYX #3 has proved it is a Modern Age key, but $10 for NM- isn't close to what it sells for regularly getting $25 - $35. New Mutants #98 should go way up for maybe $50. Walking Dead #1 has proved it's not a flash in the pan, it should be around $200, with other issues following suit accordingly.

I hope Overstreet will consider expanding the number of new advisors that have a good amount of knowledge of Copper - Present books, as these are the largest percentage of books bought/sold in the marketplace, yet, least represented by advisor reports in the Guide. Not talking so much about new books that are selling off the racks each year, as store owners are reporting this info in the Guide well, but more so about titles and keys performing/selling well that need adjustment in the Guide on a more annual basis, as it seems we're covering this well in the Golden - Bronze Age pretty well, as most advisors have been contributing to the Guide for many years, and are older in age, and more knowledgeable in these time periods.

D'Arcy Farrell
Pendragon Comics

This past year has shown fantastic growth in TV and movie related sales. DVDs are flying off the shelves, morning cartoons are blistering with action, and the silver screen has lit up yet again.... all thanks to our medium, COMICS! Where would Hollywood be without us? Children yet again are talking about OUR heroes in the schoolyards and on Halloween. Birthday and Christmas gifts are once again Batmobiles, Spidey-cars, Iron Man rocket launchers and such! Bring back the underoos!

If you go into any decent DVD retailer, you will see Batman: The Red Hood, Iron Man cartoons, Kick-Ass and so much more filling the shelves. You wonder why Disney bought Marvel? It was to get in before it dominates everything.

Comics are where it is at. It has so many original storylines just waiting to be gobbled up and turned into a TV series like the amazing Walking Dead. Can you imagine a Vertigo title being done as well? How about an amazing story arc like Crisis On Infinite Earths or Old Man Logan? Or better yet, a one shot futuristic movie like Batman: The Dark Knight Returns? Now this has generated more new comic sales overall, nothing spectacular, but sales of trades and merchandise are climbing.

Death's appearance in Action Comics #894 brought in the Sandman fans too.

Since my last year review had decent feedback, I will maintain my format as in last year's 2010 Overstreet. Now on with more specifics in my review.

DC - New Comic Sales: The past year has been very big in sales. Brightest Day is a much bigger success than expected. I could hardly believe that issue #15 had bigger sales than issues #1-10 each. It just keeps increasing. Not that it is an amazing storyline, but after DC has gone through the Blackest Night storyline, everyone wants to see where it's going.

The Return of Bruce Wayne, of course everyone bought it, not sure if anyone liked it. I'm not quite sure how to say this, but only All Star Batman (especially issue #2) made me feel worse about reading a Batman story. I am glad it is over, whereas everything else Batman-related (like Red Robin) was great. Batman: The Return is a perfect one-shot for anyone to start up reading Batman at this point. DC is going in a good direction keeping Dick Grayson as Batman. I think we'll also see Babs swinging again. She did twinkle her toes after the Brainiac virus story 2-3 years back! Dick also proposed way back then as well!!

Green Lantern has had an amazing past few years. For a decade Hal was Parallax, nearly destroying the world, then in the end sacrificing himself to save it. Then he comes back in GL Rebirth (awesome, get the trade) which is a great starting point for new readers. By now, everyone knows the effects of Blackest Night. It brought back many dead heroes and villains into the DC universe and it has been crazy ever since. It has been a great GL ride, and timed with the new movie release is the "War of the Green Lanterns" storyline ending it once and for all (did I just say that?).

It seems long ago, but Blackest Night had only just begun! It was amazing in sales and the stories were well done. I especially liked the Golden Age Superman coming back in Blackest Night: Superman mini #1-3 and Dick Grayson's parents surprise appearance in Blackest Night: Batman #1-3. Wonder Woman becoming a Star Sapphire was cool as well. DC could do no wrong it seemed. A little bit too many one-shots from deceased titles, but you only had to buy those if you liked as it was not overly necessary like a typical crossover. Green Lantern #50 had Parallax come back to fight The Spectre in a huge battle. Awesome cover.

Here is a more detailed chronological review of 2010: Everyone loved all the GL rings! The Red Circle titles did poorly. Perhaps if done in the Wildstorm universe? It was decent in the 1960/70s but this was pale in comparison. Same with anything Milestone. It failed in the 1990s, and it will not do better now. Batman & Robin is awesome with Dick as Batman and Damian as Robin (the brat!). The constant bickering between Red Robin, Batgirl and Damian with Dick trying to keep it together is quite humerous. It has been a top 10 title from #1 on.

American Vampire sells very well and not just because of Stephen King's name. As mentioned already, Brightest Day came in May 2010 and I had not expected great things. The stories are OK, art is OK, and had followed great stories from Blackest Night and GL Sinestro Corps War and various Crisis stuff. I thought most DC customers would have tired of it. But to my suprise, the title kept selling out. I recall having to reorder 2-3 times every issue from #5-12 until I decided to just way overorder in future issues. It will segway into War of Green Lanterns, timed with the new movie. That may complete the whole storyline (I hope).

The anniversary issues Batman #700, Superman #700 and Wonder Woman #600 all sold very well. Supposedly, Wonder Woman #600 was controversial, and that is silly. It is a good story with good art and had increased sales that has continued since. Green Arrow #1 came out end of June 2010 and sold well, but only because of Brightest Day tie-in. It's not bad, but not good either. Batman: Odyssey by Neal Adams is doing well for sales. The art is a bit rough and the ink line is thick, but you can still see the genuis. X-Files and 30 Days of Night is an example where two dying/dead titles can come together and sell. Seperately it would have bombed. Fan interest is so 1990s, like Star Trek: The Next Generation on these titles, even though 30 Days is less than 10 years old, it has fallen to near death. Superman: Earth One HC was awesome! Reminiscent of the 1990s DC annuals that all had an Elseworlds theme. This sold exceedingly well everywhere. Go buy it! GL Emerald Warriors is a title that is not needed. It sells OK, but Brightest Day and GL stuff is covered already everywhere for 2+ years and I see no point to it. Flash with Barry Allen is selling well, but nowhere near the success as when Hal came back. I blame mostly the art on this one.

In September, DC came out with 5 War one-shots that were really nicely done. I would like DC to hire Ennis and Kubert (JOE!!!!) to do 2-3 War titles in a Vertigo banner for the mature reader. OK, it won't happen, but it's a nice thought. Perhaps if fans cared to write in to DC? Action Comics #894 with Death talking to Luthor was priceless. A funny single issue, it sold quite well mostly to Sandman fans. Batman Inc. #1 and Batman: The Dark Knight #1 both came out. Both sold very high. Batman Inc. not as well received, and we'll see in the new year if sales maintain or slide. I expect it to slide a bit and Dark Knight to hold. Batwoman is not really a new character, and will sell OK in this new age with up to date changes. I expect nothing special, and will hover mid-level in sales at most. Superboy with Connor Kent is a dead title. It might have been better at a different time, or maybe pop him into Legion. THUNDER Agents is also a bomb. Why does DC do this? Old 1960-70s titles from TOWER Comics and Red Circle Comics were like nicely done vintage independents. Why come back revived in this way? Stop it DC. Fling them in Vertigo with a twist. Or initiate them slowly with appearances! That would be cool! I remember in the title Demon in 1990s, the Haunted Tank and crew came back out of retirement for a 3 issue story arc, and that was such a nice story. That's the way to reintroduce old forgotten titles or heroes/villains. Not just give them a title to add to the lineup.

And finally, Green Lantern: Larfleeze Christmas Special! This was a well done Christmas issue. It even came with a cookie recipe with orange icing. This sold out, and I had to reorder it. When's the last time that happened for a holiday one-shot? Nice ending to an overall GREAT DC year!

Marvel - New Comic Sales: Well Spidey is practically back to normal. It was a rough couple of years, but we finally saw the effects of "One More Day" end with "One Moment In Time". Unfortuanetly, we also lost some good fans along the way. Hopefully Marvel doesn't do that again(they will). The story arc in Amazing Spider-Man "Grim Hunt" did quite well also. Chaos War did average, as did most Marvel books. It is nice to see Kick-Ass volume 2 arrive. Better sales than volume 1 thanks to the excellent movie. Too bad it is not coming monthly.

Marvel just keeps hammering titles out without any thought of direction or control. How many mini-series and relaunches do we need? Crossover after crossover as well! How many titles and specials do Wolverine and Deadpool deserve?

I'm beginning to see a bad trend at Marvel. It's hard enough for fans on a budget to buy all those Amazing Spider-Man monthly issues, but look at Marvel in Dec. 2010. Too many titles! Wolverine, Wolverine The Best there Is. X-Men, Uncanny X-men, X-Men Legacy. Avengers, New Avengers, Secret Avengers. These core titles would be fine BUT then look at all those minis and one-shots and secondary titles like X-Men Forever, Wolverine First-Class, Deadpool XXXX (he has too many to mention specifics). They are slowly making each group/hero a weekly showup on the comic shelf. Now some of it makes sense like X-Men and Uncanny X-Men.

And I'd rather see 2 issues of Amazing Spider-Man than 2 titles. DC does fine with Action+Superman, GL+GL Corps. And Batman rarely goes wrong even with 100+ titles (though Return of Bruce Wayne #1-6 is the exception, but it was needed, just badly done).

It reminds me of the late 1990s where Marvel saturated the shelves with 3-4 titles of every hero/group out there. Marvel please stop producing stories like Zombie XXX, you really haven't done it very well after the second Marvel Zombies. If you get an urge to do another Zombie story see Walking Dead, then go do one with the same class and quality. This is not personal opinion, most customers loved Marvel Zombies 1 and Marvel Zombies 2 and sales/commentary reflected that, but nothing after that. Hopefully the Zombies Squadron Supreme can revive it. I doubt it.

Here is a more detailed chronological review of 2010: At the beginning of 2010, see saw Spidey turn around with the story arc "The Gauntlet". Suddenly the art and story started to get better and some fans of Pete final felt relief that the bad writing and ideas were coming to an end. A worthwhile trade. Hulk on the otherhand was getting worse. Following the successful "Planet Hulk", Marvel continued with "World War Hulk" which was OK. After that, it just got worse. Especially when Marvel uses a tactic no one likes, and that is renaming a title trying to maintain its selling level, like Incredible Hulk to Incredible Hercules or from Daredevil to Black Panther: The Man Without Fear. These secondary heroes are not bad, but hardly deserve a title. At least Hudlin is not writing Black Panther. Arggh. Just give them a #1, then kill the title when sales slip, as you usually do(Marvel that is!).

The *What If?*s are very well done one-shots. Doing these once a year is a good move by Marvel(yes I said something nice about Marvel). It stays fresh! It also stays topical (up to date with current just-ended stories with the What If? twist).

Siege came out and ended fast, which made it even better. If you like Thor, you'll like this. It was well done, and didn't crossover everywhere. Captain America: Reborn concluded and sold highly. Whereas all the Noir titles busted, and most fans dislike them. I also hate digest-sized trades! For all ages, Marvel Super Hero Squad is perfect for young audiences! X-Force is a constant high level seller, especially drawing on the Messiah arc with Cable, great writing! Lets HOPE they don't overdo it(oops, they already did with Generation Hope late in 2010!). Generation Hope is really just passing time for when Marvel does some big grandeous crossover for the X-Universe where Hope either is going to destroy it then save it or something similar to Parallax/Hal Jordan or "Phoenix, Death of" storyline. It probably will be amazing, but prepared to be bored and buy lots of issues before it happens.

The Kick-Ass hardcover came out and sold beyond my expectations, through the roof! What exactly is the point of the Ultimate titles? They have an ending with Ultimatum, reboot, then let Ultimate Spider-Man go back to old numbering system? Now Ultimate Spider-Man is going to die in 2011?? At least The Ultimates is refreshing, volume 1.

X-Men major crossovers like 2nd Coming and X-Nation and X-Necrosha are not doing much for sales. As mentioned earlier, the Messiah War with Cable and X-Force was great in sales, art and story. Unfortunately, it seems to have fallen flat after that. Uncanny X-Force has been received very well and has continued the X-Force sales with no slippage whatsover. All the X-titles with "Forever" are pointless in sales, nobody is buying this Marvel attempt at over-saturation of new releases. Millar is pumping out great minis and short series! He is by far Marvel's best superstar writer with Kick-Ass, Nemesis, Old Man Logan and Superior. The ICON imprint at Marvel cannot compare with DC's Vertigo, but its few titles, creator owned, are always well written and sell exceptionally well.

Avengers, Secret Avengers and New Avengers all started at #1 in May/June. They sold very well. Sales have maintained high levels, stories are OK, and will remain so as long as the upcoming big movies like Thor, Cap, Iron Man 3, and eventually, The Avengers have success and high profile. The younger collectors have the movies to connect with the comics, thus the high sales. I doubt the sales would be this high without the movies. The 1960/70s Western titles like Rawhide Kid were nice, well done though sales are limited due to audience ignorance. I grew up reading all those great Marvel Westerns, and can enjoy them...but the typical 20-30 year old collector has no clue. So yes it is nice to see, but sales will never be great. They could move these titles to a different imprint other than "Marvel Heroes", which mixes with Thor, Cap, Spidey and the likes. That could improve the sales. Placing these circa 1800s heroes of the West among 2010 Marvel Heroes banner does not help. If you make an effort, especially in writing, the sales will come. I think a movie like Rawhide Kid could work if done correctly, see True Grit or the amazing masterpiece Unforgiven and you can then imagine. Of course, it could be a flop like Jonah Hex by DC.

Shadowland! Great story and decent art throughout. Daredevil has been a high seller thoughout all his 100+ issues culminating with the Shadowland crossover. Well done, let's hope Daredevil Reborn is worthy to continue that streak. I'm uneasy with Black Panther taking over the numbering and "Hells Kitchen". This is a hero, like Silver Surfer, Marvel just can't maintain a title with. Surfer came close with Thanos stuff in the 1990s, but eventually faltered. So let's hope the writing is decent, and another Incredible Hercules doesn't happen. X-Men #1 vs. vampires started in July with high sales. It hasn't slipped, but that is typical for a main X-Title as those Marvel fans will buy anything that seems important (see Deadpool and his 100+ titles and minis and one-shots this year for proof!). I don't think much of it but Marvel is aiming for a one per week appearance of its main lineup. My advice? Refuse the trap, buy some ICON or Vertigo titles, and exercise your brain. Don't go down the Marvel or Image path of the late 1990s when the two companies battled for variant and quantity supremacy. Scarlet by Bendis came out in the summer as well, it was well done and good for sales. If you liked this, look out for Ennis book Jennifer Blood by Dynamite. Namor, first mutant? Really? Did we really want this out? Why not remake Defenders with him and Surfer, Strange et al?? That would be great. I know Marvel tried it already, but they made the mistake by having Larsen do it. Art and writing was lousy. Do that well and you'll find a place for the middle road heroes that have no titles. Perhaps make the Liberators (see Avengers #83) again! Wow! That would sell. Imagine a great female lineup with Black-Cat, Valkyrie, Hellcat, Tigra, or whoever. Such unused potential. The two Thor minis "For Asgard" and "First Thunder" sold well and stories were not bad. In September, Wolverine, Daken, and X-23 had their #1's for their ongoing series. Sure, of course we need Logan, but X-23 again? Just put her on a team. As per Daken, yes it sells, but the wrirting and art are not so good. People buy it only because of Logan. Again, Marvel trying for an every week presence of their top heroes. Carnage came out in October, and the art and story are great! The story makes you root for Carnage. Get the trade of this mini, it is a good read. It sold OK, but each week I suggest it, and the sales climb next issue, a good sign to buy it! Chaos War has come, sold mediocre, and no one talks much about it. This could've been done better, and the timing is wrong. Marvel fans need a break from the contant huge crossovers.

S.H.I.E.L.D. is a wonderful suprise! Hickman has done a great job, and my sales climb every month. Even the historical variants are great. A must read! Thank goodness Marvel is cutting a couple of Deadpool titles, but Deadpool Team-Up was kinda funny and not bad. I'm sure Marvel will create a couple more to replace them and we'll be at the same over saturation again. Still, overall, Marvel plugged out some good stuff, and the year was a success. With so much to chose from, CHOSE!! Don't buy it all. Spread out your reading. Expand to Vertigo, Batman, ICON, Radical, BOOM!, Avatar as my best picks for 2011 reading. Art lovers you are on your own. I can stomach bad art with great story, but the reverse?

Independent Overview:

Abstract: Terry Moore's Echo continues to be a very interesting tale on what happens when you bind with a living metal. Interesting doesn't do it justice, simple clean lines for the art and good character development. One of the better stories out there.

Archaia: What can I say ? The Killer is still a great story as the second arc continues. It is getting more complicated but that's what happens when politics are interjected into a simple assasination. Days Missing: Great covers but interior art detracted from the story. Mouse Guard continues to be popular. I'm not certain why but there it is.

Archie Comics: The dream marriage(s) story arc sold exceedingly high, as did the trades and well-priced slipcase hardcover. I haven't sold as much Archie combined in 25 years put together. Too bad it was a dream. Of course all the guys would pick Betty, but most of the buyers were girls. The Life With Archie mag sells only OK at most. It was not a work of art, nor was it smartly written, but it brought many newbies into stores continent wide. I probably won't see this success again forever from Archie.

Avatar: Continued its "in your face" horror. Crossed followed by Crossed - Family Values were definitely items you didn't leave around for the kiddies.Very enjoyable, which is a totally inappropriate description for the material. Unsettling and queasy would be more apt. There is probably a good movie waiting to be made out of this. Lucky for us, it appears that David Lapham has as many dark thoughts as Garth Ennis.

I think Alan Moore really wants to be master of the porno horror genre. He comes very close with Neonomicon. A welcome addition to the Lovecraft mythos. Other stories which were good but not quite as graphic were Fevre Dream which was interesting, but I was not impressed by the art. Covers were better than the interior. Supergod was excellent but I have a Warren Ellis bias and pick up anything by him. Gravel was a solid read and the last arc had a satisfactory ending, The Chronicles of Wormwood continued to be a superior story: The Anti-Christ and Jesus in a bar and a talking rabbit back at the apartment. What more do you want in a story?

Boom! Studios: Right at the top, I have to say Boom is doing great material for kids : The Incredibles, Wall-E, Toy Story, etc. Good introduction for future collectors. All have good art and simple stories. It gives the parents something to purchase without worrying about the content although I ALWAYS have the parent review any book they are getting for their child.

For the adults: Codebreakers had a good story and art. Positive feedback from customers. The same with 28 Days Later. Farscape and Do Androids Dream of Electric Sheep were not received as positively.

The home run, which everyone knows, was Irredeemable. A great, great story which keeps getting better. Unfortunately, Incorruptible does not match it. Maybe because villans are always more interesting. The Stan Lee titles are a total waste, expected from us!

CBLDF: Get the Liberty Annual 2010 just because you should. And yes there are interesting bits in it. Yes I know its Image.

Dark Horse: The restarts of Magnus Robot Fighter and Doctor Solar Man of The Atom have been a welcome addition to the comic world; Turok, not so much. Nice touch including the original story in the first issues. Anything related to the Hellboy Universe has been good and customers were positive about The Storm, Buzzard and the Plague Ships etc. I must admit that I thought Hellboy in Mexico was a fun read. Star Wars comics still were popular, and any story which focused on Boba Fett or Darth Vader especially so.

Dark Horse's restart of Magnus, Robot Fighter focused attention on the classic character. (#1 shown)

Dynamite Entertainment: Of course Green Hornet was hot with the movie looming on the horizon. I liked the variation on the original story. Certainly the Kato change was interesting. There was definitely customer interest, at least at first but with so many Green Hornet titles at once it had diminishing returns.

Garth Ennis's The Boys still continues to be a welcome antidote to the normal men in tights stories. Good stories and just waiting to see how it pans out with Butcher and friends. ENNIS! Jennifer Blood!! Highly anticipated at our stores, this will sell well. You rarely can go wrong when you buy the E's and M's! E's are Ennis and Ellis. M's are Millar, Alan Moore, G. Morrison, F. Miller! For those of you who are tired of the superhero dribble, check out anything done by these writers, past, present and future. There are other writers unmentioned, but by far, these writers have a track record and skill that deserves mention every year. Customers seem to be getting the Black Terror, Project SuperPowers mainly due to the Alex Ross cover art. Any cover done by him is desirable.

IDW Entertainment: I know G.I. Joe, Transformers and Star Trek are the big guys for this company but take a look at 5 Days to Die: A great story but not a happy one. Only 5 issues but a nice compact story and good art. Kill Shakespeare: Ok, remember all those guys that appear in the bard's plays? Well this is the true history. A good read. Strange Science Fantasy: A very odd and to use their words "bizarre landscapes and off the wall characters". Get it! Yours Truly Jack The Ripper: A faithful adaptation of Robert Bloch's short story or at least this is how I remember it. Very well done. John Byrne's Next Men: Lets hope John doesn't give up and stop. First issue sold well, story decent, art not as grand of old.

Image Comics: Mostly excellent for the true independent offerings of this umbrella company. Although, for the main titles and originators of the company, I never see anything new or good, art or story. I wish all below would just go to Vertigo, Dark Horse, IDW, Radical, BOOM! Anyhow, below are my positive reviews (minus Haunt):

Walking Dead: There is no more to say than that. The best; period; full stop. Chew: A light-hearted look at a man with a very difficult job. If you don't know what I mean then get the trades at least.

© Robert Kirkman

The Walking Dead (#1 shown) is Image's best title; period.

Shuddertown: Good gritty story about a female investigator in some fairly dark family business. Good read and positive feedback. Cowboy Ninja Viking: There are no words that will do this justice. You either love it or hate it. Hack/Slash: Customers like this take on killers, madmen and those that hunt them. Haunt: Sorry nothing special. First few issues sold well but I don't think it is moving much now. Meta 4: Ted McKeever has created another intriguing story/character. Worth investing the time/money. Sweets: Another odd detective tale but again worth the time.

ONI Entertainment: What can I say about Resurrection? Anything that has Bill Clinton in it should be good and it is. Good post-alien invasion story. Very positive feedback on The Sixth Gun. Good combination of horror and western. Scott Pilgrim: I know, I know it's old news but if I might cross sell for a moment: get the DVD. I have no financial interest but it is just a cool interpretation of a cool comic. And yes buy the comic. Movie bombed and did not deserve that fate. Bad timing for its release, which would fare better in mid-May than in summer. Teens' word of mouth is the best advertising.

Radical Publishing: From the customer's viewpoint, this is the best buy today for the price and page count. If those were the only reasons then it would be a "might buy", but the stories make it a must buy. Stories like Time Bomb, After Dark, Driver for the Dead, Shrapnel, and Hot Wire make for some of the best reading available. Hopefully the pending Damaged and Hollow Point will continue the trend. This company is cutting edge in all respects. High gloss prestige comics at $3.99-$4.99, excellent art (digital), and great stories. Even the $1 Mata Hari with the historic extra info at the back was an amazing buy.

Vertigo: Not an Indy but acts like one. Kudos to DC! Some of the best short and ongoing series appear under the Vertigo banner. Fables: Nothing else need to be said. The gold standard for Fairy tale/mundies stories. American Vampire: Another view of vampires and their interaction with mankind. Enjoyed the first story arc and it helped wash away the vileness of Twilight but that's another story. Air: I'm still not certain if I liked this but there was something compelling about it. I kept picking it up. Daytripper: I can't praise this enough and was sorry to see it end. Right now I would pick up anything done by Fabio Moon, The Daytripper stories went beyond just ordinary story telling. House of Mystery: Still good and enjoy seeing Cain once again even as a minor character. Hellblazer: At some point this will run out of steam but not yet. Customers still like Mr. Constantine. Northlanders: Lost me around issue #16 but customers still like it. The Unwritten: Sort of a whodunnit wrapped up in magic and books. Easier to read than explain but invest some time and catch up on the back issues. iZombie: OK, a ghost, a zombie and a wereterrier. I was hooked from issue one. Worthwhile investment of your time and money.

Zenescope: Grimm Fairy Tales, Neverland and Tales from Wonderland are still popular, but not as much as a year ago. Familiarity perhaps but the novelty may have worn off. And people who used to pick this up say it compares unfavourably to Fables which they prefer. Interestingly, these same people liked Escape from Wonderland. An up and coming company when Grimm first hit, has gone nowhere since. It needs new blood or stories or both!

Trades To Buy!

When you walk into your local comic book store, you are inundated with hundreds and thousands of trades, graphic novels and hardcovers. It is an excellent way for the infrequent reader to catch up on missed stories. It is also a great way to further your reading in genres and themes you had not done so before. So here I have made a list of stories in trade form that are worthy of your reading. I will attempt each year to add to this list.

Marvel Comics: Wolverine: Old Man Logan - another feat by Millar, by far the greatest seller of 2010. Excellent art, premise and story. Seeing Venom was a hoot!

Marvels - Alex Ross' 1994 masterpiece. Written by Busiek, story through eyes of a reporter from Marvel's 1960s beginning.

Kick-Ass - comic movie of the year 2010! Millar does it again. Excellent story on people trying to be heroes lacking powers, and getting really hurt.

Ultimate Wolverine vs Hulk - this book took forever to complete, but Lindelof and Yu made a great one time story.

Marvel Super Hero Secret Wars - OK, not the best story or art from this 1980s classic, but many adults grew up loving this maxi-series.Get the omnibus.

DC Comics: Batman: Dark Knight Returns - the best story written all-time! Frank Miller takes an aging Bruce out of retirement in this future timeline that lacks heroes.
Batman: Hush - get the complete trade with 13 issues. Jim Lee's art is spectacular. A mystery of sorts. This is your best starting point for Batman reading up to now.
Watchmen - Alan Moore phenom! Great movie, smart reading. Has it all. Only DK Returns compares. Trade is very affordable for all 12 issues.
Green Lantern: Rebirth - not just because of the movie, really well done, smartly written, and also good starting point for new GL readers.
Kingdom Come - the BEST Alex Ross art ever, and that is saying something. Futuristic Elseworlds. Just buy it!
Batman Vampire - a trilogy of trades in one affordable ($20) book. Batman vs Dracula! He has to synthesize vampirism to fight Draculas legions. Kelley Jones art to boot!
Batman: The Killing Joke HC - from 1980s, Joker long ago puts Babs in a wheelchair, creating Oracle. Alan Moore with Bolland. Awesome!
Independant Comic companies: Maus complete HC - tale of WWII, Nazis, holocaust of mice, just one of the best for a sad, smart read. Used in Universities and High Schools!
Irredeemable - by BOOM, story based on a great hero going bad, by Mark Waid who also wrote Kingdom Come!
The Walking Dead - need I say more? Buying the affordable Vol. 1 compendium for $60 gets you first 48 issues. Then trade volumes 9-up for the rest.
Bone - get the complete softcover, not the tons of trades. It is nice, well done, affordable, and Disney bought it for a good reason.
Time Bomb - by Radical, a simple 3-part story. Future soldiers go back to WWII in Germany! To me, anything Radical is worthy!
Crossed and Crossed Family Values - by Avatar. Really nasty stuff, great reading, NOT for kids or teens at all!
Vertigo by DC Comics: I could place everything in this section made by Vertigo, but I'll list the very best. Note, most Vertigo Vol. 1 trades go for around $9.99! A good test price.
Sandman - by Neil Gaiman, the grandaddy of all Vertigo. Not for everyone, very poetic and artsy, but amazing. Story based on the Endless, gods like Death!
Y, The Last Man - also a completed(now) tale, basis is that a virus wipes out all males on the planet, all but a guy and his monkey!
DMZ - ongoing, part of New York City is a DMZ, reporter goes in with Army on a photo-op and gets stuck there. Very political! "Can't trust the News" is its message.
Preacher - completed, by ENNIS! A young precher gets some god-like powers, starts travelling around U.S., amazing perfect run.
Fables - ongoing tale(s) of updated fairy tale characters brought to life in the city of Fabletown, where real life and crimes occur among New York citizens.

Back Issue Sales

Modern (1984-2009): Not much ever to say since it is a flatline in sales with few exceptions. The best in sales must be G.I. Joe and Transformers from the 1980s and anything Batman. I should mention New Mutants #86-100, especially #86,87,98 as these books are severly undervalued key books of the new age. New Mutants #98 listing at $25 for a NM- is a steal!
Copper Age - Late Bronze Age (1976-1984): The early 1980s low print DCs are a great investment and are going on 30 years! Actually most mainstream of any title is found quite low in cost here, readily available in high grade. And they are all verging on 30-40 years of age! Worthwhile unslabbed, especially anything DC like Flash, GL, WW, JLA!
Early Bronze Age (1970-1975): Near impossible to find high grade unslabbed copies, expect to pay premiums for anything key. I do not understand how a Green Lantern #76 can explode in price just like that where Batman #232,234, Detective #400 and Avengers #93 hover.
Yes GL #76 is an important issue with far reaching implications on society drawn by the amazing Neal Adams, but it seems too high. Lois Lane #106, Jimmy Olsen #134, Iron Man #55, Avengers #83,87,93-100, JLA #137,138 and ALL Wonder Woman #170-200 are all undervalued examples.
1960s Marvel: Always sells, always will, most copies fly in most grades. Name most anything, it sells. Fantastic Four #1-50 are my toughest requests to fill. Hottest book I'd say hands down is Journey Into Mystery #83 (scarce, low value comparitively) that is unattainable, Avengers #4 (abundant), Amazing Fantasy #15(hard to believe).
1960s DC: There are far less keys than in Marvels of the same time period, BUT.....what keys there are like Detective #369 or Wonder Woman #159 or Green Lantern #40 are far more affordable. Many early Neal Adams are still under radar and CHEAP compared to Green Lantern #76. JLA is going to explode very very soon. Watch out for that. If the upcoming Green Lantern movie has even half the quality of the Batman The Dark Knight, Brave and the Bold #28-30 and JLA #1-10 will disappear everywhere.
1960s other: My best sales are all TV/MOVIE related, especially WESTERNS! Yes, I said Westerns! Lone Ranger, Jace, Bonanza et al sell here quite well, though mostly in high grade. I sold 2 sets, complete(Dell, GK) of Wagon Train alone! Ducks are slower this year, Classics better. Original Charltons do well, especially Ditko.
Golden Age - Atomic Age (1938-1955): Any main title sells, all early Ditko and Horror sells just as fast. What doesn't sell to well are ECs. I did move some Batman, Detective, Superman, and even Mad #1 & 2. I'd have sold Action, but I can never get those in quantity. The same goes for Timely. If a Captain America or Human Torch or Marvel Mystery shows up, next day it is gone.

From year-to-year, there were recorded HUGE sales for Detective #27, Action #1 and some others; bigger than normal. For those who are not CEOs or movie stars, don't fret. You can always pick up #2s and the like for far less. Sure it will not make the news, BUT record sales of #1s typically are like an earthquake....follow up tremors and shockwaves occur 1-2 years following. If you time it well, you can reap rewards on your investment. For example....if in the Silver Age if Fantastic Four #1, AF#15, JIM#83, TOS#39 all exploded in sales, I'd start looking for Hulk #1, Daredevil #1, Tales to Astonish #27 and the like.

Toronto Conventions 2010: The biggest in the Toronto area is Hobbystar in late August. It draws everyone, fan artist writer corporate and the like. It is a tough venue to visit so prepare ahead. I move everything at this show. High end to low grade books, trades, and new releases.

The Comicfan Appreciation event in April by the same company is smaller, but it concentrates mostly on comics and is very worth the effort to go. Wizard hosted a show early in 2010, and with low turnout and non-comic guests, it was a disappointment for the fans. Perhaps if they do a 2011 or 2012 it will fare better?

Conclusion: The comic industry is heading in the right direction. AMC's Walking Dead TV series was properly done and had huge ratings. Some effect in sales, which is nice, but the validation that comics(mostly, except the BOOM, Marvel, DC "all audiences" line) are not for kids anymore, comics are smart, comics can be mature and not naughty, is what I get from it. This is an audience that was passed up previous decades in a comic store. Now, with companies like IDW, Radical and BOOM, we can read intelligent thoughts with art and no tights! Movies are also being thought out well. Sure Green Hornet may flop, and who could ever out perform Heath Ledger, and other productions will miss the mark (Scott Pilgrim was well done but flogged!) or timing, but we will get those high points again. Most likely a Kick-Ass 2 or Batman 3 or Avengers or JLA movie will be awesome if not all! And as shown above on Walking Dead, the TV option (live not animated) for comics has just begun!

Have a great, safe investing, happy reading year!

Loki's debut in Journey Into Mystery #85 makes this issue a key.

What, Me Recession? In this far-flung future world of 2011, I've now spent over 30 years as a dealer, 20 as a creator, and 10 as a publisher and distributor. We have now entered the era of 7-figure sales. The main effect of the economic downturn on our corner of the world has been a deluge of items offered for sale by hardcore collectors and fringe inheritors alike! I'm personally so swamped with collections offered for sale and consignment that I've teamed up with a few trusted fellow dealers to help me acquire and sell the constant influx of goodies, most notably Harvey Doss of Comic Man and Vince Dugar of The Golden Frog Curio and Emporium. A big shout-out to them both for their invaluable input for this market report!

Which Prices Should Go Up?: 3-D titles (all eras). Good through Fine prices for Platinum Age titles across the board and for DC, Quality, and Fiction House Golden Age books. Loose covers and pages of Golden Age keys and commons alike do well, as apparently there are still die-hards out there assembling their books the hard way! Increasingly hot are Atom and Silver Age Atlas/Marvel Pre-Code & Pre-Hero titles, especially Journey Into Mystery, Tales Of Suspense, and Tales To Astonish, including their Bronze and Modern Age reprints. All Marvels from 1962-1964 are increasing in demand. Silver Age Green Lantern & Thor keys (unless the movies tank!), especially Green Lantern #7 (1st Sinestro) & Journey Into Mystery #85 (1st Loki). Although already popular, the AMC series of The Walking Dead has made the title, like its antagonists, go "freakin' berserko"!

Which Prices Should Come Down?: 1980-2005 non-key books. Freeze Good though Very Fine for most late Silver though Copper Age books, as this market segment is soft, including (I kid you not!) X-Men and Spider-Man titles, which have leveled off except for Amazing Spider-Man #129 (1st Punisher) and Incredible Hulk #181 (1st Wolverine).

What are the Next Investment Frontiers?: Obviously, as the author and publisher of Fogel's Underground Comix Price Guide (2006) and Fogel's Underground Comix Price Guide Supplement (2010), I'm biased in the direction of this largely-untapped segment of the marketplace. What is indisputable is that "the big boys" have been stepping up selling and buying truly high-grade and rare, low print-run Underground comix for increasingly record amounts. The first printing (Plymell Edition) of Zap Comix #1 will probably have broken the $30K barrier for CGC-certified 9.4 or better by the time this sees print. No longer merely the "Action Comics #1 of the Undergrounds", this book is now the "UG Amazing Fantasy #15" now that it is poised to break out even as Silver Age Marvel, then DC, did 20 years ago! Look for Zap Comix #1 2nd print (Donahue Edition), and first prints of Zap Comix #0-4 to break out soon. Keep an eye on Tales From The Ozone #1 and the 1st prints of The Fabulous Furry Freak Brothers #1, Bijou Funnies #1, and Feds 'N' Heads. In general, you can't go wrong buying pre-1970 Robert Crumb, Gilbert Shelton, Art Spiegelman, Spain, Vaughn Bode, Robert Williams, Victor Moscoso, Rick Griffin, and S. Clay Wilson comix, portfolios, and posters!

In the near future I'll be delving deeper into 1930s-1970s comic book and science fiction fanzines, as well as 1960s Rock Posters. I recommend that you do the same!

Eternal thanx to my heroes/enablers, Bob Overstreet, Steve Geppi, J.C. Vaughn, and Mark Huesman of Gemstone

Our comic book market continues to chug along! Prices realized for Action #1 and Detective #27 set new records at the absolute top of our hobby. I always felt that one day, the one million dollar mark would be reached for the first Superman or Batman. That the market achieved both over a million dollars in a down economy is stunning! Private transactions for ultra high grade Marvel Keys from the Silver Age also defy gravity! Books from all the Ages, Gold, Silver and Bronze in FN or less seem to be more problematic for prices realized. Motivated dealers seem to be willing to discount in these grades, and turn their money over. True VF or better books often end up being slabbed and put into online auctions for best returns. I have found that true VF or better condition books in desirable Gold, Silver, and to a lesser extent Bronze titles are harder to come by. Their prices reflect this.

As I am a collector and not a dealer, I thought I would share my "collecting direction" since the last Guide came out. I have been sleuthing the comic stores here in Portland, Oregon and found some interesting targets of opportunity to purchase, which were:

Golden Age: Action Comics #31 VG/FN $429; Superman #4 VG/FN $770; Superman #6 FN- $60.

Silver Age: Brave and the Bold #45-49, all in 9.0 $350 total; Adventure Comics #301 VF $86; #307 NM- $110; #308 VF- $52; #311 VF- $55; #346 VF/NM $100; #353 NM+ $200.

Bronze Age: Full runs of The Shadow and Justice, Inc., all in high grade for a total of $210. Doctor Strange #170-183 in high grade for $250

My purchases were both for titles I'm chasing and also the aforementioned targets of opportunity. The Supermans and Action were nice paged and full color examples. All of these were from 1940 and are so charming in their content and art. How often does one get a chance to buy from a local "find" of Golden Age in nice shape? Not very!

Adventure Comics featuring the Legion of Super-Heroes continue to be difficult to find in high grade, but I am closing in on finishing them up. Those Brave and the Bold issues were the "Strange Sports Stories" run featuring Carmine Infantino art in his prime. I remember these being touted heavily in the house ads of the day with DC, and I think they are clever and fun stories! In Bronze, the Kaluta *Shadow*s are always great to have, and Kirby laid hands on the Justice issues. These pulp homages were short lived, but good.

The sophistication, knowledge and market venues for comics today have increased noticeably. There is so much information available today online and in print, collectors and investors have a wealth of data to make informed decisions and purchases.

All of this helps translate healthy interest and continued strength for our hobby. A final word: I admit I am old school when it comes to comic collecting. That is, collecting an actual "book" to hold and enjoy. The upcoming digital comic product will appeal to many younger and computer-savvy readers, but as a collectable, tangible memory, I think digital comics are a "bird". Just saying...

The sale of Action Comics #1 in VF+ for $1,500,000 made news internationally this year. That sale, and others, verified the intrinsic value of the comic book as a genuine American artifact. It also demonstrated that even in difficult economic times, the high end items still sell – to those who can afford them. The general public may not know it, but below Action #1 are numerous other highly desirable comics which have held their value or appreciated in value over time. Comics are a good investment.

That said, the market in our neighborhood reflects only moderate sales and frequent discounts. Economists may say the recession is over, but high unemployment persists. Disposable income is down and to some extent, the Age of Frugality is upon us. There is a bright side for collectors in that bargains abound in just about every area except for the most sought after high grade, CGC graded books. Mid-grade Golden Age comics look pretty good at today's prices, as do many obscure titles published during the Atomic Age. It is a good time to buy.

Trends can be difficult to discern, but some are inescapable, especially for those of us who grew up in the Golden and Atomic Ages. Comics which are not generation-skipping ordinarily do not attract younger collectors new to the hobby. Sadly, this applies to older Westerns and many of the Dell titles. We also observe an oversupply of comics from the late Silver Age and early Bronze Age. Demand has yet to catch up with the many copies available. Here is the market as we see it.

The Golden Age: Timelys remain highly desirable, as they usually are, but copies offered at multiples of Guide are a bit off-putting these days.

© DC

Adventure Comics with the Legion are difficult to find in high grade. (#354 shown)

Captain America, Human Torch and Marvel Mystery are often out of range for the average collector. Some of the second team Timelys are not turning up that often, such as Mystic, USA, and Young Allies, and they sell briskly when available.

On the other hand, Golden Age DCs in GD, VG and FN are reasonably priced at this point. There is heavy demand for Action #1-125, All-American #16 on, Detective #27-38 and all issues of Batman, Superman and Adventure under #100. More than ever, collectors are gobbling up Wonder Woman and Sensation, with good reason. The lower numbers are beautiful, unique books. The same may be said of Leading and More Fun. But it is still all about pricing.

Fawcett titles are slow but steady. Master Comics with Raboy art are reliable sellers. So are low number Whiz Comics. Captain Marvel, Captain Marvel Jr. and Marvel Family plod along at very reasonable prices. Nedor comics, especially Startling and Exciting with Schomburg covers, are a good value. Fiction House books are also slower than before, but there is demand for Wings and Planet.

The Atomic Age: This era is perhaps the most mysterious and unpredictable of all, maybe because of the tremendous proliferation of titles after WWII. Every year we find Atlas titles to be the best sellers, but one never knows. We acquired a collection of Comics on Parade, Fritzi Ritz and Nancy and Sluggo (all relatively inexpensive) and off they went. Romance titles with great artists like Simon and Kirby are solid comics and they find new homes. ECs are slow to moderate, but by the same token, we can sell pre-trends like Blackstone and Tiny Tots.

In our view, the crime and war titles from this period are undervalued and perhaps underappreciated. They go to collectors of these genres at bargain prices. We are often surprised when we sell off-beat DC titles like Leave It to Binky, but we do. Some of the Harvey titles from this time are likewise good comics and trade hands at reasonable prices, lately Green Hornet in particular. Early Archie comics sell nicely, as do low numbers of Jughead, Reggie and Betty and Veronica.

Dell comics, regrettably, remain slow sellers. Tarzan, drawn by Jesse March, is actually excellent comic art, and sales have picked up somewhat, especially the lower numbers. Walt Disney comics, with the exception of high grade, early Carl Barks Ducks, are also slow, although they do better in foreign markets. Some Dell Westerns move with their photo covers, but not very quickly. It seems there were just too many of these "clean, wholesome" comics distributed back then. Today, there are not enough collectors to absorb them. Early Little Lulu does well, though.

The Silver Age: Marvel's dominance over the Silver Age has been met with reinvigorated collector interest in DCs. This is not to say that fandom's romance with Marvels is over, rather that some degree of balance has been restored.

For serious DC collectors, the tough issues are those from the early Silver Age (or late Atomic Age, depending on how you look at it). Issues published between, say, 1954 to 1959 are in somewhat short supply, especially in condition. It seems that some of these books were simply not well constructed to begin with, and they wore out more quickly. Included in this group are Action, Adventure, Batman, Detective, Superman and World's Finest. Demand for specific issues of Showcase and Brave and the Bold is palpable, but once again, the price tag is a huge factor in selling these comics. Many collectors are willing to settle for low to mid-grade copies at reasonable prices.

Second tier DC titles have not fared as well of late, although there is renewed interest in Green Lantern. Demand for Atom, Aquaman, Hawkman, Challengers, Sea Devils and the like has not been strong, but Wonder Woman is heating up nicely.

Later Silver Age DC issues, from 1962 to 1968, seem to be in abundant supply in all grades. Perhaps too many collections have been dumped on the market in recent times. They move slowly, with the exception of certain keys in high grade.

Marvels are still in demand, although lower numbers in condition generate some sticker shock. As in the past, Amazing Spider-Man and Fantastic Four lead the way, followed by Incredible Hulk #1 to 6. Early issues of Tales of Suspense are hot, for obvious reasons. Avengers and Silver Surfer are doing well. But as with DCs, higher numbers of these titles are so readily available that demand has yet to rise to absorb them.

The Convention Scene: In previous reports, we suggested that the San Diego convention has become an extension of the motion picture business. Comic books are a subsidiary interest. The Chicago Wizard convention suffers from an overdose of popular culture in general. We understand that former Illinois governor Rod Blagojevich was in attendance this year, signing autographs at $50 a pop. Comical maybe, but not a comic book. We do not set up at either show.

The Reed-produced C2E2 show in Chicago last spring was well managed and presented in a pleasant environment at the McCormick Center. However, only about one third of the space was devoted to the sale and display of back issue comics. There were not enough serious buyers and sales were slow. Time will tell with this one.

Meanwhile, local and regional shows tend to focus more on comics. The Oklahoma Alliance of Fandom ("OAF") is one of fandom's oldest non-profit comic book clubs. Led by master collectors Bart Bush and Robert Brown, OAF will present another down home convention at the Biltmore in Oklahoma City on November 12 and 13, 2011. If you want an old-fashioned comic book show with friendly dealers and reasonable prices, then come on down.

Conclusions: We think the market for back issue comics will improve gradually over the next few years, assuming the economy is restored to normal levels. Even so, those of us who influence pricing should be cautious and should avoid pushing prices upward too soon. We must always be mindful of the financial limitations on the average collector.

The purchasers of Action #1 and Detective #27 at astronomical prices have not revealed their identities. We may assume they are far more wealthy than most of the people who collect comics and who trust the Guide when they make their purchases. This is all the more reason why we should keep these recent sales in perspective. Comic collecting will live long and prosper only so long as the average fan is able to afford the books he wants.

Jason Hamlin and Brett Carreras
Brett's Comic Pile, LLC

2010 Market Report (by Jason Hamlin): First let me say what an honor it is to become an advisor to the Guide I have been reading/ studying/ memorizing since I got my first one in 1985! We feel truly honored to be in such esteemed company. 2010 was a challenging year for comics retailing to say the least. We did a number of national shows to varying degrees of success, the best of which for us were the New York Comicon, Wizard World Philadelphia, and Heroes Con in Charlotte. It's a shame the NYCC got moved to the fall from early spring. It's usually a nice jump start for the con season! The C2E2 in Chicago was a very well organized show, although sales were very slow for us, but I can see it becoming an excellent show in the future. The NYCC seems to have better attendance every year, and almost seemed almost too crowded for shoppers on Saturday! We took two vans to Charlotte and Philadelphia, where we had dozens of boxes of good runs of 1970s to present bagged, boarded and in order books for $1 each. They sold like hotcakes, people were filling in runs in huge stacks. It's always great to see people buying old comics just to read.

On the other hand, I can't count the number of people at conventions looking strictly for ultra-high grade keys. At every show we get asked multiple times a day, and a VF just won't do for many. It seems that many people want to invest in comics in these tough economic times and only the best will do. We just don't have enough of this stuff to go around! Considering the economic downturn, it's surprising how hard of a time we had restocking and finding collections to sell. I guess the competition in our area is getting tougher outside of the uber-high grade key crowd people who seemed to be buying less expensive books on the whole. Nice condition semi-key Bronze and Silver books moved very well this year if priced right.

Other Trends (by Brett Carreras): 2010 brought a TON of change for Brett's Comic Pile. We moved into a new warehouse in historic Richmond, we became the top seller on Comic Collector Live, we acquired our largest and most important single collection to date (2,000 Golden Age, 20,000 Silver Age, and 200,000 Bronze Age), operated the largest comic book convention EVER in Virginia, the VA Comicon on Nov 20-21, with Top Cow, Fangoria, Zenescope, Moonstone, Larry Hama and Ethan Van Sciver in attendance, we set up at over 20 national and regional shows, and two of our staff were invited to be Overstreet Advisors! Whew!

2010 had a frustratring convention schedule for us, as MANY of the shows we usually attend were moved on the calendar. Major shows were scheduled right on top of one another, and we had to wait almost a year and a half between New York Comicons. An exhausting show schedule in 2010 should hopefully be relieved a bit, as we spent that same year listing almost 200,000+ individually graded comics on ComicCollectorLive.com. Any collector who is not using this website is wasting his/her time and money. Imagine it as "eBay, but only for comic books, everything is fixed priced, and it has the easiest search function in the world." By the way, registration is FREE, and their electronic wantlist service is FREE! We have almost 20,000+ positive feedback on eBay, and CCL is STILL our absolutely BEST sales avenue. We have a single full-time lister on this site, who is averaging hundreds of new comic listings daily. We hope to have over 350,000 comics on the CCL system by the time you read this article, at our website BrettsComicPile.com. We will also be scaling back our convention schedule in 2011, focusing on shows that seem to consistently work for us. If you see us at a con please bring your wantlists, as we love to fill them for people!

Golden Age: We have tried testing the Golden Age market in the past, with varying success. Now we bring between 2-6 short boxes of Guide-priced Golden Age books to shows. Because of the cost of replacement on these books, we often try to replace from other dealers' inventory. Because of the scarcity of these comics, we purchase ONLY what we find to be interesting, including cool covers, or interesting artists, or even just the random off the wall book, as long as we can price them at or under $100. It has been a fun experiment so far, and we are looking forward to delving more into this market. We REALLY like the dynamic covers by L.B. Cole, especially affordable copies. I purchased a copy of Mask Comics #1 from my good friend Guy Rose, and within a month, sold it to a client for double Guide. One comic book we can NEVER find, and one that I think is TRULY rare is Pep #26. This is the first appearance of Veronica Lodge, who I believe may be the best-selling female comic book character of all time. When this book DOES come to market, it seems to fetch 3x Guide restored, and 6x Guide unrestored!

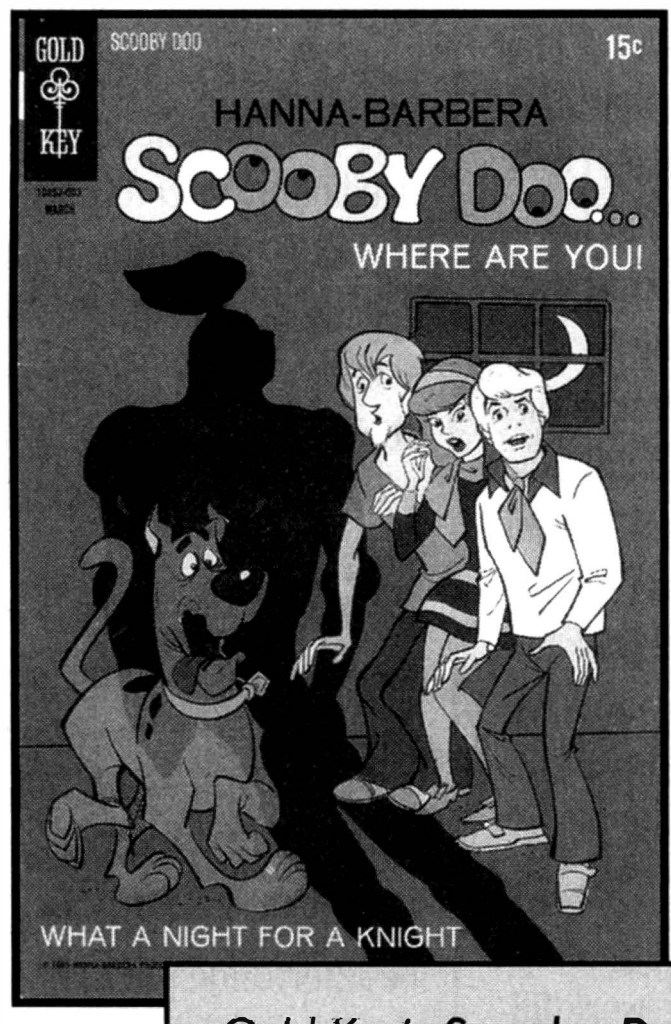
Silver Age: The hot DC books are Green Lantern #7 (always asked for...we haven't had this book in 2 years!), and Detective Comics #359. Neal Adams' Batman and GL/GA books are great sellers as always. 12¢-cover Detective and Batman comics priced AT Guide, for less than $20 zip out of our boxes, and low grade copies online FLY at $10 or less each! I think we could sell EVERY Flash #110-130 if they were low grade, priced AT Guide...IF we could find them! These early Flash books are awesome, but are an example of something that has actually been priced OUT of the range of your average collectors...even low grade copies are a stretch for most people this year. Other Silver DCs that sell are the war titles, Green Lantern, and truthfully not much else. GD to VG units of other titles move if discounted properly. Otherwise, DC is ice-cold. A Genuine rarity? A DC comic book published before 1963 in VF- or better. All non-key Superman sales continue to slip, except for early Krypto and Supergirl appearances.



Marvel Silver Age books that sell well for us are Spidey (of course), Fantastic Four #52, Daredevil #16, Avengers #57, ALL Steranko issues, Captain America #100 and #117, Amazing Spider-Man #39 and #50, and Strange Tales #135, which seems to be asked for quite a lot lately. All 1964 and before issues, especially Avengers #1-9, Journey #83-100, Hulk #1-6, Tales #39-59, Spidey 1-20, X-Men #1-5, 12 and Fantastic Four #1-30. Iron Man #1s are very sellable in any grade. I wish I had them all…but these collections don't turn up very often. All Silver seems to go in two different directions for us….Low grade and CHEAP ($5-10), or High-Grade/important and IMPOSSIBLE to replace (over $100). Two different markets, but I wish they would figure out how to meet in the middle, and start looking at MID-GRADE books! It's very hard to move mid-grade books, even with STEEP discounting of non-key, non-Amazing Spider-Man Marvels.

Bronze Age: Leading into the Bronze Age, we had a new rarity rise to the top: Fantastic Four #110 Variant. This is MUCH more rare than most people imagine, as the ONLY copy that we had all year sold to a DEALER in GD+ for $50! The Usual Suspects sit at the top of the Marvel heap again this year: Hulk #181, Spidey #129, Tomb of Dracula #10, Marvel Spotlight #5, Ghost Rider #1, same as the last few years. Defenders #10 seemed to slow a bit, while Iron Man #128 and Thor #225 seemed to move very fast. Iron Man #55 used to sell at about the same as Iron Man #1 in GD to VG/FN, but has settled back into the $50 range for a VG.

Bronze Age African-American characters saw continued interest, with Hero for Hire #1 impossible to keep in stock in any grade better than VG, and #2-5 selling briskly. Black Panther appearances in Jungle Action sell through, with very attractive copies hard to find, and priced well at Guide. We have definitely noticed a trend over the last couple of years that lots of non-key VF or better Bronze books are being bought. Most of these books in nicer shape sell for $8-12. Good sellers of the 1970s include Captain America (which are surprisingly affordable, even in VERY nice shape!), Black Panther, Thor, Avengers, Iron Man, Nova, Hanna-Barbera titles, and of course Spider-Man. 20¢-cover titles seem to be impossible for us to find in nice condition, and are a steal when priced at Guide for nice copies, especially Avengers, and Captain America. Sadly, late 1970s X-Men have cooled quite a bit, with only the "Days of Future Past" run commanding Guide prices. With so many great titles during this time period pricing out at less than the cover price of a new book in low grades, the one slow ground seems to be Mid-grade non-key Bronze, which has to be priced like a GD/VG to move even if it is a FN.

DC Bronze sales are led by a single comic…Green Lantern #76. We have had three copies in the past year, and they all sold for 2-3x Guide, with the best copy coming in at FN. I think this is going to be another comic that most vendors can say "Whatever shape it is in, I can sell it" just like Incredible Hulk #181. No matter what the Guide says, if a vendor takes less than $200 for ANY copy of Incredible Hulk #181 (as long as it has the cover), they are missing out. I think Green Lantern #76 is a comic that should NEVER be sold for less than $100…and in a few short years, should be more. Bronze Batman sell well, as do all of the horror books, great bargains in VF or lower condition.

Gold Key's Scooby Doo #1 is impossible to find.

1980s to Present: We have expanded our reach of this market in the last 18 months. For many casual collectors, this is the time period that they remember, and grew up on. As much as I love Silver and Bronze books, we see this time period as being the EASIEST to sell, AND get collections. One thing to note for this time period, with VERY few exceptions, there are only two grades for this time period of importance: 1) VF/NM or better. 2) Everything else.

Here's something to consider from history. Pre-DC-Explosion Bronze are GREAT sellers, and are in demand, especially the late 1970s dollar books. DC 1970s and 1980s are much more in demand than 1960s DCs for us, even in the same titles. Pre-Crisis 1980s DCs are on the move, finally achieving Guide prices without hesitation (if $9 or below). DC titles include Teen Titans, Batman (moving VERY quickly for us), Justice League of America (from #150-200), Flash, and Green Lantern. Green Lantern is hot across the board, as issues from the last 5-10 years sell quickly as well. Investing for the future (or just want an AWESOME read for under $10)? Check out Sgt. Rock, or any ongoing DC horror book from 1981-1983. Low print runs, great artwork, and surprisingly hard to find in grade. Our late 1970s and early 1980s Batman section is almost gone!

Marvel best sellers include Amazing Spider-Man, X-Men, G.I. Joe, Iron Man, and Daredevil. Early '80s Marvels are very plentiful, but also great reads, and most of the major titles still hold up well today.

Strong post-1986 sellers for us include: Spawn #100 and up, Invincible, the last 20 or so G.I. Joe (Marvel) issues, Harley Quinn (ESPECIALLY her pre-solo-title appearances, Mad Love was fetching $40, now $30, and the one-shot with her first DCU appearance fetched $35-40), Miracleman #9 and up, and low print-run Archie and Image Turtles comics (from 1997 to 2002)! Many of these had GREAT covers by Mirage artists, and regularly sell through at the $4-8 range. Our two most requested books of the last year remain Y: The Last Man and Walking Dead #1. Y sells for $100, and Walking Dead #1 seems to have settled at a whopping $275 online...When was the last time ANYTHING like this happened? Harbinger #1? Turtles #1? I expect Walking Dead #1 to hold its value now that the TV show has proven successful.

Deadpool has finally cooled down quite a bit. He has plenty of titles to keep his fans interested in current stories, though New Mutants #98 STILL moves at Guide. This could have been due to the overexposure Marvel gave him. Seems like he was on about 200 different covers last year. G.I. Joe #21 still sells quickly for $50-60 in VF/NM or better, but even beat up copies and second prints are easy to sell. Simpsons, Futurama and Sonic comics did VERY well for us this year. The Futurama #1 San Diego Variant sold at $25 in VF for us, with individual Sonic comics going for AT LEAST $6 and Giants (#50, 75, 100) at $10! We can't keep these in stock, as the print runs are pretty low, and a lot of them are sold to casual readers more so than traditional collectors. Another licensed comic we were THRILLED to find copies of is Comic Smorgasbord #1, a 1994 Transformers bot-con exclusive. Only 500 were made, and the shipment got lost at the con, so only a handful ever made it to the public. This is possibly the rarest recognized Transformers comic book ever made, and when we get them, we price them about the same as a Marvel Transformers #1, and our customers are eager for the opportunity to own this elusive comic!

Other Publishers: All Archies and Harveys sell quickly, especially pre-1964. Post-1969 issues sell if discounted, and rarely for more than $5 each. The Gold Key Scooby Doo #1 is impossible to find. When we get them, they sell for double Guide, UP to $100. 1970s on up is at a crawl, unless you can find high-grade, but even then it's a select market. Strangely, Phantom comics from ALL publishers sell at or above Guide, and we have sold through on Tarzan and Godzilla comics published after 1986. Dell and Gold Key *Tarzan*s also sell well. We try to have a strong assortment of independent and interesting modern comics, and do quite well with them at shows. Top sellers for us in this category include: Love and Rockets (the Black and White self published #1 proto-issue is a steal at $100-125), Eightball, Chris Ware stuff, THB, and anything else by Paul Pope. One rarity from the West Coast we have had a few times is the Dark Horse San Diego Comicon Comics #2, featuring Hellboy. This one doesn't show up as often on the East Coast, and we predict it will crack $100 asking in perfect shape by the end of the year, as great copies are presently fetching $75 easily. Underground comix sales seemed to slow from the previous couple years, except for Cherry, which we sold completely out of this summer, and got asked for a few times per show. Another more risque book which sold well for us was the Tarot Witch: Website Edition of #1 which was a steady seller at $40.

Thank you again for inviting us to be Overstreet Advisors! Have a GREAT 2011!

For the first time since I have been a comic book collector in the past 15 years, I would have to report that overall things were weaker in the vintage market than in the previous year. Auction results seemed slower for a great deal of the material, sales at shows seemed to be weaker and there were more discounts offered by many dealers to move more product than ever before. Naturally, the very top end of the market remained strong with top prices for truly rare pieces or unique ultra high grade.

I'm sure everyone reading this report is aware of the strong reported sales for the multiple Action Comics #1s sold by ComicConnect and the sales of Detective Comics #27s sold by Heritage. I think sales like this that are picked up by the media are excellent for our hobby and important for the market. With that said, the concern that was expressed throughout most of 2010 for the vintage market in other facets, mostly from late Silver Age (1966 forward) and on, is that the material sits and sits. There is just an overwhelming amount of 1970s Bronze age books and the market is flooded. In addition, the practice of pressing has ruined a good deal of the scarcity and fun of collecting the high end portion of that market because high grade copies are always available and if there isn't one in existence, one can be produced with a little effort through multiple attempts at pressing (there are notable exceptions like notoriously difficult books like Avengers #103 in 9.4 or better). Even late Silver Age is beginning to see a trend of falling prices due to supply become more readily available. With a widening gulf between top end prices and more common material, dealers who do not adjust to current pricing trends will begin to see their material continue to sit in their boxes, scratching their heads wondering why their VF and below books do not sell for Guide prices. The market is evolving and has been for some time. In a weaker economy, this is the segment that becomes exposed.

I attend many shows, both small and large, throughout the year, and I believe the above sentiment would have been even more pronounced but for this year's New York Comic Con put on by Reed Promotions. A first rate show (and it still has a few minor things to fix) with first rate talent and organization, Reed gave the New York comic book fans the show it deserved. Comic book fans responded in droves and the attendance figures I heard afterwards were in the neighborhood of 90,000 – 120,000 fans through the doors. In speaking with many of the vintage dealers who set up, almost all reported strong sales. This was a reverse in the trend of struggles and down sales that was the talk prior to New York. From expensive vintage books to dollar books, product seemed to be moving rapidly, and I witnessed many transactions of common books selling for strong prices. I'm not sure that New York can truly be said to be the "norm" for the current state of the market, but I can say that it is an indication that there is a whole segment of collectors who shop, buy vintage and are not doing extensive research on what a Fine book sells for in various sectors of the market. Instead, they see a book, they look at the price, they have some vague sense of its value, and decide whether to spend the money. These collectors are an entirely separate part of the vintage market, and probably the greater number than the experienced collector. While they probably spend less than $100 or $200 on books and are looking for quantity, they can easily be drawn in by discounts and accurate grading. Unfortunately, not enough dealers are following this trend to capture this business – yet.

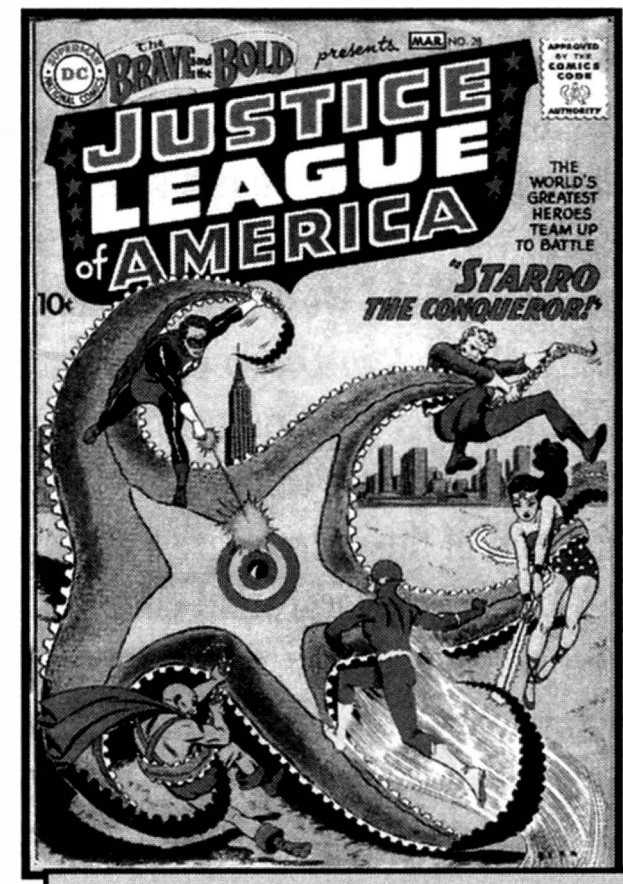
As a side note, Wizard Productions ran a show in New York that was poorly attended the week before the Reed New York show. Like many people, I would have loved to have gone to that show and hope that they will move the show to another point in time away from the Reed show. I think it would benefit not only Wizard, but also it would really benefit the fans. Too many shows bunched too close together in both time and geography won't help anyone.



As part of my job, I have the opportunity to travel very frequently which gives me the opportunity to visit a number of comic book stores. Unfortunately, only a small number of them devote any space or effort to back issues and an even smaller number are able to provide accurate grading with an understanding of proper pricing. Those that do, I find, have a strong base following with customers who certainly have an appetite for vintage material. Again, pricing is key. Of course, I understand that new books and other products are truly the lifeblood of the comic book store and where they have to make their money.

One of the best examples of a store that knows how to grade, price and make an active continuous profit off of back issues and vintage material is Zapp Comics in Wayne, NJ owned by Ben Lichtenstein. For well over a decade, Ben has aggressively pursued collections, processes them quickly, but most importantly, grades accurately and prices fairly. New Jersey is also an extremely competitive area for vintage comics, and Ben does an excellent job obtaining fresh material. It's a first rate experience and if you are interested in vintage comics and in the New Jersey area, Zapp Comics is the cream of the crop.

Other first rate comic book stores I can highly recommend are: Bedrock City in Houston, TX owned by Richard Evans, Comic Universe in Folsom, PA owned by Frank Link, Collectors Corner in Parkville, MD owned by Randy Myers, Geoffrey's Comics in Los Angeles, CA, Main Street Comics in Milltown, NJ owned by Mike Pfiefer, Chicago Comics in Chicago, IL, and Eide's Entertainment in Pittsburgh, PA owned by Greg Eide.

I will throw out a topic that I think is going to bear watching over the next 5 or 10 years. Golden Age has always typically been thought of as the "top end" of our hobby. Books such as Action #1, Detective Comics #27 etc. will continue to remain the most important books. However, as time wears on the collectors who grew up with the Golden Age books get older, I predict that these books will become less and less significant to collectors as a whole. Will books such as All-American #16 and All-Flash #1 remain as desirable to many collectors to own? Will many minor titles like Blue Bolt or even later All Star Comics or many of the Fiction House books continue to have wide enough fan bases to maintain good long term stable prices? Will common run G.A. Green Lanterns, All-American Comics and even Supermans and Batmans still be as desirable at their current Guide prices? My wager is on "no". While Schomburg-covered Timelys and the core DC characters will maintain their popularity, I believe that many of the G.A. books will continue to decrease in popularity over time with many of them becoming harder and harder sellers with less and less interest at the prices currently listed. I'm sure there are many older collectors who may scoff at this notion, saying that G.A. will always be the hardest and rarest of all books to find and collect. It's possible that they're right. However, it is the Silver Age characters who are enjoying most of the focus and attention in the mainstream media, and I believe that many G.A. books will still be rare, but with fewer and fewer collectors actively seeking them out. Silver will become the new Gold.

Aside from the Action #1 and Detective #27 sales, Marvel keys remained incredibly strong overall. This is probably reflected by every other market report in this Guide and should come as no surprise to anyone. Pre-1965 Marvels and DCs from 1955-1962 also remained strong, most specifically in high grade. Green Lantern #76 saw its first CGC 9.8 grade given out with the book to be auctioned in an upcoming Heritage Auction. As it has continued to do for the past several years, Green Lantern #76 remained consistently strong in almost all grades. In addition, DC keys like Showcase #22 and Brave and the Bold #28 are seeing increased interest due to a variety of speculative factors. I believe this trend will continue as these characters gain in popularity and people discover how scarce DCs of this time period are in comparison to their Marvel counterparts. Journey Into Mystery #83, along with Journey Into Mystery's in general, have regained increased interest and attention. It is one of the tougher early Marvel runs to put together in high grade, with more collectors looking for them due to the Thor movie. Batman in Gold, Silver, and Bronze remain good sellers across the board. Neal Adams Batman/Detective books are almost routinely missing from dealers' inventories in both stores and at shows. You should completely forget about finding nice runs of these in high grade as they are almost immediately snatched up. There is a much more narrow subset of books that I would buy universally when I see them, but Neal Adams drawn books require a much thinner margin to work on because of how rapidly I can move them. Frankly, I am offered so much quality material by a variety of outlets, aside from keys and early material, I am not enthusiastic about buying common Silver and Bronze Age unless at deep discounts.

The auction market is definitely becoming interesting to watch as each auction house has been settling into a role for some time now. For the most part, Heritage is the place to go for Golden Age and Original Art, ComicLink for high end Silver and Bronze Age, and ComicConnect stealing a bit of every facet from the other two. Surprisingly, ComicConnect has generated some very strong results in a short amount of time and has become a real force on the auction market. Still, the primary auction houses that remain strongest are Heritage and ComicLink. Pedigree Comics, owned by Doug Schmell, is also a site that runs comic auctions, but mostly focuses on high grade Marvels. While a definite presence, the auction market is generally controlled by the three houses mentioned above.

I would end my report with a similar sentiment to how I opened it. There is a tremendous amount of interest in the vintage market. I think there are plenty of collectors and interest in comics in general. However, I believe that there has been a slow correction over the past few years, and I believe that correction needs to continue. Sellers should expect that for the most part, they will need to adjust to offering deeper discounts on common material if they are interested in moving product on a rolling basis. While some shows like New York may provide for buyers interested in paying Guide prices even for common material, for the most part buyers are looking for discounts because there is clearly a perception that there are plenty of deals to be had if you are patient. More importantly, I think there should be a scale back in the overall prices for most common books from 1966 forward. Most are not rare and as dealers will tell you, they have warehouses full of the stuff. If there is a shift to moving product and not sitting on it, dealers, collectors and the market will all benefit because ultimately, more money will be infused back into the market.

Fantasy-Comics

Overall comic book sales remained steady for us throughout the year. Online sales continue to show gains in overall dollar volume based on quality and number of items listed. Fresh to the market and strictly graded books still continue to command Guide prices even in low to mid grades.

Many dealers report a weakening of sales prices when selling through venues such as eBay. Our sales show no softening of prices online. The fixed price format may take longer for an item to sell but a buyer will eventually come along that will pay Guide for nearly any book out there. We did offer some discounts of 10% to 20% on older inventory and noted that books sold at a brisk pace which means that there is some price sensitivity out there but there is also tremendous demand. The auction format is the right way to go for the truly unique ultra high grade and certified book where you can still consistently see multiples of Guide.

It is interesting to note the comic book market reflects structural trends that have been occurring in the overall U.S. economy as far as increasing wealth concentration of the very rich and escalating attention and compensation paid to superstar performers. In comics you can continue to see this trend as high end prices continue to escalate and overall prices on everything else remain relatively stagnant. What does this mean as far as investing in the comic book market goes? If you can afford it, buy important keys such as Action #1 and Detective #27. Silver Age books such as Amazing Fantasy #15 even in low grade are worth accumulating. Buy low to mid grade to read and enjoy and put together runs of your favorite titles but don't expect major price appreciation.

On the buying side we purchased four decent original owner collections during the year consisting of complete or near-complete runs of Silver and Bronze age Marvel and DC issues. While I have put in a twenty year career in banking and gave it up to pursue comics full time, if there is one reason that truly makes it worthwhile it is chasing down these collections. There is nothing quite like seeing old books in nice grades in its original state and learning how they were collected by the owner.

We did most of the major shows during the year primarily with an inventory of low to mid grade Silver and better Moderns. There seems to be an endless demand for low grade Silver. Just to note while many of the Silver and Bronze issues have been reprinted in Trade format, there is nothing like holding and reading the original comic book. Attendance at all the shows remain solid with an eager buying public. We met many important contacts and made valuable friends and look forward to the upcoming year.

Philip M. Levine and Jeff Rader
Paperpeddler Rare and Esoteric Comics and Collectibles

I'm Jeff Rader, and on behalf of myself and Phil Levine, let me give you a "Spoiler Alert". If you are in search of sales data on high grade Silver Marvels and DCs you will be sorely disappointed. If you are into the type of great items that fly under the radar of most, or are seeking a fun, different area of collecting, then we hope you will find something that catches your eye.

Phil has been in the comic dealing business since he started flipping back issues on the school yard in 1954. From there he graduated to making regular pilgrimages to the Passaic Book Center in the late '50s to stock up on the "good stuff". He began doing mail order in the late '60s, and started doing the convention scene in 1984. I have been an obsessive reader, researcher, indexer, and part-time dealer since being dragged to coin conventions by my Dad since I was 7 years old in '73. The only thing that caught my eye at the coin conventions were the stacks of old comics that many coin dealers had lying around. While I have been selling as Offbeat-Archives for the past decade or so I am much more of a reader and researcher and indexed for the APA-I, contributed marketplace reports to Comic Book Marketplace, and have been taking notes on every tiny nuance of every comic that has gone through my hands for nearly 4 decades.

Phil has been acquiring items, collections, and warehouses, for decades and we have finally decided that the time is right to go into high gear and start bringing to market the millions of items that Phil has been stocking up on forever.

Our areas of expertise are those that most others do not specialize in so we get the pleasure of reporting on items that are often overlooked by mainstream collectors. While the Million Dollar Babies, Action Comics #1, and Detective Comics #27, have brought our "little" hobby to the attention of the world there is a lot more to our pastime than the casual looker will ever know. The types of items we specialize in are pretty much the opposite of the headline-grabbers. We have a knack for digging up those that elude even the most knowledgeable collectors.

We primarily sell on eBay, and direct-to-collector dealings, but by the time this report sees print we will have three new specialty sites up and running, one devoted to collectibles that are not found everyplace else; the rare/esoteric/offbeat stuff that is still largely uncharted territory, along with a HUGE assortment of anything else imaginable. Since we do not deal in slabbed books, or specialize in whatever the current trend might be, we get a different view of the market than most. We have proven that once a reputation of solid, tight, grading is established raw books will still go for a nice price. Correctly graded, described, and reasonably priced books will almost always find a new home. The main thing we have found works out great with us that the BEST thing for business is a happy buyer. A large percentage of our customers come back for more, and often buying things that were not on their want lists in the first place.

I love reading through an Amazing Fantasy #15 just as much as the next fiend but most of these type books have skyrocketed out of the reach of collectors and into the realm of deep-pocketed investors. There are so many overlooked, un-researched, and outright ignored publishers, genres, and titles out there that I'll bet if any collector took a step out of their normal collecting parameters they would find something that they would love, and for a fraction of the price. Sample a few different types of books that you have not tried before and you may just find that you have been chasing the wrong "Grail" all this time. Odds are we may just have it.

Giveaways: One area of comic collecting that has something for everybody is Giveaways, and we just happen to have the largest collection of them ever amassed. Most of the upper-tier characters appeared in giveaways over the decades, Superman, Spider-Man, Batman, Captain Marvel, you name it and there's a good chance some company used them to promote their product, or further their cause. Genres that do not even exist in mainstream comics have a place in giveaways. How in the world would you classify Doc Carter VD Comics (or its unlisted follow-up), or a Charlie Brown with Sally comic entitled, "Security is an Eye Patch"? Collect Timelys? Give The Adventures of Big Boy a shot (and you might even get lucky enough to pick up an issue done by Human Torch artist, Bill Everett. Political/war comics? Go nab a Comic Cavalcade "Tomorrow the World". Religion? This genre is a goldmine with the Catechetical Guild and their Blood is the Harvest or If the Devil Would Talk, and we have them all. You EC collectors aren't left out either because they put out a few themselves; Lucky Fights it Through, The K.O. Punch (both fit right alongside Doc Carter since they also address VD), and a few others. Thunda is listed as being the "only comic done entirely by Frazetta". Nope, go take a look at Li'l Abner and the Creatures from Drop-Outer Space.

Variant collectors could have a field day here. So many giveaways have variations ranging from minor to outright blatant. Are you one of those that loves truly rare books? You would not believe how many giveaways would qualify as Gerber 8s, 9s, and 10s...easily. Many titles are unique, and there are more out there waiting to be discovered. That is not even the tip of the Red Iceberg since the amount of giveaways listed is minuscule in comparison to how many have actually been published. While giveaways are one of the final uncharted frontiers of comics, keep your eyes peeled because soon there will be a major influx of information on this area of comics. We are in the midst of indexing the largest collection of giveaways ever amassed and in a short matter of time much of the unknown will become known. Very often "Unlisted" giveaways are listed as being "Very Rare", "Unique", and "Unknown"...not always the truth. Some "Unlisted" books are common as dirt, and others are absolutely unique. Soon the truth will be known.

Archie Comics: Archies have been put on quite a few more want lists than they were a couple years ago and the prices are jumping fast and HIGH! The problem here is that Archies were considered quarter box fodder for so long that putting runs together in any condition is a real chore, and a pricey one at that. Condition? Fuggedaboutit! The majority of Gold and Silver Archies out there are low grade, and page quality most often low. We recently sold a large collection of Archie Comics, from #20 - up, Archie's Girls Betty and Veronica #1 - up, Archie's Pal Jughead #1 - up, Archie's Pals 'N' Gals #1 - up, and many others titles. We were blessed with a collection in which most of the books had Off-White to Bone-White pages. Even the lower grade books brought on some voracious bidding due to the superior page quality. The funnest part about cataloging this collection was being able to see how much great stuff is buried in Archie titles that most will never see. Archies are rife with Good Girl Art, cameos (Elvis, The Beatles, Marilyn Monroe, etc.), innuendo covers and panels, cross-dressing, risqué shower/bath panels, lingerie galore, Universal monsters, UFOs & aliens, sexy pin-ups, cut-out paper doll pages, and much more. Katy Keene was in most of the early Archie titles and if GGA, lingerie, and sexy pin-ups are your thing Bill Woggon's Katy is a collector's dream.

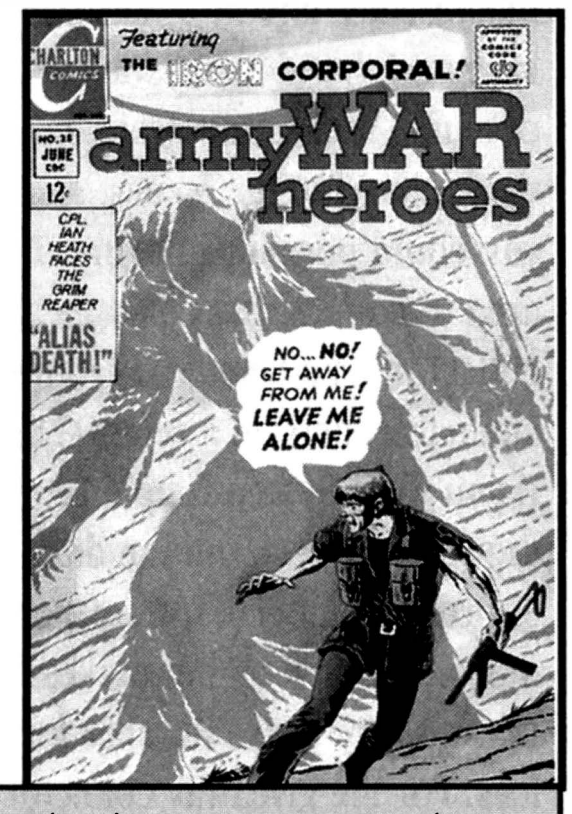
For you superhero collectors that think Archies have nothing for you grab a copy of Wilbur #30 in which he tries his hand with The Green Hairnet. Or you can grab Archie's Pals 'N' Gals #13 for the story, "Superman Meets His Match" in which Archie gets decked out as Clark Kent. The Mighty Crusaders, The Adventures of the Fly, and Silver Age appearances of MLJ super-heroes like the Shield, and the Black Hood are often overlooked, and very affordable counterparts to DC and Marvel's Silver Age appearances of their Golden Age crime fighters.



There are countless sexy pin-ups, paper doll cut-out pages galore that have yet to be documented. Check out Archie's Girls Betty and Veronica #14. There is a panel in which Ronnie is taking a shower after a date at the beach. The panel clearly shows her tan unobscured by any telltale clothing marks, but also Archie's arm and handprint. The powers that were at MLJ/Archie knew how to put in just the right mix of goodies to have their comics flying off the racks and into the hands of both girls, and boys. Some sales include:

Archie Comics #20, VF- with White pages - $293
Archie Comics #50, VF-, Classic Betty Good Girl Art cover - $147
Archie's Girls Betty and Veronica #2, VG, Off-White - $180
Archie's Mechanics #1, VG, Off-White - $62
Archie's Pal Jughead #1, VF with White pages - $362
Archie's Pals 'N' Gals #1, VF/VF+ with White pages - $528
Archie's Pals 'N' Gals #1, with the rare original mailer – Qualified, structurally beautiful copy but it was printed when the red ink on the cover was running low - $132
Archie's Rival Reggie #1, VG, Cream to Off-White - $89
Pep Comics #59 , VF-, Off-White - $169

Charlton: Are you one of those that have scoffed at Charltons all these years? Well...I can't say I blame you, so did I at one point. As I am writing this report we are in the process of turning loose the largest collection of Charltons (over 5,000) ever seen on eBay. This has given us the opportunity to read, index, and catalog countless comics that have been overlooked for decades. Charlton was noted for putting out the cheapest product possible, and they managed to do just that by using an outdated cereal box press. Odds are they had no idea what the term "quality control" meant but that is often part of their appeal. Their output touched on every genre imaginable and when that wasn't enough they invented their own genres...Zaza the Mystic?! Violence? Good Girl Art? Drugs? Even after the Comics Code Authority kicked in Charlton still pushed the envelope as far as they could. Since they have been considered the neglected stepchild of comics for so long their titles are ripe for unlisted tidbits. Good Girl Art, by good and bad artists, abounds. Innuendos? Give EH! #4 a gander. Good luck finding a more blatant "headlights" cover, especially post-Code.

Charlton war books are chock full of unlisted Hitler covers and appearances, and there are even quite a few covers that rival some of the DC Big-5 masterpieces. Want to see what happens when Hitler gets a bit bent out of shape arguing with Mussolini, jams a Luger into his gut and pulls the trigger? Go grab a copy of Army War Heroes #29. Charlton was on the ball when it came to the Cuban Missile Crisis and Fidel Castro. There are a handful of Commie tyrant stories that could be nobody but the despot. Maurice Whitman, noted for his stunning Good Girl covers at Fiction House ended up at Charlton...but, ouch, no GGA here, not even Good Atomic Rabbit.

If you are a collector of Presidential/political appearances then Charlton is the place to poke around. They have snuck everybody in somehow, from "Ike" Eisenhower (saying, "I'm sorry, Atomic Mouse, but a trillion dollars is more than the government can spare..." deja vu?), Robert F. Kennedy, Ronald Reagan, Jacqueline Kennedy, to Richard Nixon, and even Mao Tse-tung. As for the non-political you can find parodies of Howard Cosell, Joe Namath, and even Peter Falk's Columbo. Another tidbit is that Hoppy the Marvel Bunny's last GA/SA appearance (not Atomic Mouse #15), until his revival in the '80s, was purely accidental, and probably due in part to the colorist and editor having a too-long liquid lunch. Charlton, while notorious for their knock-offs of other publishers' successful characters, also had no qualms about doing outright swipes such as a Swamp Thing rip-off, and they had the foresight to have the first comic appearance of KISS, sort of, in a tale of a make-up laden heavy metal band singing, "Kiss me...Kiss me...". Don't think they left you Marvelites out in the cold. The absolute best swipe we have found so far, and we are nowhere near done looking, is the story Ditko did for

© CC

Charlton War comics have some memorable covers. (Army War Heroes #25 shown)

Ghostly Haunts #37. The green behemoth, with purple pants, is so undeniably the Incredible Hulk that it is almost as if Ditko was thumbing his nose at Marvel.

By the way...we all know that Marvel and DC had both direct and newsstand editions. Did you know that Charlton, possibly thinking (praying) they could become a big player in the game, also attempted the direct distribution trick. Take a closer look at some of your swan song age Charltons. Some of them have both variations with the UPC and the blank box. As Charlton made a few attempted comebacks their final shot in the game included some of their most horrendous printing, coloring, and artwork. This last shot also included some dismally LOW print runs. They are fun to collect in that train wreck kind of way and some of the last issues are elusive as heck. One sale of note: EH! #4, GD+/VG- , with Off-White pages for $132 (4.5x Guide).

Seduction of the Innocent/Parade of Pleasure/Censorship: Another of our areas of special interest is that of censorship in any form, but especially when it pertains to comic books. Aside from the Seduction of the Innocent, Parade of Pleasure, and Love and Death, there were numerous booklets ("Americana in Four Colors") including one from The Comics Code Authority ("Facts About Comic Code Approved Comics"), pamphlets, magazine articles going back to the early '40s, and the like, that denounced comic books, blamed them for everything from juvenile to delinquency to all but damaging the ozone layer (well, not really but close). There is a knowledgeable group of collectors that already specialize in this genre and they are a fervent group. We have anything and everything to do with censorship and the popularity of this area is rising fast.

Classic Comics/Classics Illustrated: We are noted experts in this area and with Phil having purchased the Classics Illustrated/Gilberton, and the Twin Circle warehouses we are stocked in depth with most issues, and also have many different rare peripheral items such as varying types of comic racks, editorial items, original artwork, rare foreign issues, and anything else you could possibly imagine. This is the one area of comics that can appeal to the basic collector, as a basic run from #1-169 is attainable, and on a relatively small budget. If you want to step it up a bit you can go for the run and seek out the different Highest Reorder Number issues, which is much more challenging, but makes for some fun searching. Classics are also THE area for variant and giveaway collectors. For the giveaway collector that thrives on the hunt go on the prowl for a "Shelter Thru the Ages", or better yet be the envy of all your friends when you nab a very rare "George Daynor" issue. If variants are your game you can give the Classics with the Coward Shoe ad a try. You'd have a better shot at completing a run of all the Marvel 30¢ and 35¢ variants than you would a set of Cowards, and there are still discoveries to be made. Sales: Classics Illustrated - The United Nations '64 - Unread NM with White pages - $250, and a Cardboard 3-tiered comic stand - $100

Big Little Books: Big Little Books are a fun collecting area, and with all but a handful, it is possible to put together a nice run. They run the gamut from comics like Mickey Mouse, Dick Tracy, and Buck Rogers, to movies and television, with wonderful covers and interior artwork by some of the greats. We have a huge stock of issues and there are still quite a few collectors but we have found that there is some price resistance to the prices listed in the Guide. This is an area of early collectibles that if the pricing information were looked over, and corrected, there could be a resurgence in interest. When there is...you know where to come!

Platinum/Antediluvian: Platinum comics contain some of the funniest tales ever set to paper. Going back over a century we can get a glimpse into what made our grandparents laugh, a look into a more innocent era, and see what set the stages for the Golden Age of comic books. There are also unmentioned discoveries to be made in these books that have been around since the beginning of the last century. Harold Teen #1 is a cover-to-cover EARLY aviation comic that even features Charles Lindbergh. We have sold many and when priced correctly they find a happy new owner but this is another area that we think could use a review and some serious price corrections to reflect more of a reality in the market. Some sales include:

Bug Movies #1, Dell, 1931, VG for $100
Clancy the Cop, Dell, 1931, FN- for $100
Buster Brown On His Travels, 1910, Bright Fine for $250
Harold Teen #1, VG for $100
Mickey Mouse Comic #1, Dave McKay, 1931, Fair for $292

Seduction of the Innocent and other censorship books are rising in popularity.

Unlisted in Guide: Our favorite area of research in the whole of comicdom is flipping through every single comic that goes through my hands to see what nobody else has noticed, or made public before. The list of unlisted items we have run across over the years fill page after page in notebooks. One thing that our many regulars know is that when they read our item descriptions there is a good chance that they are going to pick up a tidbit or two about something that they never realized before, and many end up being must-have books to them.

There are many Atomic Bomb cover/story/ mushroom cloud panel collectors that regularly come to us for issues they did not know belonged in their collections. Even Archie Comics snuck in the occasional Atomic bomb or mushroom cloud. Check out Archie's Girls Betty and Veronica #47 for Betty modeling her "Atomic Bonnet", or Archie's Madhouse

#3 for some more of the like. Charlton had a penchant for atomic bomb blasts also. Grab a Blue Beetle v2 #64, Doomsday +1 #1 & #5, or even The Flintstones #38, yep, The Flintstones!

Unlisted innuendo and tantalizing near-nudity? Archie, Archie, ARCHIE! I could not even begin to list the number of times in which the stable of Archie artists (Bill Woggon reigns king of undressing and lingerie shots though) had some "innocuous" bath or shower panel showing one of the girls barely covering their tidbits. Two great ones though are Laugh Comics #25 in which Katy Keene is toweling off after a bath and that towel is poised just at the point of no return. Archie's Rival Reggie #9 has a story in which Laurie is in the bath on the phone and if she so much as twitched her arm it would have become an Underground.

Unlisted variants? We will never know for sure how many different variants exist out there but there are many that have escaped the notice of the masses. If it's price variants that you seek out just try to put together a run of the 15¢ cover price version of Dell's Turok #7-12. While most of the country got the standard 10¢ issues, Dell ran off a handful of each issue with an extra nickel tacked onto the cover price and gave them a trial run only in the San Francisco Bay Area. The price bump did not go over very well and after that failed test the cover price remained at a dime until issue #23 when they finally hit everybody with the price increase.

Original Artwork: This past year we sold a wide array of original artwork and it seems there is no shortage of avid collectors that love this area of the history of our hobby. In the beginning…original comic book artwork was trash, and I don't mean quality-wise. Pages were used as floor mats, thrown into the trash, and the lucky surviving pieces got tossed into closets or storage.

We sold a large stack of stories from Eastern Color's Heroic Comics that took us by surprise. Tales of battlefield bravery went to war collectors, stories about African-Americans went to collectors of African-American memorabilia, and even the tales of everyday heroes all found happy homes, with fervent bidding. One piece, about a genuine hero from WWII, Richard David DeWert USN, ended up being posted on a site with a tribute to his bravery, thrilling the men whose lives he gave his own life for all those years before. Heroic pages by H.G. Peter went to collectors that wanted excellent Golden Age examples of his work but did not want to pay "Wonder Woman" prices for them.

Many other Eastern Color/Famous Funnies pages, and stories, we sold were previously unpublished, including some great Jingle Jangle Comics stories that never made it into print, work destined for the never-finished Famous Funnies #219, and even Club "16" #6, which never even made it past issue #4. We also ran across a couple titles that never even made it past the planning stages. A few titles that we sold pages from that never made it to the stands were from Let's Travel #2, Animated Comics (maybe they were tossed aside after EC Comics nabbed the rights to the title?), and the high point of the group was Toy Comics #1, from the early '40s. We already knew that we had a winner with our publicly-unknown ashcan-type, editor's working copy of this comic (a mock-up issue comprised of stat copies of the stories, with an amazing cover by Larz Bourne) that never came to fruition, but after putting all the pieces together we realized that we also had the vast majority of all of the amazing artwork that was used in putting the comic together. Ever heard of Junkshop Jamboree? Fiorello Fennel (by Dave Tendlar)? The Burro of Brooklyn? The lisping Thammy Thimble? That's what I figured. Thankfully the unrealized project remained nearly intact and got slipped into a safe place for decades instead of being relegated to the trash heap. As things progress here on our end there will probably be a time when you can read a facsimile of this unpublished bit of hilarity, and fantastic artwork.

Another niche that has some of the most dedicated collectors around is Classic Comics/Classics Illustrated. While artwork was only a very small portion of what we sold this past year each and every piece we had found a new home, and usually after very fervent bidding. There are some bargains to be had in original art if you compare the price, rarity, and historicity of a page of artwork to the cost of a copy of the comic book itself. We sold countless Classics Illustrated pages for less than a high grade copy of the issue it appeared in would cost, including artwork by George Evans, and H.C. Kiefer. If that does not defy logic then I don't know what does. We also sold the painted cover, and artwork by Lou Cameron, to the complete book of Classics Illustrated #13 – Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde to a very happy buyer for a bit over 5 figures.

For those that want a unique bit of publication history, for even less than original artwork, printer's proofs are the way to go. You can get a unique item for a fraction of what a newsstand copy of the same book will go for.

Discoveries: Though we have just begun going through Phil's collection we have already made a few discoveries worthy of mention. We ran across a few children's "block-book"-type puzzle books from 1949. The set includes 6 different books that were published with the inherent nature to be destroyed. The thick cardboard pages had die-cut puzzle pieces meant to be popped out by youngsters and inevitably lost. The kicker about this set is that 2 of the books were fully illustrated by Harvey Kurtzman, and his unique style is readily apparent, and reminiscent of his "Hey Look" work.

Our biggest comic history-changing find (so far, that is) was a copy of Cheerio #1, with a cover date of January 5, 1936. Noted comic collector, and researcher extraordinaire, Jon Berk, had previously turned up a registration copy of this over-sized comic magazine that was a sort of in-between stage printing submitted solely for copyright purposes by Harry "A" Chesler, Jr. At the time Mr. Berk announced his discovery it seemed that the story ended there publishing-wise since his copy contains mostly text, single panel gags, and blank filler pages, with all of the comic strips mentioned on the cover noticeably absent. We turned up a copy that also had the text and gags but…it had every single comic listed on the cover, and more, making it the first Chesler comic, knocking Star Rangers #1, from 1937 off of its pedestal. It also beats The Comics Magazine, which was absorbed by Centaur, by 5 months. It is definitely an evolutionary step in the formation of Centaur Publications seeing that most of the comic strips, all original, were later reprinted in other Chesler and Centaur comics where some became regularly occurring strips. Early comic detective, "Lucky Coyne", whose 1st appearance was previously recognized as being in Funny Picture Stories, actually made his debut here, and that is just one of many examples. Another first in comics that does deserve mention is that this comic contains the 1st actual nudity in a comic book, by artist Dick Ryan, in which a gal gets caught topless by a voyeuristic monkey. This unique copy, with the covers, and first two wraps completely split realized over $1,500, and the very pleased buyer was willing to go much higher to land this historic comic.

While going through items from the Harvey warehouse we found a detailed handwritten 166-page index of all Richie Rich stories from Richie Rich #1-#220, Richie Rich Millions #1-#113, and most other RR titles, and where all of the stories were subsequently reprinted. There were even listings for a few issues that were never published such as Richie Rich Fortunes #64, and Richie Rich Dollars & Cents #110, both originally slated for 12/82. Along with the Richie index was the Harvey check register from 01/76 to 07/76 which contains quite a bit of enlightening information as to where Harvey $$$ was going, including Joe Simon, Jerry Grandenetti, Bloomingdales and even a jewelry store. Some sales include: Set of 6 1949 puzzle books, with 2 by Kurtzman, NM for $404; Harvey Comics Richie Rich index for $787 and a Harvey check register for $100.

Since we are just getting started, our areas of contribution are slightly limited to certain areas but as time goes on we will be expanding our knowledge, and contributions to cover more publishers, genres, etc. By the time I sit down to type up our next Market Report we will have gone through, indexed, and sold a near-complete run of ACG comics, along with more Golden Age of all publishers and genres, Classics Illustrated items that fit the true definition of "RARE", Seduction of the Innocent-type items, and giveaways that others have not even dreamt of. Our long journey through the warehouses has just started, and there are many more discoveries to be made.

Remember, unless you actually pull back the cover and read a book or two you will never know what you might be missing. Thanks so much to all that have been a part of making our first year such a great one! Happy collecting!!!

Disparity between the dollar values of ultra high-grade copies and low grade copies of key issues, or issues in general, continue to diverge. Despite the ongoing recession, killer examples continue to set records at auction because people pay big bucks for what the other guy can't find. When it comes to the truly scarce, bad copies of key or variant issues bring good money from those who must have them. Mostly the same books are on everyone's lists though, making it hard to say what something is truly worth. Just look at the listed value of Action Comics #1 until recently... it made big news, but only because outstanding copies rarely change hands, and Guide policy is generally to let the market speak with established sales. How does one value books like the Archie 15¢-cover variants that no one can find, let alone sell, especially variant keys like Mad House #22, vastly undervalued in the Guide already, that surfaced after my article came out last year? Another example is the 35¢-cover Marvel Price Variants; step right up and pick a Western, any Western. They are so rare that no copies are changing hands in any condition at any price, yet all of the books are confirmed to exist and have been for years.

I deal primarily in books that sell for $1000 and under. Last year's most notable sale was a raw copy of All-Star Western #10 VF/NM for $1000. I see a real future for this book in high grade as it is uncommon in any grade. Weird Western Tales #12 and Weird War Tales #1 sell over Guide with no resistance and continue to rise in price every year. Buy your nice copies now before they move past the triple digits! As for books in general, some very slight increase in Variants in general is there, but it is modest, possibly because the market, as I stated before, needs examples of actual sales for people to relate to, and you can't sell what isn't out there to find. Marvel's #1s sell well in all grades for Horror titles. Conan #1s sell well at 150-200% Guide for me, as do Iron Man #1s. War comics remain popular, particularly DC's big five, and Marvel's War is Hell sold out for me this year in all grades, especially #9. Ten to fifteen cent cover price Romance comics in the $5-7 range sold regardless of title, publisher, or issue number unless they were butt-ugly, awful copies. With more people than ever downsizing and selling off all or part of their collections, so-called "wholesale prices" dropped to new lows for lower grade books and relatively common books, making it possible for collectors to buy runs of even solid titles for a fraction of what they cost 2-3 years ago, and there's no end in sight. Most material will still sell if discounted sufficiently, although eBay results seem lower with each passing month.

Todd McDevitt
New Dimension Comics

I always think some background info on those writing these market reports is helpful, so here's a little about me. I started New Dimension Comics in 1986 while still in high school in my hometown. I have made comic books my life. 2011 marks my 25th anniversary in the business! NDC has grown to 4 stores surrounding the Pittsburgh, PA area. Many fortunate things have happened to me to get me this far. When I started, I thought I'd be 1 guy in my 1 store doing what I love and making enough money somedays to eat steak and others to get by with ramen noodles. I never expected to grow to this level. One of my rules has always been to buy everything I can. I think keeping a fresh and relentless flow of new material through my stores has been a huge component to my success. With the purchase of a giant warehouse, nothing holds me back from taking on loads of comics 100's of thousands at a time. So… I guess handling all these comics has brought me some insight to share here. So the good folks at Overstreet seem to think at least! They keep askin' me to come back!

Golden Age: I think with each year I report that "attic finds" still happen. I have seen a few things this past year, but nothing huge like the treasure troves that have blessed me in recent years. Most of my big book buys have been from collectors who have decided to "cash in" or dealers who also have tired of the business. And I can see why. Selling these types of books is a little tougher than before too. It seems the internet, auction houses, and CGC have made collectors not only more finicky, but more willing to wait to pull the trigger. Of course, there are exceptions. And no real surprise here it's the Marvels/Timelys. They are always the first to sell out of any batch I procure. Even so, I have just a handful that I have had in stock for a while now. This is probably the longest stretch that I can say that is true. The worst for me is that I'm digging these books more than ever personally. I end up paying for stuff that I WANT just to get those books for me!

Silver Age: Quality sells. I got an amazingly sweet collection in. Many could not have been read. No finger pock marks, nothing. I processed what I could and dragged it to a small show with low expectations. Who is gonna pay me $100 for NM X-Men #85? I recall joking about that exact book prior to the show opening with other dealers. Guess what I sold that day… That, plus an Amazing Spider-Man #101 in NM for $250 and a #108 in NM for $50. I always tell folks that I rarely use those "top prices in the right hand column in the Price Guide". But when I do, I ask one simple question to myself. : "How much nicer does it have to be?" I have also seen collectors salivate quicker when I tell them the books came from an original owner collection. There is something about the allure of comics right from a guy who had them when he was a kid that makes them even more appealing.

Another key note about Silver Age sales this year would be interest in prototype hero books. They are super cheap and FUN! Who wouldn't want to see a proto-Doctor Doom in action? I sold one for like $30 and of course the guy loved the price on what could be a major key book. Heck, some Golden Age books are worth extra due to the ads they have in them, like an ad for Action #1 in Detective #16. So why wouldn't pages of content that inspired a future icon be desired even more so?

On the low end, I maintain 2 Silver Age inventories that are just $1 and $3 each. I have never had more of them than I have right now. Where I have been lacking in buying Golden Age this year, I have more than made up for in volume on Silver Age. The $3 selection is my favorite to bring with me to conventions and it is hovering at about 10,000 comics now. Many are low grade, but many are just my 5th copy and that makes them overstock, so into the cheapies they go!

Modern Age: $3.99 comics! Every month! Really? Well… really. While lots of collectors whined about the rising costs, only few threw in the towel. Now Marvel and DC have both taken stances to run 2011 with no monthly $3.99s, but keep them at $2.99.

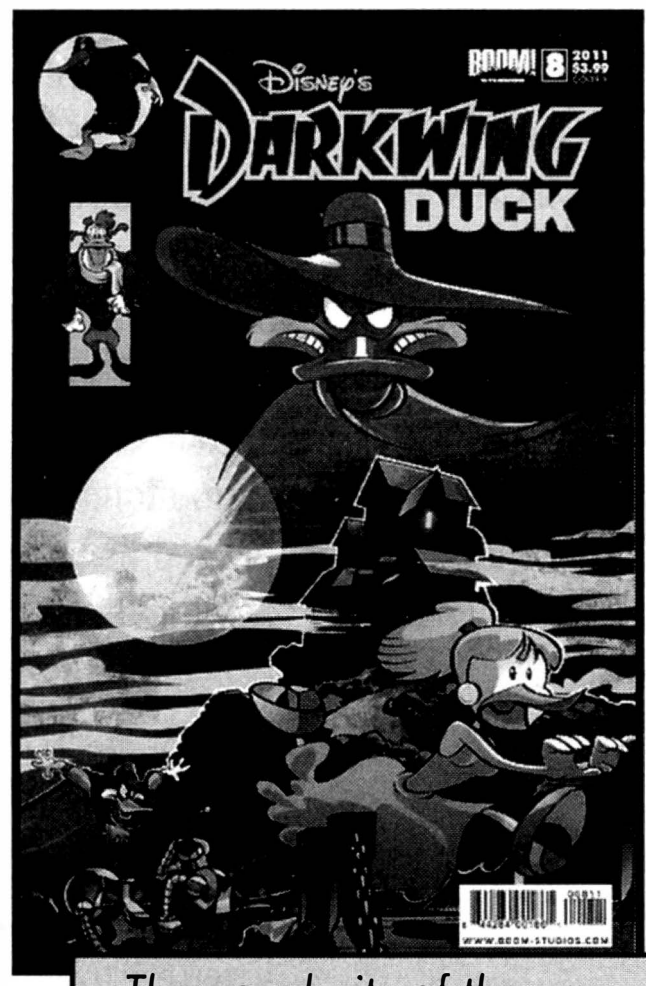
Superman Earth One GN hit the top of the NY Times bestseller list.

While that sounds noble, I'm looking at my 4 stores and seeing the best year I've ever had. I'm not sure I want that formula messed with! Offhand, I can't say for sure that it is just $3.99 books that are making that magic happen. Chances are it's not. But, don't forget how rare some of those books become with all retail stores tightening their orders and with fewer stores in the country. This might explain why our back issue sales are still solid. In my region and on the road, I have a growing reputation for buying everything. I have a pretty big machine to feed and well, I can't say no! My wife likes jewelry, I like comics. But as much as it's an addiction, I am justified in the sales we have in that category. I do think a lot of it is that fans can't get everything they want elsewhere. No matter how on top of the new releases they are, there will always be a missed issue. Our niche is that we fight to have it in stock and when they come looking for it, we make them smile.

Trade paperbacks, collected editions, and graphic novels have continued to sell great. Walking Dead just keep flying out the door every week. I managed to sell an original Walking Dead #1 comic, in bad shape, for $60 twice in 2010. This AMC TV show is well received and fans the flames of an already super string buzz. We also saw Superman Earth One hit the top on the New York Times best seller list in 2010. Seems comics AREN'T just for kids anymore after all!



Variations - Old Variants: So many collectors have gotten their lists all crossed off that they are looking for something new. I ran across my first guy who was searching exclusively for Spidey's with Mark Jewelers ad inserts in them. I bet I only see these maybe 5% of the time. It would be interesting to know the print runs on books like these. And how about the Direct Market? When the publishers first started selling non-returnables to comic specialty retailers, they changed the covers. Slightly, but it is a variation. I wonder how low the print runs were when that first happened? How hard would they be to find in nice shape? And at what point did the tide turn and the Direct Market was taking on the majority of comics? Another rarity for me to see—I'd say even less often than a Mark Jewelers ad book— are newsstand versions of Image books. Did you know that Spawn, Gen 13, WildCATs, and more had versions for the newsstand? They have a different cover stock and UPC codes before that was standard. Try finding these in nice condition!

There are more. Having handled comics for 25 years, I start to zen in on the little differences. I found Action #495 with 2 different colors on the DC logo. Not fading, not the printer running light on a pigment (the same color is fine on the rest of the book), not Whitman. How did this happen? Was there a shift change at the printing plant? Someone who likes green took over the nightshift? Maybe from a different printing plant altogether? More importantly, how many got out there like this? How many others are we missing? I just happened to buy a big stack of this issue or I may have never caught it. It makes me wonder how many more variations we would find if we start squinting at the INTERIORS too!

I guess my point is that as the hobby continues to polarize, the desires of collectors could easily swing the pendulum further than ever. Once you THINK you have all the Amazing Spider-Man comics, then you find out there are different inserts, covers, and maybe even a crazy printer operator to worry about too! What will be interesting to see is if premium prices will be paid for any of these if they are discovered to be rare.

The popularity of the new Darkwing Duck series has surprised modern collectors. (#8 shown)

Steve Mortensen
Miracle Comics

2010 continued to be a good year for comics, especially the high end Golden, Silver and Bronze Age markets that reached new highs. We saw the first $1 million sale of any comic with the sale of Action Comics #1 and Detective Comics #27. On a personal note, in 2010 I launched a new business, Miracle Comics, specializing in Silver, Bronze and Modern Age CGC comics (many of you know me from my former business Colossus Comics). I continue to write for Comic Buyer's Guide and keep up with the trends of the current comic market, along with my day job as art director of a Silicon Valley biotech company. The modern CGC market continues to be a difficult place for investors, but deals can be had with variant covers and key books such as Chew #1, which has really taken off. Walking Dead #1 also is a great fan favorite and sells above $550 in CGC 9.8.

The Year in Review: In December 2009, the Image series Chew was hot. The #1s in CGC 9.9 were selling for $250+ and even a CGC 10.0 sold for $1,150 in November 2009. As of this writing, the series is still one of my favorites at issue #15. Also in Dec. 2009, *G.I. Joe*s in CGC 9.8 were selling well and Amazing Spider-Man #583 Obama 1st print variants in CGC 9.8 dropped in price to $60 from a 2009 high of $375.

In January 2010, I had a chance to visit several Midwest comic stores and found that most of the back issue bins were empty of NM/MT comics. I realized that many dealers who were reluctant to embrace CGC in the past have begun sending in many of their prime candidates to CGC for grading. Another interesting thing is I saw very few CGC books for sale in the stores. Much of the high grade CGC market for Golden, Silver and Bronze Age books has almost completely moved to the web. Also, CGC celebrated their 10th anniversary in January 2010.

In February, a couple of titles caught my eye: Green Lantern back issues from the 1990s and Marvel Comics Present #74-84 (Barry Windsor-Smith covers). One particularly high demand modern comic is Green Lantern #47 (published 1993). It features Green Lantern and Green Arrow on the cover and sells for about $90 in CGC 9.8. On the Marvel side, the Barry Windsor-Smith covers from Marvel Comics Present are selling well in CGC 9.8. Many sell north of $50 and prices keep climbing due to the Weapon X storylines.

In March 2010, DC Comics began its saga of the Return of Bruce Wayne, which inspired many crossovers and produced loads of variant covers. As of this writing Batman and Robin #16 was just released – the issue in which Bruce Wayne confesses that he has been funding Batman all these years and that he will form a network of Batmen all over the world. Batman has been quite popular, especially in the Golden Age CGC buying circle. In February 2010 a Detective Comics #27 broke the record held by Action Comics #1 for the highest price paid for a comic of almost $1.1 million.

In April 2010, a copy of Action Comics #1 in CGC 8.5 sold for the record price of $1.5 million. To date, this is the highest price paid for any comic bypassing the sale of Detective Comics #27 CGC 8.0 in February. I wonder if in the next several years we'll see a "million-dollar club" with more rare books coming to market.

In May 2010, I noticed the drastic drop in prices of some CGC modern X-Men comics. Uncanny X-Men #207 in CGC 9.8 had a high of $304 in 2008 and in 2010 a copy sold for $52. Silver Age X-Men have taken a hit as well, while many collectors are flocking to the high grades. X-Men #50 in CGC 9.8 sells for $3,500+ while a CGC 8.0 sells for only $60. For the non-collector these two books would seem almost identical in condition.

In June 2010, I looked through some of my inventory to find Frank Frazetta covers. Frazetta died in May 2010 and will be sorely missed by scores of fans. Vampirella #1 in CGC 9.2 sold for $1,673 in February 2010. Six copies exist in CGC 9.4 but no sales have been recorded. This is just one example of Frank's fine cover work and shows how hard it is to find his magazine covers in high grade.

In July 2010, I bought a collection of Harvey comics. Most were ungradable, but as a Bronze Age Horror fan I fell in love with the monster covers. Many Harvey File Copies have been graded and most are very affordable in 9.4 and 9.6 condition. The crown jewel of Harvey is probably the Richie Rich #1 from 1960. The highest graded copy is a CGC 9.6 and it sold for a high of $29,875 in 2006.

In August 2010, Marvel announced they would produce vampire variants of many of their titles. Many of these variants eventually sold for $10-15 each ungraded, which I think is a good buy considering dealers had to purchase $40-60 worth of inventory to get one. Both Marvel and DC are producing more variants making the regular covers less collectible, unfortunately.

In September 2010, Darkwing Duck surprised modern collectors with its popularity, and variant covers immediately began selling for $25 each. DC announced a new Superboy series by creator Jeff Lemire. His previous work, Sweet Tooth, has been sort-of a cult hit. Prices have been on the rise for Sweet Tooth #1 with CGC 9.8s selling for $50.

In October 2010, I noticed that Fangoria Magazine was coming out with its #300 issue. I remember as a teenager reading it and getting ideas for gruesome Halloween costumes. Issue #1 recently sold in September of 2010 for $323 in CGC 9.8 – a bargain as far as I'm concerned. I think these cult magazines in high grade are rare and I think will do well moving forward.

In November 2010, DC announced that they are coming out with a Batman Beyond ongoing series. There was a mini-series written by Adam Beechen that was produced earlier in the year and garnered great praise. Beechen is back for the ongoing series so it should be good. Perhaps the best investment buy however is Superman/Batman Annual #4, which features a future Batman and future Superman storyline. It has been selling online for $20 ungraded and I'm hoping that it increases in value with the new series coming out.

In conclusion, the high end comics market continues to be hot with collectors paying top dollar for the issues they want in high grade. Sadly, though, for Silver and Bronze owners with comics in the Fine to Very Fine category, they are lucky to get full Guide value even if the comic has been graded. The Modern market also continues to struggle in some areas but 1980s books are picking up in CGC 9.8 and are very affordable to the average collector in the $50-100 range for non-keys. With more movies coming down the pipeline like Green Lantern, Thor and another Batman film I'm sure the collectible back issue market will remain healthy in 2011.

Jamie Newbold
Southern California Comics

Hi Folks,

It's fire season in San Diego. Thankfully, the weather has been wet for awhile. We needed the break! It's also that time of the year where we generally note a decline in sales, manifested in the form of reduced new comic purchases. However, the sale of older comics has remained unfazed. In fact, that's been true for us since the beginning of the year. Even Comic-Con (which generated weak sales in 2009), finished in the plus column for us. 2010 has been a banner year for back-issue sales.

Store Sales: Our back issue sales were strong across the span of books from the 1940s to the 1970s. Comics from the 1980s to modern sell at bargain prices all the time. Nothing new there.

Walk-in and website sales remained consistent throughout the year, much more so than the previous, recessive years. Supply, convenience, price, and reputation drove sales in our direction. One more local store closed down and changed the buying habits of many. Those new customers discovered us, as well as our roundhouse of back issues and fueled our sales.

Yelp.com continued to spearhead sales at our store. I personally believe it is the number one internet proponent sending local, new customers our way. Their ads are expensive, but the free presence and generous information they promote online automatically is priceless. Otherwise, "googling" comic book stores in San Diego is the preeminent one-stop locator for new customers that eventually drop in at our store.

We poll most of the new faces that enter through our doors. The "why" they chose us and the "how" they found us are questions we ask. Their options to discover us are the phone book, the internet, word-of-mouth, and other advertising. The phone book is declining into antiquity - it seems to be a tool for hotel guests or shady characters looking to off-load anything for cash.

The internet, broken down into scattered search engines, reaches nearly all our customers. They type in "comic book stores San Diego" and run with the prompted selections. In contrast, the "Yellow Pages.com" site is seemingly impervious to inquiry. Rarely do we receive a customer that has utilized the phone book's on-line ad site. A few, well-informed comic book aficionados use the COMIC SHOP LOCATER site to search for stores in any area they are visiting. It's a service I pay for, so I'm relieved when the occasional customer announces their utilization of it.

We get plenty of feedback from people that were directed to us by friends and acquaintances. Perhaps twittering is the new word-of-mouth for this millennium.

With the influx of customers we've seen in the last ten months, we'd have expected to see increases in new comics sales. Sadly, the opposite is true.

Website/eBay/Internet Activity: Kind of a mushy area. No more and no less than previous years. Not surprising considering the proliferation of comic book conventions nationwide. Wow, they've re-surged like it was the 1970s all over again! Who needs to shop off of a website when eBay and a comic con are within everyone's reach?

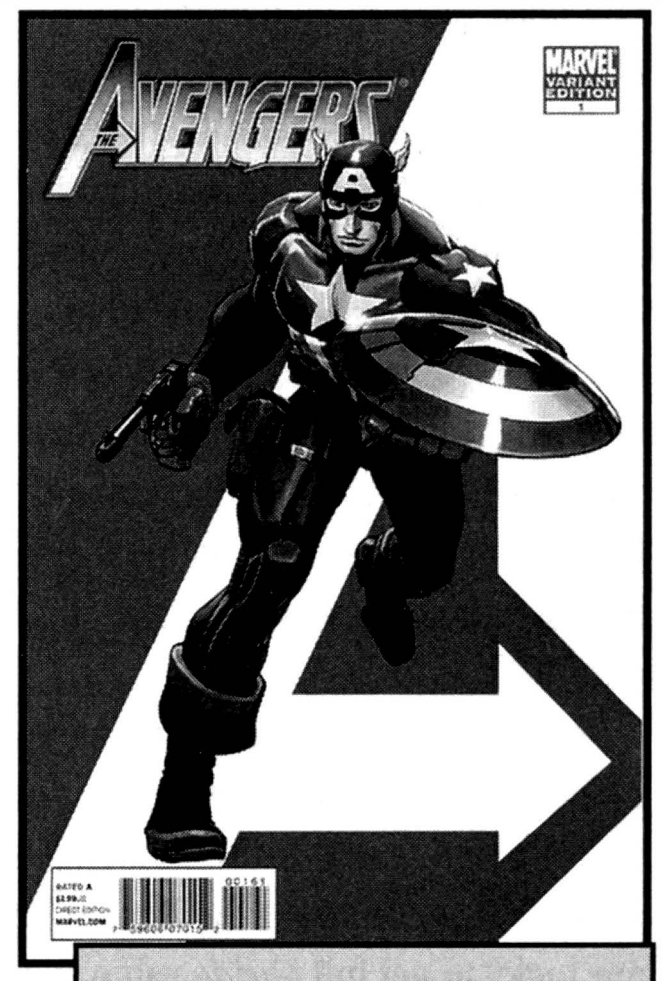
Sales activity from eBay remained the same. We offered some better books for sale on ebay than we normally do. These comics consisted of better condition, low-numbered 1960s Marvels, DCs and various CGC books. They sold well during the brief period we offered them. But sales prices measured against GPAnalysis stats rarely matched up. That was disappointing. Our experiences still validate that store sales prices will often surpass internet sales. Just takes longer to move them sometimes.

One problem I have with my own website is the sheer consumption of time it takes to manage. I pay particular attention to details when we purchase a new collection at the store. Graded comics will end up on the site but it's a lengthy affair, loading hundreds of scans and lines of data. I find myself spending more time at home working on the site, uninterrupted by customers or phone calls, because I'm a poor, two-finger typist (can you tell?).

Potential customers frequently preface an inquiry about our site by asking if it is up to date. Their past experience has taught them that many comic book dealers infrequently update their sites. My employees built a Facebook page for our store, because I did not know what a Facebook was. We now use the website homepage and our Facebook page to announce significant events and encourage customer interaction. Our e-mail list also helps to fulfill our customer communication needs. All of these electronic mediums increase the consumption of time on computers and pulls me away from the paper and staple world. I do realize that these formats/venues are becoming market necessities to draw in customers. One really has to be dedicated to these forms of internet presence to make the chores worthwhile. I delegate what I can to my employees because I'd rather play with comic books. I also have a minor presence on the CGC Chat Boards but that also requires more time and typing than I can commit to. Frankly, I would rather talk to my customers than type to them.



New Comics: We continue to see a decline in the number of new copies sold each month. Customers come and go from San Diego with regularity (permanent departures rather than arrivals still seem to be the norm). Military deployments play havoc with an already wonky market.

Marvel attacked the market with its numerous and all-consuming crossover events. Civil War was replaced with Skrulls, which had their place taken by Siege, which was finally trumped with the Heroic Age. This proliferation of tie-in issues reduced reader interest. Fewer customers were interested in buying the crossovers and mini-series connected to each event. Meanwhile, DC captivated us with Blackest Night as well as its transitional series, Brightest Day, which started off with a bang. Blackest Night carried an edgy, DC-going-for-broke killer plot device. Brightest Day mellowed this feel out and lost a few readers long the way. The Batman story arcs maintained reader interest with a steady readership across all the Batman inclusive titles. The anticipation of Bruce Wayne's return to the present kept sales of the Batman titles at their highest.

The only constants this past year were the variety of variant covers produced for these books and the dollar increases that just about every company fell victim to. Variant cover sales were active in 2010. Marvel and DC continued to configure the selection of variants through our Diamond orders, which made it easy for buyers to locate these scarce copies when they ship. Marvel variants were consistently more desirable to our customers than other companies, DC included.

Despite the dreaded $3.99 cover price increase across the board, DC and Marvel finally announced their revamped cover prices, which I am eagerly awaiting as I type this. Our customers have stated their uncertainty as to it altering their buying habits. I applaud the two companies for taking these bold, but necessary steps. What good are $3.99 cover prices if I can't sell enough copies? Reduction to $2.99 is helpful. It remains to be seen if smaller publishers will follow suit; if they can even afford to do so. I make less money at $2.99. It is up to my customers to reciprocate by discovering more comic books to buy. Otherwise, Marvel and DC may have wasted their efforts. NOTE: If reduced story content or quality develops, then our customers will react.

Image started out strong with Chew and Haunt for 2009-2010. Both have lost ground late in 2010. Image brought out Morning Glories and Skull-Kickers with some fanfare, but not large sales numbers. Walking Dead sales grew with the advent of the TV show (which has proved a stellar hit). It really is that good! I hope its edginess and great storytelling deflates some of the sappy vampire stuff that currently saturates the market.

Variant cover sales were active in 2010/2011. (Avengers #1 shown)

Dark Horse revamped the old Magnus and Dr. Solar titles. I like them and so do a few of my customers. Too early to tell if they will gain strength. Star Wars sales slipped a bit. Conan is still a wonderful title. I just don't understand where its audience has gone to. It should sell better than it does.

Incorruptible and Irredeemable from Boom Studios--read, read, read! Dynamite Entertainment fired off a full-volley spread of Green Hornet titles. I liked most of them. I was disappointed that many others did not. The movie has been panned by some of my customers for its casting even before its hit the theaters. Too bad. I thought casting Seth Rogen as the Green Hornet was risky and brilliant (if it works!). I expected Kevin Smith's involvement in the comic book to draw more readers than it did. IDW continued to scoot along with a wide range of titles. Transformers faltered but the G.I. Joe franchise continued with sales relatively unchanged. Angel and Locke and Key sold well. The X-Files/30 Days of Night title started strong and then quieted down. We particularly enjoyed the five-issue series written by Andy Schmidt, Five Days to Die. What a great little crime noir story.

We maintain a retail section for new, independent monthly titles. For years we've been trying to increase the sales of small press publications. Unfortunately, as in years past, they generally don't sell. For all the clamoring a small cadre of customers make, they still do not commit to purchasing these titles. We see new companies pop up in Diamond Previews and then disappear rapidly. Many independent titles are simply ignored. We read some of them at the store to expand our knowledge. Some are entertaining only if they complete the storyline. Others do not grab us, no matter how many months they exist. And still others suffer from a lack of punctuality.

Golden Age Sales: We purchased several Golden Age collections this year; some larger, some smaller. We kept most of the books raw, although some had already CGC'd. Our sales were nominal until we hit the 2010 San Diego Comic Con, where we blew through quite a bit of our Golden Age and did well.

One of the larger Golden Age collections consisted of over 350 comic books ranging from the mid-1930s to the very early 1940s. Early DCs, Centaurs, United Features and others. Near-complete runs of King Comics, Feature Funnies and Ace Comics. Low-numbered More Fun Comics and New Adventure Comics. We had an issue of New Comics #2, one of the earliest examples of comic books in existence. 25 of the more expensive and/or scarcest copies were submitted to CGC and then sent off to ComicLink. This collection was purchased from the son of the original owner.

The other Golden Age collection was more iconic. We were contacted by Nancy Maneely, daughter of famous Atlas artist Joe Maneely who had a large collection of his work. Nancy remains an avid fan of her father's prolific 1950s artwork for Atlas Comics. His death was an unfortunate accident that occurred in the late '50s. Nancy kept a vow to keep her father's name alive and did so by collecting examples of his work. Her collection spanned many decades and eventually resulted in duplicates, which she brought to us. We purchased the dupes consisting of around 300 1950s Atlas comics. Each contained some great examples of her father's artistry. He really was an exciting cover artist for Atlas and a quick one! Nancy was in the midst of creating and publishing her father's work in a pictorial biography. The wished-for release date is in 2011.

Silver Age Sales: TREE-MENDOUS! This was a good year for Silver Age. Sales were way up at this year's San Diego Comic-Con as well as our store. All titles, all issues, all grades. Discounts and sales priced items are still a must to gather all buyers together under one roof. But more of that stuff sold this year than last year.

We acquired numerous small Silver Age collections and one or two larger ones. High grade stuff was present but not in the quantity we needed to make a big sales splash. It was obvious that economic downturns dropped many of the collections into our laps. Only a few original owner collections of any substance surfaced. I was fortunate in one regard: I had to do less traveling to obtain these collections this past year. Most of these opportunities came to me at the store. I prefer it that way. Psychologically, I make a stronger case for myself in my own domain. Many of the collections that walked in remained with me after the owner left. Not always so lucky on the road, however.

One quick story: I had a gentleman, a little younger than me, bring in a small stack of Marvel Silver Age keys. Early books like Amazing Spider-Man #1 and Avengers #1. I pitched an offer and he declined. He quipped that he would just pass them onto his kids at the price I offered. My offer was not cheap and he understood. So before he left, I warned him that his teenage sons would never honor the value of these books as he did. He could pass them on but their positive response would be void...just a guess on my part! He returned one week later with the books and accepted my previous offer. He explained that he brought his two sons together to gift them his bounty...their response was; "So what?" End of story.

One other point of reference began at the 2010 SD Comic-Con. Among the better books we had to sell was an Amazing Fantasy #15 CGC 4.0 for $6,000. Now, my wife and I had been discussing buying it from the business for ourselves and purchasing other copies at this year's show (buying, as in investing- we'd be purchasing at full price, and then sitting on them for years.) So, I shopped and saw plenty of copies in the hands of friends and strangers alike. The prices were what I expected- high, as in no wiggle room for value advancement in five years. No big deal; it was only a thought. But I wondered why our copy hadn't sold when it was clearly priced close to Overstreet (we had it at $6,500). We had plenty of lookers and inquiries at our booth. A potential customer made an observation after shopping for a copy over the days that we were "the least overpriced dealers in the room"! A classic statement that I used later (and still use!), I love it!

Bronze Age Sales: Big ticket items moved a little slower than in the previous year, with the San Diego Comic-Con being the venue exception. Of course, we did not have the same Bronze Age inventory we had in 2009. That stuff can be expensive and time consuming to replace at wholesale prices. Our store saw an increase in Sub-Mariner back-issue sales. The timing was certainly beneficial since we had been sitting on a lot of copies for awhile. Iron Man and Incredible Hulk still move, mostly at bargain prices for late Bronze. X-Men sold a little less while Amazing Spider-Man from the mid-to-late '70s just sits. Key books, notwithstanding.

DCs seem irrelevant. Even the Neal Adams *Green Lantern*s have slowed down - maybe just too expensive. However, Adams' Batman never go out of fashion. Archies, Disneys, Charltons and Gold Keys are rarely offered to us for resale. Those that we obtain often end up in bargain bins. Traditionally geared towards small children, these books are perused by adults (either for themselves or their children). We respect any adult that still believes comics are for kids.

CGC Sales: We submitted fewer books to CGC this past year than in previous years. We felt that many of the new, raw purchases would not net enough profit against the cost of submission. Although we scored quite a bit of high-grade stuff, the potential sales prices were not great enough to justify submission.

We purchased a large number of CGC books from collectors this year - more so than in most other years. The reasoning for these purchases is simple: we can make money off most CGC books at the prices we pay. The collectors could follow suit, but many of them over-extended themselves, paying out too much for the books and the accompanying CGC costs. We literally received a ground-swell of buying opportunities from people who owned CGC books and now needed a bailout. Selling them retail seemed to not be an option in most of these cases. The owners needed cash now and chose us for the negotiations.

We've always encouraged our customers to do their research before committing on any comic book purchase. We continually offer to do some research for them in the form of GPAnalysis, eBay, Heritage Auctions, and more. These purchases can be attributed to the state of the U.S. economy - most any bad financial news can. By the same token, we sold a lot of CGC books this year. Many of those sales went for less than market price and often for less than Overstreet.

Comic Conventions: This year, I attended the San Diego International Comic-Con, the summer Chicago show, and Terry O'Neill's show in Orange County, CA. The attendance at each show seemed larger than the buildings could contain. The crowds were impressive but quick tallies of sale successes among dealers were mixed, at least in the case of Chicago.

San Diego was a different story. We had the best show in recent years in terms of sales vs. the workload and general hassle of setting up. Other dealers also boasted of success in their sales. Security was noticeably increased and much more aggressive this year. Security supervisors acknowledged that theft is generally highest on the weekends. We witnessed plenty of random badge checks at the doors and within the Exhibitors' Hall. I'm glad the show will continue to operate in San Diego but I lament the cost increases for setting up. I wonder what the dollar amount might have become, had the show had moved to Anaheim…

There's a small, one-day con in San Diego, called the So Cal Comic Con, which premiered the weekend of Nov. 6th. Two local collector/dealers hosted the show continuing the lineage of comic book guys taking their hobby to the next level. We set up at the show and will continue to support their efforts in the future. We applaud the So Cal Comic Con guys for taking this financial risk in uncertain times. By the way; I attend few shows and may go down in history as the least "hardest" working dealer in comics" (Harley can keep his top spot!).

Prices Up or Down?: The recession may or may not be over. I can see from the lack of full-price sales on low-grade comics that the downward pricing trend has leveled off well-below Price Guide standards. We've acquired large quantities of that material from the 1950s to the '70s. If they ever go back up, I'll be waiting!

I don't know if there's anything left that could be expected to go up in value beyond the acknowledged copies we foresee rising. The market has not demonstrated a demand to justify the value increase for most of the comics produced after the Bronze Age. I don't see anything released on a monthly basis hitting a high mark in value and then staying there much longer than a month. I'd like to see the values increase in conjunction with Overstreet values on mid-grade '60s books. I think that their age justifies their value even if the demand is for lower prices. Many of us dealers have paid good money to acquire comic collections over the years at prices fair to the owners. It's a shame if we will never be able to realize most of the resale values that we supported through the years.

Sales from 2009 to 2010 have been steady, despite the continued economic slowdown. We have attended more conventions this year than any other year as a dealer. Most comic book conventions appeared to have good attendance, and again I had my best show ever in Chicago. Shows in other places have had mixed sales: Minnesota, New York and Denver were notable. San Diego, Charlotte and Philadelphia were down. Catalog orders have been steady, and repeat customers are the life blood of our mail order business. The few Internet auctions that we have tried, have been disappointing. This is because of all the shows we are doing we must continue to pay higher percentages on Marvel and DC keys to keep our display racks well stocked.

Golden Age: Sales of this material are still good. We are seeing many lower grade comics less than $100 moving at around 85% of Guide. While as always, higher grade Timely, DC, MLJ, Quality and Fawcett are selling well at or above Guide. Prize and Ace titles do well in middle to higher grades. also early Crime titles like Crime Does Not Pay are selling well around Guide or better depending on condition and cover. Early Looney Tunes, Early Four Colors and Walt Disney Comics & Stories are selling well at near Guide values. Some sales of note were: Marvel Mystery #18 FN@$950, Namora #2 VG- @$400, Phantom Lady #18 VG@$500, Detective Comics #66 FN (rest)@$740, Detective Comics #140 VG@$1200, Keen Detective Funnies V1#8 FR@$300, and Marvel Tales #95 VG-@$170.

Atom Age: We acquired a large collection last year with about 500 comics in higher grades from the late 1940s and early 1950s. These were mostly Crime, Western, War and Romance comics. We submitted about 90 of them for CGC grading and was pleased to get back many comics in the highest or near highest grade for that specific issue. Some highlights were a few *Two-Gun Kid*s, with #1 coming in at CGC 9.4 and #3 CGC 9.4, #5 CGC 9.2 and #6 CGC 8.5. the #1 and #6 were the highest grades to date. We sold many of these comics quickly above Guide and it was great to see so many Atom Age comics in such high grades. Westerns are still going strong through mail order with Roy Rogers and Gene Autry our best two titles. Some sales of note were Tex Morgan #1 CGC 9.4@$775, Venus #18@VG/FN $450, Turok #3 VF/NM@$320, Blue Beetle (Fox) #51 FN/VF@$325, Gangster and Gun Molls #2 VF@$300, Frankenstein (Prize) #27 VF@ #180 , Girls' Romance #2 VF@$220, John Wayne #5 FN+@$220, and Gangsters Can't Win #2 VF+@$250.

Silver Age: Well, after many years of increasing prices, high-grade Silver has cooled a little. We did purchase a really nice original-owner collection of Marvel comics and did well selling high grade slabbed and un-slabbed comics. The prices that we were paid in 2010 were not high as in previous years for the same kind of material. Even Amazing Spider-Man has cooled a bit and is not our best selling Silver Age comic title any longer. This may be because it now Guides so high, relative to other titles. Many Marvel keys are still able to sell above Guide especially Fantastic Four #1, Journey Into Mystery #83, Tales of Suspense #39 and Incredible Hulk #1. Iron Man #1, Silver Surfer #1 and #4 are selling especially well.

DC Silver is still a strong seller in FN to VF grades. The higher grades, while much scarcer than Marvel, tend to move a little slower. There are a few titles that are moving like Green Lantern, Action, Adventure and Detective. This year was the 1st time since the middle 1990s that I felt I needed to discount my Silver Age down to half of Guide to move some of the more common titles in lower grades. This being said, I think it is time to cut guide prices for most lower grade Super-hero titles. I put a lot of lower priced comics in bargain bins and sold them for a flat price. This helped sales volumes at shows but caused me to re-evaluate how much I could pay for this material.

Most other genres (TV/Movie, Humor, Romance, Western) from the Silver Age are not selling as well as in previous years, and larger discounts are needed to sell many of these. The exceptions are Harvey titles like Little Dot, Richie Rich and Sad Sack, which I hardly ever get in quantity, but they sell well because they are already so affordable. Magnus Robot Fighter and Doctor Solar seem to be selling well if a good discount is offered.

Bronze Age: Many common titles of this era were selling at lower values, even in very high grades. Those truly rare gems, will be the comics, that after 10 years of grading, still are unique, or only two or three in grade. We purchased a DC 100 Page Super Spectacular #4 and it graded a CGC 9.6. To date, there are no others of the same or higher, and only two 9.4s. This is a scarce Bronze Age comic in grade. How many others like this can there be? Some of the better selling titles are Avengers, Detective Comics, Eternals, Incredible Hulk, Master of Kung Fu and X-Men. Anything from this era except a few keys are impossible to sell in less than VF unless priced at just a few dollars. Some sales of note were Amazing Spider-Man #129 VF+@ $550, Giant-Size X-Men #1 VF-@$350 and X-Men #94 FN/VF@$400.

Magazines: We picked up some nice magazines in a high grade Marvel collection. Some of the titles that sold very well were Deadly Hands of Kung Fu, Rampaging Hulk and Savage Sword of Conan. We hardly purchased any Warren or other magazines, so our sales were weak on those titles. Some sales of note were Deadly Hands of Kung Fu #26 NM+@$100, #31 NM+@$100 and Foom #1 NM@$200.

Modern Age & Independents: We usually only sell certain titles from this era, but with the purchase of an original owner collection from the 1960s - present, we have been willing to sell whole runs of many Marvel titles. Wolverine miniseries #1-4 are still selling, but at much lower prices. Otherwise high grade Marvel titles like Avengers, Daredevil, Spider-Man and X-Men are still selling at or above Guide. Some sales of note were Amazing Spider-Man #238 NM-@$75, Wolverine V1#1 CGC 9.8 @ $300, Daredevil #181 CGC 9.6 @$50 and X-Men #266 CGC 9.2@$50.

Graded books: I am still convinced that this is the best way to sell pre-1975 comics in very high grade. I believe it is the best way to keep really nice comics from getting damaged and to tell if any repairs or restoration has been done. As a hedge against inflation I recommend investing in comics, instead of (possibly overpriced) gold. The best investment comics are sure to be third party graded comics. Some sales of note were Fantastic Four #1 CGC 6.5 @$13,500, Incredible Hulk #1 CGC 1.8@ $1200, Amazing Fantasy #15 CGC 4.5 Trim@ $3600, and Tales of Suspense #39 CGC 2.5 @ $1300.

Internet Sales: Most of our internet sales have been through our eBay store, even though we have two websites with over 45,000 items listed. We have had steady sales of our graded comics through this venue. We usually sell only CGC graded comic books on eBay, but we list our entire inventory at www.Terryscomics.com and www.NationwideKomics.com .

In summary, despite the continuing recession of the past two years, we have still managed to maintain steady sales. I want to thank all the collectors out there that continue to keep collecting comics as a priority in their lives. I also want to thank all the investors that have used comics as tangible assets in their portfolios. Comics still seem to be a good place to spend our money.

While the economy has stayed in a holding pattern, many people have looked to comic books to keep their minds off unemployment, inflation, and wars overseas, so similar to a time our parents knew over half a century ago!

I was less active at shows this year due to a battle with cancer that kept me home for much of the Spring and early Summer, but let's take a gander at what was selling for me.

Pulps: Slowed down for me a bunch, and I bought several collections, other than "violence", "bondage", or "drug use" covers, which were snapped up quick, most sat in the boxes.

Big Little Books: I picked up a collection of low grade Mickey Mouse BLBs, most of which found new homes quickly in the $30 to $50 range. Crime and adventure titles didn't move to well for me.

© DIS

Mickey Mouse BLBs that are for sale find new homes quickly. (Mickey Mouse and the 7 Ghosts #1475 shown)

Golden Age: Since I was doing "smaller" shows to stay close to home for treatment this year I didn't sell much in the way of Golden Age. I preferred to acquire books from this era while the economy is slow. However a couple sales of note included Superman #2 FR $1,200, and Batman #18 (Hitler) VG $700.

Silver Age: While I was able to both buy and sell boxes full of Silver Age books over the past year, not many "keys" crossed my tables. With unemployment above the national average in California, people were out selling stuff in force at Flea Markets making it easy to get new material on a constant basis. While they were not in noteworthy condition, people were thrilled to buy from me over the last year over a dozen copies of Fantastic Four #48, 5 copies of Silver Surfer #1, 2 copies of Hulk #6, 4 copies of Adventure #300, 3 copies of Batman #200, and multiples of Vampirella #1, 2, and 3.

Bronze Age: An era I have more respect for all the time. While I don't deal in slabbed books this has become "bread and butter" for me. '70s DC War and Mystery books just don't stay in stock, and the people I'm selling to seem to prefer a copy they can pick up and read. Marvel titles from this era seem to be more condition driven as far as sales go, though key Spider-Man issues from this era will sell in most grades for me.

Modern Age: The key here is cheap since I don't sell slabbed items. But Deadpool, Swamp Thing, X-Men, and War books all have strong demand.

Undergrounds: As always my strongest area year in and out. Sales of Rick Griffin books stayed strong, I sold 5 copies of Man From Utopia at $80 to $100 each, 3 Tales From The Tube (comic size) at $60 to $75 each, Tales From The Tube (mag size) $50. Robert Crumb is, as always, the king. I sold a Zap #1 (Plymell) FR/GD $800, Zap #1 (Donahue) VF+ $800, Zap #2 GD/VG $150, Zap #3 NM $125, Alexander Galleries Crumb catalog NM $400. Other sales of note included Freak Brothers #1 (1st) FN $250 and Bible of Filth NM $300.

Rock Posters and Tickets: Always fairly strong for me, and this year was no different. Sales included 2 copies of BG-105 the Jimi Hendrix "Flying Eyeball" poster (second printings). A NM one went for $1,200 and I wholesaled a VG copy for $300. I also sold a complete set of "Eyeball" tickets for $500. Other Rick Griffin posters remain in high demand as well. Other sales of note included Big Brother and the Holding Co tickets to the Selland Arena in Fresno at $300 each and Cream tickets from the same venue at $500 each. Always make sure you know what printing you are getting when buying posters! I had several people bring me posters they bought thinking they were firsts that turned out to be seconds in terms of the printing.

So that was my year at large! Be safe, lets hope the economy turns around, and guys over 40 make sure you get a cancer screening! It saved my life!

See you all in the funny papers!

Against all odds, the comic book market continued to be very strong at the high end of the spectrum. In spite of the continued negative economic conditions, comic books still sold for record prices in 2010. Last year I predicted that 2010 would bring our first $1,000,000 sale. Little did I know that it would happen more than once! Astonishing year to see the least.

Golden Age: Certainly high grade Golden Age comics still remain King of this sector of the hobby. So much so that the average collector has little to no chance of acquiring these issues for mainstream titles. Pre-Robin *Detective*s in any grade are now also out of reach for the rank and file collectors. Timely comics, at least Captain America, USA Comics (with Cap covers) and middle of the run Marvel Mystery

Comics in high grade sell for crazy money.

It's actually kind of depressing when a mid-run Marvel Mystery in high grade sells for more than an All Star Comics #3 in low or restored grade. However, bargains can be found in mainstream publishers' second tier titles and most of the non-Timely/non-DC publishers. If you are happy with lower grade copies like I am, there are still lots of fun books you can collect at an affordable price.

Silver Age: By and large, Silver Age comics prices have levelled off, and in many cases dropped in 2010. The notable exceptions are the big Marvel Key issues. Fantastic Four #1, Amazing Spider-Man #1, Amazing Fantasy #15, Incredible Hulk #1 and Tales of Suspense #39 all sell at very high prices in all grades. DC Keys have come back down to Earth. At the beginning of the year, Showcase #22 was selling for big dollars. By the end of the year, copies sat at those artificially inflated prices.

Bronze Age: If you aren't a Hulk #181, you can be had at a bargain! Still, the usual suspects sell when priced right.

2010 continued the challenging times that began in 2009. Many common, very high grade pieces took absolute haircuts with many falling 50%. If history is any guide, 2009-2010 will have proven to be one of the great times to invest in the best. Keys, for the most part, escaped this debacle and even showed slight increases. Continuing trends from prior years, we simply cannot keep the following in stock, in any grade: Giant-Size X-Men #1, X-Men #94, X-Men #1, Amazing Spider-Man #1, Amazing Spider-Man #129, Amazing Fantasy #15, Fantastic Four #1, Incredible Hulk #181, Brave And The Bold #28, Justice League of America #1, Showcase #22 and Flash #105. A couple of keys that have slowed a little, at least for now, are Avengers #1 and Iron Man #1. On to the shows!

Pittsburgh: Our first stop of 2010. This is the smallest market we travel to on the trade circuit but it's close to home and we've developed some great customers out there. The chance to eat at Primanti Brothers (fries on the sandwich, sweet slaw) seals the deal. This was the first show we brought our full compliment of CGC books and it was well received.

Philadelphia: Jimmy and the guys at Wizard continue to bring in a nice crowd and the customers are ready to spend, despite being put directly behind the 40' t-shirt vendor. It would be great to see Marvel/DC and other big players attend to make the show feel more major league. Philadelphia fans deserve it.

Baltimore: What can you say here? Show gets better every year and if the devil is in the details, Mark Nathan and crew are at the top of the show promoter list. The show is very organized and well promoted with a great mix of artists/vendors while still maintaining the vibe of a pure comic book show. Take a 10 minute ride to G and M's for the best crab cake you will ever eat in your life.

New York: Wow, really hard to even start a report. The crowds were surreal. We sold it all, from low grade raw to CGC 9.8s and everything in between. Mark and the rest of the team at Reed have created an incredible show in just a few years. Far and away our best show for sales and buys.

Richmond: This show is up and coming. Brett really brought the people through the door, but the room may have been a little overwhelmed as there was plenty of better material available. It will be interesting to watch this show develop. Great eats at The Tobacco Company resturant in downtown Richmond.

We look forward to adding Chicago and Detroit to the 2011 schedule.

Internet: eBay becomes (thankfully) less and less of our business everyday. Launching our own website this year (gregreececomics.com) has been a nice punch to our customer base. We currently feature over 1,000 CGC slabs and will be adding our better raw inventory beginning in 2011.

Notable Sales: Showcase #22 CGC 2.0 $875, CGC 2.5 $975, 3.0 $1250, 5.0 $2800, Avengers #1 CGC 6.0 $3500, Amazing Spider-Man #1 CGC 4.0 $2800, X-Men #2 CGC 9.4 $10,000, Batman #62 CGC 8.0 $1900, Tales From The Crypt #32 CGC 9.4 $800, Vampirella #57 CGC 9.8 $400, Batman #193 CGC 9.8 $2200 + $500 in trade and Captain America Comics #4 CGC 8.0 $8300.

Investment Picks: If (when?) CGC starts grading Treasury Editions, these will explode in value. They are incredibly hard to store and to travel with, so most dealers, if they bother at all, bring them loose. If there was a NM/NM+ copy in their stock, it is eradicated quickly.

I still like Brave and the Bold #28, JLA #1, Strange Tales #115, JIM #83 (all picks from last year). Even though they moved up some, there is still room to the upside. I am especially high on Strange Tales #115.

White pages from the Golden Age - early Silver Age: when GPA (or someone), starts to officially track this, these will burn up the chart. They are incredibly difficult to find but if you're diligent, you can still find copies at little to no premium to their CR/OW counterparts. Do not expect this trend to continue so buy while you can.

Pedigrees are much like the white-paged copies mentioned above (in fact, many Pedigrees have white pages) in that they can, in many cases, be had for little to no premium over a similar, non-pedigreed copy. This is especially true of more recent pedigrees (Rocky Mountain, etc.) as a lot of collectors intially looked down their nose at these "newer" finds. They are still being auctioned off and are readily available for purchase. Once the market absorbs them and they only come up for resale, I believe pricing will move up.

Ice Cold: Westerns (except in very high grade), Funny Animals, lower-mid grade common Silver/Bronze. It sells but has to be discounted significantly.

In summary, I hope 2011 finds your friends and family healthy and that you find some great books for your collection. See you on the circuit!

Heritage Auctions (HA.com)

As 2010 dawned, with the record auction price for a comic book standing at "only" $317,000, little did we know that within a year we would sell three comics for above that amount, and that all of them would be the same issue! It began with our well-documented auction sale of a VF 8.0 copy of Detective Comics #27 for $1,075,500. This book came to us from a savvy collector who had assembled his collection in the 1960s and 1970s, the days when an adult making a salary could afford all of key comics, if he or she could only find them for sale.

Later we offered a VF-minus 7.5 copy, bought by a college student in Hawaii in 1974 for $1,200, or 90% of the youngster's savings at the time. He ended up auctioning the comic in 2010 to help put his own son through college, and it's safe to say he accomplished that given the final price of $657,250.

Then we had the distinct pleasure of offering an original-owner copy of the book, believe it or not. The fellow who paid 10 cents for it in 1939, Robert Irwin of Sacramento, was in the auction room to see his FN/VF copy sell for $492,937.

The rarefied air of high six-figure books aside, we do have some other observations on the past year. One thing that's striking is that newcomers to the hobby do not let their collecting be defined by the tastes of earlier generations. Take Simon and Kirby. While geniuses in anyone's book, the prices of their comics were driven up by the old-school collector but seem to be cooling off these days. Not that Captain America Comics #1 has lost any ground, but look at Adventure Comics #73. Top of Guide was $25,000 last year, but collectors with that much to spend these days are spending it on something they can identify with, and the Manhunter is not that character.

Two books that many are looking for are Detective Comics #31 and #35: We think the Overstreet value is still too conservative on both of these Batman keys, and that they are among the 20 most valuable comics in the hobby. Issue #31 in particular is in very high demand in any grade. If you look at the Guide of 30 years ago, neither of these made the top 50 Golden Age books, but the likes of Boy Explorers #2, Wow Comics #1, USA Comics #1 and Silver Streak #6 did. We couldn't imagine someone preferring those books to a Detective #31 or #35 today.

Hot Covers: A few books that are hotly contested whenever we offer them are: Exciting Comics #39 (Nazis giving poisoned candy to kids), Giant Comics Edition #12 (Matt Baker prostitute cover), Our Army At War #112 (picturing all of Sgt. Rock's Easy Company; while superhero comics often show all the main characters together, war books rarely do), Rangers Comics #14 (a particularly eye-catching bondage cover) and Weird Tales of the Future #3 (a ghoulish Wolverton cover)

Exciting Comics #39 is one book that is hotly contested in every auction.

Significant and in demand: Despite what's noted above, significance is not dead, and here are some books that are hot for reasons other than the cover: Peanuts #1 (1953) and Four Color #878. It seems incredible that characters as popular as the Peanuts were previously a bit under the radar when it came to comic books, but that is the case. The 1953 Peanuts #1 had a "top of Guide" value of $210 last year, but we sold a FN/VF copy for $2,151. Green Lantern #7: Sinestro is getting his due as a great villain. Daring Love #1: Steve Ditko's first comic book work. Gobbledygook #1 and #2: Tricky because CGC won't authenticate them, but very sought-after if they have the right provenance (we sold #1 in VF+ for $11,352). A pre-Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles Eastman and Laird publication, with the Turtles making their first printed appearance on the back cover. House of Secrets #81 and House of Mystery #174: The changeovers of these titles to horror/mystery format. Also House of Mystery #175 with the first appearance of Cain. Spirit section June 2, 1940: the first Spirit newspaper section.

Early Action Comics: We had the opportunity to auction an incredible bound volume set of Action #1-24. While #1 needs no introduction, and people have woken up to the demand for #7 (the second Superman cover), when we paged through this volume (carefully!) we realized that we had never previously seen high-grade copies of #5 (desert legionnaire cover), #8 (a redcoat fighting an Indian), or #10 or #13 (the third and fourth Superman covers). Very tough finds one and all.

Archie Comics* #1: Some jaws dropped when a VF+ copy sold for $167,300 in our February 2011 auction. This may not have been thought of as a six-figure book in most quarters, but the winning bidder told us that he had been looking for a high-grade copy for four decades. In last year's market report we noted that issues #2-10 would also be in high demand, but no copies of those issues crossed our path in the ensuing year!

Savannah pedigree collection of high-grade DC: This collection has totaled $600,000 as we write this, with thousands of comics left to go. It was consigned to us by Shelton Drum of Heroes Aren't Hard to Find in North Carolina – it came from a collector who acquired his books directly from the distributor from the late 1950s through the 1970s, and it's particularly strong in DCs, especially non-superhero DCs.

This collection demonstrated once again that DC comics were preserved by fewer collectors than the Marvels of the same era, and are thus much tougher to find in top grades. While smash successes like Showcase #43 (Dr. No) fetching 4x Guide and Showcase #45 (Sgt. Rock) getting 8x Guide could be attributed to the popularity of James Bond or the fanatical following that DC War books have, how do you explain Showcase #25 featuring Rip Hunter fetching 5x Guide? Only by the fact that being the best copy ever offered counts for something, even for a lower-demand book.

A surprise even to us has been the performance of the 1960s-1970s DC romance comics from this same collection. Take Secret Hearts #121: not a key issue in anyone's book, reading copies are readily available for perhaps 5 dollars on eBay, and "top of Guide" is $32. The CGC 9.8 Savannah copy fetched $1,075! True Near Mint romance comics come along very seldom, and collectors realized the uniqueness of the opportunity

Twin Cities pedigree: The best Marvel Silver Age collection we've ever sold (and we've sold plenty) at $1 million plus, this came to us from the estate of Gary Dahlberg of Minneapolis, who tragically passed away at age 62 before he could enjoy the financial bonanza from his incredible collection. These incredible books put the lie to the often-heard lament "all the great collections have already been discovered." The initial auction totaled $1.3 million for just 407 comics!

Original Comic Art: Original art gets more expensive with each passing year, bad news for buyers but great news for our sellers with our comic art total hitting $9 million last year. A couple of new trends of note: Frank Miller's cover art for Daredevil #188 made some jaws drop by hitting $101,575, and a splash page from Dark Knight Returns #3 topped it to say the least by selling for $448,125, a new record sale (auction or otherwise) for a piece of American comic art. This goes to show that the generation that grew up in the 1980s now has serious money to spend – alas, the comics of that era are too plentiful in high grade for the most part to be particularly valuable, but original art is another story altogether.

Carl Barks Oil Paintings: When radio executive Kerby Confer decided to sell his collection of 40 Carl Barks paintings, it marked the first time in recent memory that top pieces by Barks came to market in a no-reserve auction. The fact that quite a few of them have topped $100,000 despite being sold with no reserve or minimum bid shows that demand for the "Good Duck Artist" is still robust.

My colleagues and I look forward to helping more collectors maximize the value of their four-color treasures in the coming year.

Buddy Saunders, Conan Saunders and Asher Densmore-Lynn MyComicShop.com

Overview by Buddy Saunders: This is my first year to serve as an Overstreet advisor, although I've been a comic collector since 1960 and a retailer since 1961. When I began collecting comics, Marvel was publishing the Lee/Kirby/Ayers big monster comics, and the switch to super heroes was still more than a year away. Those old monster issues of Tales of Suspense, Tales to Astonish, Journey into Mystery, and Strange Tales with the Lee/Ditko back-up stories remain among my favorite comics to this day.

Getting down to market trends, I've been both surprised and pleased at the strength the comic market displayed in 2010. With so much of the economy down and unemployment high, comics held strong. Our stores enjoyed modest sales increases, and our web site experienced its best year yet. In 2010, back issue and new comic sales experienced modest growth over the same months in 2009. The primary exception was the January/February period, when 2010 could not compete with the surge of interest in Amazing Spider-Man #583 and the Obama tie-ins of early 2009.

On the buying side of our operation, 2010 was an outstanding year. We bought almost 50% more back issues in 2010 than in the already-strong 2009. The economy-driven surge in the number of comics offered for sale through our online buying system appears to have kicked off in the summer of 2009, continued into 2010, and then jumped to new highs from February to August of 2010. Over the past year, we have frequently faced such a volume of comics being offered to us for sale that our monthly budget has been insufficient to buy everything sellers want to offer. Looking ahead, we plan to partially alleviate this supply pressure through a significant expansion of our consignment service.

As Overstreet advisors, we at mycomicshop.com plan to bring a data-driven perspective to the Guide, including coverage of the large number of comics at the lower end of the price spectrum to complement the Gold and Silver Age chartbusters that are already thoroughly tracked in these pages. We have over ten years worth of sales data from our web site and eBay store, covering 280,000 comics, graphic novels, and books, and encompassing 9 million data points. We hope to make this data, and especially all recent sales data, available to the Overstreet Guide as soon as the Guide is in a position to make use of it. We believe that reliable, automated delivery of such data from multiple retailers will help make the already reliable Overstreet Guide an even better resource for collectors.

2010 Top 200 Best-Selling Comic Titles

The following table lists the top 200 comic titles sorted by the total quantity sold of both new and back issue comics. The first column is the rank for sales in 2010. The second and third columns show how the title's rank has changed relative to its rank in 2009 and 2000, respectively. A plus sign indicates that a title has moved up in the rankings, and minus that it has moved down. "New" indicates that a title is in the 2010 top 200 but had not yet been published and registered in the rankings for 2009 and/or 2000.

The column to the right of the title name shows the average percentage change in the price of issues belonging to that title. This represents an average across all issues of the title. It does not mean that all issues of the title moved by the same percentage. For example, 2010's 38th ranked title, The Walking Dead, reports an average price increase of 61%. Some issues of TWD increased by less than 61%, some even dropped in price, and some issues increased by substantially more than 61%. But, averaged together across all issues of the title, the average change was an increase of 61%. These percentages are calculated from over 60,000 actual sales in which an issue sold in a given grade in both 2009 and 2010.

Grade Distribution Analysis by Asher Densmore-Lynn:

"I found a collection in my attic..."

Every dealer's heard this a thousand times. And every dealer's heard the next part of it the same thousand times. "They're in great shape -- for their age." Great shape "for their age"? Who knows what that means?

We've gotten pretty good at answering that question. We have a sophisticated collection-purchasing system that we've developed over several years while purchasing many, many books collected by people of all ages, all over America. And these are collections -- not multiple-lot transactions from dealers or "a list of books people sold on eBay," but the actual unfiltered contents of their collections, recorded no matter what grade we found the book in. The following chart shows the aggregate distribution of grades in the thousands of collections we've recorded.

So if we decide that we've got a representative grading sample of every long box still lurking in American attics and closets and basements, what can we learn from it?

Little has changed in storage doctrine since the late 1990s.

This was a surprise, but from now all the way back to 1997, the graph for NM was essentially flat. No matter when it was purchased in the last 14 years, we expect to see four out of five copies of it in NM condition, with essentially no FNs. This is consistent with increased awareness of collectible value during and after the speculative bubble in the early 1990s.

As soon as they're purchased, 20% of all comics go down a grade.

Even for books published in 2010 -- books purchased, read once or twice, and almost immediately sent winging their way to us -- we find no more than 80% remain NM.

Modern Age books tend to Very Fine and Near Mint grades.

We grant that this isn't news to dealers and collectors, so take this instead as an example of how to read our results. 1990 is the first year FN copies make up ten percent of the sample, and 1985 is the first year that NM and VF appear with equal frequency. Even going back into the late Bronze Age around 1980, in the average collection you can still expect half of the books from that year to be VF or better.

Sight unseen, a Bronze Age collection that averages FN or VF isn't unreasonable.

Books graded GD or lower only make up fifteen to thirty percent of the sample in Bronze Age. Of books published in 1975, as many were found in FN as VG, and almost as many were VF as GD.

Few collections average below Very Good.

Even in the Silver Age, VG is where most books tend to settle. This is somewhat surprising; it takes more time and rough handling to push a book into GD territory than one might expect of a book this old. The middle of the Silver Age is over forty years ago, and yet we still expect a little better than two out every three books to be VG or better.

"No, your Iron Man #1 is probably not Near Mint."

1969 is the earliest we've ever recorded a NM book from a collection. It's not until 1973 that even 1% of recorded books come in at 9.2 or better. Most people with high-grade Bronze Age sell them individually, on eBay or through our own transaction system, long before they reach the point of selling their entire collection.

What about the comics already in circulation?

The previous analysis focused on groups of comics that could generally be considered original owner collections -- purchased, stored, and uncirculated among other collectors before being sold as a group. What do we know about the grade distribution of collectible back issues that have already been bought, sold, and traded by any number of collectors and dealers? Comics purchased from sellers using our online want list can help answer this question. Or second chart shows the grade distribution of comics sold to us through our online want list. Please note that this is not representative of all the comics out there in the marketplace. Lower grades of some books would be under-represented, because if we're already well-stocked in high grade copies, the lower grades won't be on our buying list and sellers will be unlikely or unable to submit them. On the flip side, high grade copies of older issues will generally be underrepresented because owners are more likely to sell them directly via consignment or auction.

Grade Distribution of Comics Sold Using Mycomicshop's Online Want List

As we mentioned, in the broadest strokes much of this isn't news to anybody in the industry, but there's a difference between a generally understood trend and hard data, and as far as we know nothing like this has ever been published. We hope this will be useful, whether one is making a preliminary offer or trying to analyze scarcity and grade, and encourage anyone who'd like more information to contact us at webmaster@mycomicshop.com.

Doug Simpson
Paradise Comics

2010 has been a year of continuous growth for Paradise Comics. Despite all the issues involving retailers, our sales continued to show a modest growth at around 4%; thanks in no small part to our growing customer base. Our Internet sales also continued to grow and our website contributed to another increase by 5% in sales over last year.

The greatest area of growth in-store remains our sale of graphic novels. This format is definitely the direction the hobby is going and the major companies have started to take notice. Most of our new customers are coming to pick up graphic novels instead of regular monthly issues.

High Grade Key issues from the Silver and Bronze Age are selling consistently well and demand continues to be high. I simply couldn't keep up with the demand for high-grade Silver and Bronze Age books.

The usual suspects were in great demand: Amazing Fantasy #15, Fantastic Four #1, Daredevil #1, Giant-Size X-Men #1, Incredible Hulk #181, X-Men #94, Incredible Hulk #1, Tales of Suspense #39, and Avengers #4, were all highly requested along with a few other surprises: Amazing Spider-Man #50, Silver Surfer #3, Green Lantern #76 and Cerebus #1 are just a few examples.

Golden Age sales are still very sluggish and only Timely and early Batman and Detective Comics are a guaranteed sale. There is always a market for standard Golden Age hero comics, but never at Guide, and usually well below

Silver Age sales continued to be the bulk of our back issue market, with any high-grade copies selling out as fast as I can get them in.

For DC Silver Age, the greatest demand rests once again with the iconic characters Batman, Superman, Flash, and Green Lantern. Most other titles have been slow sellers. The one book that continued to be high on everyone's wish list was Green Lantern #76, the first Neal Adams work on the title.

Marvel Silver Age is selling very well, with Amazing Spider-Man and X-Men leading the way, and demand for secondary titles like Avengers and Iron Man is increasing. The Marvel Silver Age market is always strong and doesn't look to be slowing down anytime soon.

Bronze Age comic sales continued to rise but only for books in high grade, while demand for mid-grade copies has decreased sharply.

Marvel has the bulk of sales in this category, with John Byrne X-Men (#107-143) and all Amazing Spider-Man issues between #100 and #200 leading the way. These issues are on almost everyone's list and, if I had an entire box of each, they would be gone within a week. I have also noticed an increase in demand for Avengers and Iron Man. It goes without saying that Incredible Hulk #181 is the most in-demand Bronze Age book out there today.

DC titles, including Batman, Justice League of America and Flash, are always in high demand, and Green Lantern is still seeing incredible growth thanks to the Blackest Night and Brightest Day storylines.

Modern book sales have continued their fall in 2010, with the only bright spots being DC's Return of Bruce Wayne storyline and Marvel's Heroic Age reboot event.

Surprisingly, with all the controversy over the most recent Amazing Spider-Man stories, the sales continue to be high. I feel that the future of the medium is with the graphic novel and the increased output by all publishers will continue this trend.

CGC continues to be the ultimate standard in independent third-party grading. I would like to mention that CGC is still the exclusive grading company for Paradise Comics.

Some recent CGC sales include:

Amazing Spider-Man #6 CGC 7.0 $1,300
Amazing Spider-Man #10 CGC 9.2 $2500
Amazing Spider-Man #39 CGC 9.4 $4,200
Amazing Spider-Man #40 CGC 9.4 $3,200
Flash #105 CGC 6.0 $1700
Incredible Hulk #181 CGC 9.0 $1,375
X-Men #1 CGC 6.0 $4,000
X-Men #28 CGC 9.4 $1000
X-Men #94 CGC 9.2 $1050
Amazing Fantasy #15 CGC 2.0 (CGC Sig. Series) $4000
Amazing Spider-Man #1 4.5 (CGC Sig. Series) $4300
Amazing Spider-Man #129 9.2 (CGC Sig. Series) $1300

I also want to mention that 2010 was also the year that Wizard World made its Canadian debut with their inaugural Toronto Comic Con. Now a pop-culture focused event with guests from film and television as well as comics, the convention took place at the Direct Energy Centre, Exhibition Place 100 Princes' Blvd in downtown Toronto on March 26-28, 2010. This was our first year as predominantly a retail set up instead of promoter and the sales were tremendous. The March time frame is great for the Toronto market and I fully expect this show to be seriously large in the next couple of years.

Tony Starks Comics Ina Flash!

This is my first market report for several years. My mother used to tell me if I couldn't say something nice to say nothing at all. So I have remained silent for the past several years – on the market report front anyway.

The market is very mixed. Every month brings reports of some new record sales on key books. Especially high grade key books. I'm not selling them so I'm not quoting the prices – let others brag about the $50,000 Daredevil #1 in NM+ (Silver Age) or the $50,000 Amazing Fantasy #15 in VF-. The ones selling have earned the bragging rights.

But do record prices on elite books – at best just a percent or two of the total books for sale - make for a healthy market? What about the other 98% of the market? It might be true that with million dollar books now established that there is more money flowing in the hobby than ever before. But is this a case – like the USA's economy in general – of the rich getting richer while the poor get poorer?

It seems only a handful of advisors are reporting the severely depressed state of more common books, while the rest don't mention it at all or just in passing note that common books in average condition are slow. Here is the situation. Market trends and online auctions have decimated the value of your VG run of Amazing Spider-Man/FF/JLA/Flash (add your own favorite), just as those same market trends and online auctions have greatly increased the value of your high grade keys. And I said HIGH GRADE keys. A lot of low grade keys have either not increased in value or have decreased as well. JLA #1 in high grade is a great book - a VF/NM will get you over the NM- Guide price. Less than VF copies can be had for no more than Guide and a VG for less than Guide.

All of this started six to eight years ago. eBay revealed that nice – but run - books were fairly common. Just a few examples of eBay sales: Marvel Feature #3 VF (3rd app. Defenders) $10.50/$45 in the OPG. Werewolf By Night #33 VF+ (second Moon Knight) $12.50/OPG $43. Frankenstein #1 VF $26/OPG $49. Doctor Solar #2 VF $12/OPG $63. Amazing Spider-Man #98 NM- (drug issue) $99/OPG $195. All these prices include the shipping costs. They are not exceptional bargains – they are representative of routine sale prices realized. So even "sort of special" issues in VF'ish shape are selling way below Guide. So imagine how VG copies of the run issues go. It is no better.

As the price for high grade keys goes up and up, a lot of collectors are selling their non-key issues to raise money to purchase the key books while they can still afford them. This just further depresses the value of those non-key issues. The bottom line is that for a lot of books, for MOST books, the true market value is one third to one-half the Guide price. It's not a blip, it's not the economy, it is the new market reality. So yes – Action #1 and Detective #27 are million dollar books. But Action and *Detective*s above issue #300 are mostly – with exceptions – selling for one third to one half of Guide.

Which brings us to Overstreet Price Guide itself: The Guide needs to reflect the market reality. As a dealer, I don't really care if Batman #172 in VG is worth $9.00 or $22 or if Doctor Solar #2 is $63 or $12. Both sales are way more than their cover price of 12 cents so I'm still selling collectibles. What matters is if I know what the market value is and I'm paying less than what I'm selling for. I can sell VG Silver and I can sell VF Bronze – just not at Guide prices.

The problem becomes purchasing stock. Those with comics to sell do not want to sell for 10-15% of Guide. They don't want to accept that the true market value of their books is actually only a third of the listed OPG price. Even when they are selling common books to fund their purchase of a nice CGC graded key in 9.4 on ComicLink, they don't want to accept that their Action Comics #405 in FN/VF is not worth the $15 the Guide says it is. They expected at least five bucks for the book, not a buck fifty. Many won't sell – and those that do are resentful. Even worse is explaining this to a non-collector who found a box of old comics in the attic and went out and bought a price guide. Your explanation and offer is considered outright thievery.

If this were a blip, I would be all for riding it out. But it's not. The Guide's reason for existence is at stake here. I know dealers that don't even use the Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide now. Most stuff that comes in the door goes in the 50 cent/ $1 /$2 boxes. Nicer books they look up on the auction sites or GPA for recent sales.

Yet every cloud has a silver lining. If you are a collector that enjoys owning long runs of your favorite titles and characters – it's like you have found a time machine. You can purchase a lot of books now for the prices they were in the late '80s and early '90s. Consider this. A CGC graded 9.0 copy of Avengers #1 is a $25,000 book. A 6.5 is around $2600. Yet for about 1/10th of the price of 9.0 #1 or the same price as a #1 in 6.5, one could own the entire run of Avengers – all 500 + issues. IF you are willing to "settle" for 4.0 copies of Avengers #1 and #4, 4.0 to 5.0 for the rest up to issue #100 and 6.0-7.0 condition on issues to #100-200. After issue #200 mostly NM. It is now possible to make your collecting dollars go very far indeed.

Bargains abound – and that is the good news. Even "hot" books like Amazing Spider-Man #1 or Green Lantern #1 or Avengers #1 can be had for no more than Guide – often less – at VG or lesser conditions. Recent sales of such include Fair condition copies of Amazing Spider-Man #1 ($811) #2 ($120) and #3 ($106). Now Fair condition has always been a grade that the price varies according to the book. But the #1 sold for just over one-half of the Good price and issues #2 and #3 sold at one-third of the Good price.

A final observation or market forecast. The Marvel Keys have recorded the greatest price increases. Marvels have historically led the market. But DCs historically at some point play catch up. The key DCs appear to me to be overlooked and undervalued. In the past Showcase #4 and Amazing Fantasy #15 were close in value. Now AF #15 is dominating at 2.5x – 3.0x the price of Showcase #4. Spider-Man's first appearance is far more popular with fans than the Flash's reintroduction for certain. Spider-Man is an iconic hero, a hero for our times. But Showcase #4 is a far harder book to find and started the reintroduction of the Super Hero, began the Silver Age. Stan Lee and company would never have introduced the Fantastic Four, Spider-Man, Iron Man and the rest if DC had not been making money on the Flash, Green Lantern and the JLA for years. The major DCs all precede the major Marvels by years and are far more elusive in high grade. The DC keys could be poised for big leaps in the upcoming years, especially as DC ramps up their movie making business and moves outside the Batman and Superman franchises.

Basement Comics

What an amazingly strange year for selling comics! The show year started with Mega Con in Florida in February and people were desperate to buy something, anything from your Booth and either invest in it or add it to their collections. By November at the Virginia Comic Con you would need a rifle to even try to make someone spend a few dollars on quality material...what happened? The economy has seemed to have gotten better and people I know in and out of comic world are spending a few more dollars than normal. Did comics magically start to lose their luster as the year passed away? Yes and No!

From January to early August, show sales were steadily on the rise even after we failed to score any major collection to wow the crowd with for 2010. The usual suspects sold at all of those shows like Hulk #181, Amazing Spider-Man #129, Giant-Size X-Men and all the other issues along that vein. I guess what basically sold was High Grade (what a shock) and Key issues. We even again managed to sell huge runs of High Grade Dells such as Little Lulu and Four Color series. So I guess as long as it was glossy and shiny they wanted it.

Even hot books like Amazing Spider-Man #1 can be affordable at VG or lesser grades.

It is however the average books that look like they are taking a turn in a new direction. From San Diego Comic-Con on the number of dealers both small an large were hanging signs that stated 40-90% off the table inventory. Silver Age that was Fine plus or less and just about all Bronze Age titles in even High Grade were being offered at a fraction of Overstreet values and the buyers had so many options that even then they did not sell out at blistering speeds. Is this a serious market correction that is long overdue or are dealers who are aging out just tired of carrying tons of boxes of inventory and just trying to cut back on what they are offering. If we go the way of baseball cards where cards are listed at a certain price then offered at a flat 50% off that right from the beginning then how can we ever expect the buyers to ever buy at retail prices at shows ever again? When I was a younger man, Mr. Steve Geppi when asked about having a sale at his store stated "How can you discount a collectible" and I have adhered to that since that day. We do not hang super discount signs but prefer to reward customers individually if they hit a certain spending level, and not at 50% off. How can you replace your inventory at these levels ?? I have heard that you just buy cheaper and sell cheaper.....great...but that cycle eventually leads to little or no value and everything from 1966 forward ending up in dollar bins. Will the massive discount movement continue in 2011? Will those who were bailing out due to slow economy in their areas just fold up their tents and leave show circuit anyway? Let's stay tuned and read next year's letter and see where the path has gone.

eBay sales were actually the pleasant surprise for 2011! The slow build from the crumbled economy had taken off this year. Only one month was the same as the year before and most months were up tremendously. All items offered were selling quickly and many being shipped out of the country. Strip reprints, Golden Age and Silver Age, Fanzines, Magazines and Classics Illustrated. Classics, as long as they were cheap were snapped up by I guess baby Boomers who wanted to go back and re-read these legendary comics. Love comics priced under $15.00 did very well as did Horror

Comics, that also had a ceiling of $30.00. Even the notoriously slow Summer months kept us busy packing and shipping items out in between traveling to Summer shows. All these steady and wonderful sales were generated out of our online eBay store, auctions were another story all together. Auctions all year have been a great way to DUMP items you no longer are in love with due to the fact that bidders will not run it up unless it is one of those magical key or rare issues that everyone wants. For example we listed a copy of Zap Comics #1 2nd print in Mint Condition and top closing bid was $11.55. CGC comics sell for far below GPAnalysis levels and with the exception of a few strange items we listed that surprised us with multiple bidders that paid crazy money for a comic we had little interest in.....who can tell these days! I can only hope that bidding stays active during the upcoming year and perhaps bargain hunters will just want anything to buy and read for the cold winter ahead!!

When the show schedule gets under way we all return to the fun old road warrior days of long drives and eating bad highway food until we get to our destination. This year started off with Mega Con in Orlando Florida and as usual it was run professionally and is a joy to set up at. I usually do okay at Mega Con but 2010 was really good and the huge crowds all seemed to want some comics. Sun, great food after show and made money...not a bad trip at all.

C2E2 had its first show in Chicago and to us it was a great experience. Load in was a little crazy and load out was a nightmare if you literally did not run and get your van like we did and get out right away. Buying was great at this show and collections walked in through the front door. The guys did a fantastic job and I am sure the show will build and become one of the shows to do each year.

We also returned to Heroes Con in Charlotte after at least a five year absence and it was also a lot of fun. If you are a comic person and want to spend time in a fantastic city, then this is it! Good crowd and we worked hard to make it a decent trip and well worth the six hour plus drive!

Wizard Philly was our June show and while it was only a little over an hour away and we feel we must set up at it, it is sliding down a path towards being less and less of a comic show. Our location was less than perfect and we blame ourselves for being the ones that picked it. We managed enough of buying and selling to make it an okay experience and will no doubt be back there yet again.

Chicago Wizard was as usual heavily attended but seemed to lose some of its steam compared to the year before. Wizard has lost the big comic publishers to fill the room but instead has loaded it with people to get autographs from...celebs and semi-celebs. My oldest son looks like Johnny Fair Play from Survivor and at least gets to yack with him once a year.

Baltimore Comic Con is my home town show! I live a whole thirty five minutes away from the show and have the best time at this show. While Marc Nathan never releases attendance totals, it is a well attended affair. Saturday was insane and Sunday a lot less, but added together it makes for a great show. If you are a comic collecting fan, then the Baltimore Comic Con is the show to attend! Lots of dealers and a crazy amount of comic artists and comic celebs! If you decide to attend due to this endorsement then please stop by my booths and offer to buy me lunch after you have had a great time here!!

NY Comic Con is going to be THE Monster Giant show either starting in 2011 or 2012! This show had at least 100,000 people in the building and this place rocked from opening bell to close of business on Sunday. Larry and Mark are super great to deal with and have always helped us out with any problem that has popped up. While New York City is not known for being my favorite city out there, I find I can relax and have fun at this show and do very well as an exhibitor. You like crowds? Huge San Diego like setups and live in East Coast? Come to this show and be ready to be wowed!

We will be celebrating twenty years as officially being known as Basement Comics in 2011. While I have done business far before that, we officially started as this business, and I threw my college degree away in 1991 and wanted to see if a living could be made out of this hobby. Two grown kids and living a decent life so far has proven that going out on my own was not a bad idea after all. I would like to thank all who read this and have spent even a dollar with me over the years. All the sales have contributed to the overall success and I greatly appreciate you keeping me in business and making sure I never became unhappy in an office somewhere looking out of a window wondering what else I should have done.
Thank You !!

Doug Sulipa's Comic World

The worldwide recession continues and has affected sales on many back issues. Buyers have concentrated on four main continued avenues of collecting; (1) High Grade investment copies; (2) Low grade reading copies; (3) Key issues in ALL Grades, including #1s, Origins, top Artist issues, last issues and scarcer issues; (4) Below-Guide bargains while prices are depressed. Since the 1960s, downturns in the economy have not much affected sales of back issue collectible comics. However, this is not a normal recession, and it has many people running scared, thus buyers have been more careful and selective.

For the first time in nearly a decade, our percentage of high grade copies sales has started to decline. Investors no longer will pay high prices for just anything in high grade. They want popular titles (especially Marvel), older comics (especially pre-1975) and key issues. Our bestselling high grade comics were virtually all in the $5 to $50 each price range this year, mostly Bronze Age and including a lot of early to mid 1980s titles. Low grade reading copies of uncommon pre-1980 was the only area where sales were up this year. Sales on most 1955-1990 comics that were uncommon, scarce or rare in ANY grade were strong this year, many bringing 135-175%+ Guide prices.

By far the most requested Marvel and DC comics were all the major and minor Key issues, but many are getting hard to re-stock due to relentless demand, otherwise we would have sold a lot more. Strangely enough, for most 1975 & newer comics, the #1 issues are usually the most common issues, thus possibly not as good an investment as many expect. Meanwhile many LAST issues (especially on longer running titles) are in very low supply and high demand, with most remaining very undervalued. Many many KEY issue comics in GD-FN are now far too undervalued in Guide and near impossible to keep in stock (just try to find Conan #1 or Iron Man #1 in FN, or Amazing Fantasy #15 in FR/GD anywhere near Guide). Affordable KEY issues is a fast growing area for dealers. Most desirable books can easily bring anywhere from 125% to 200% Guide (thus many of the Guide prices are now wholesale).

As we have about 1,300,000 comics and related items in our warehouse, we have literally tons of overstock. We have continued our clearance sales by making up Overstock sets in groups of approx. 10, 25, 50 or 100 items, typically at 35-65% off Guide range. Clearance sets continue to be very popular, thus we hope to set up our efforts and offer hundreds to thousands more Clearance sets through the year 2011, ideally clearing out about 1/3 of our inventory over the next decade.

It needs to be noted that eBay auctions are often not a good indicator of value. A forced sale in a short period of time (typically 7 days) often causes skewed results. Imagine a typical antique shop putting everything in the store up for sale by auction in a 7-day period. Many good items would bring 5-20% of retail, but if the seller is patient, a lot of items can easily bring full retail. When I buy a collection, the percentage of retail I pay is based on estimated turnover time at full retail prices, broken down into 4 broad catagories; (1) Percentage that will sell in under 90 days; (2) 3-12 months; (3) 1-5 years; (4) 5-10 years or possibly never sell. I virtually never discount items in category 1. I am most likely to discount items in category 4. For items that fall into categories 2 or 3, I usually am patient and let them sit in my inventory until the right buyer comes along. When an eBay seller puts items in categories 2-4 up for auction, there could easily be no ready buyers that week, thus bad results. Ebay stores with fixed Buy-it-Now prices are a much better indicator of current values (although this still does not account for varied good to bad condition grading).

Archie Comics: Our Archie inventory is the world's biggest, with over 35,000+ Archie Comics (90% of 1958-2000 in stock; good selection of 1957 & older, 2001 & newer) and 10,000+ Digests in stock (95% of 1973-2005 issues in stock), thus we always do well with them. The great majority of our sales are items in the $2 to $20 each price ranges. But this year we had an above average number of advanced collectors filling in gaps in the collection in the $25-$100 each price range. Key issues and minor Key issues were in higher than usual demand. Key issue buyers typically wanted higher grades, but for most 1965-1985, even VF copies can be hard to find. Betty & Veronica were once again our strongest sellers, including all the Archie Giants and other related titles. All Golden Age 1941-1950 Archie titles are in demand (at 120%-150% Guide in any grade). Everything with Dan DeCarlo art is in demand (includes many non-Archie titles and his Adult Girlie magazine cartoons). All Archies from 1951-1964 are continued good sellers (most GD-FN copies we sell at 120-140% Guide). The circa 1960 Horror & Sci-Fi cover issues have about double the demand of other surrounding issues (at 120-135% Guide).

There was a lot of interest in 1982-1990 appearances of rich "bad girl" Cheryl Blossom. Interest in Cheryl Blossom exploded in 11/1994 because of the "Love Showdown" storyline where Archie picked Cheryl over Betty and Veronica. Since that time, she has been one of the most wanted characters by completionist fans. Her 1982-1983 appearances are in low supply due to Low Print runs and should continue to climb in value. The four 1995-1997 Cheryl Blossom mini-series and 1997-2001 on-going series are also well up in demand and a good long-term bet. It was a slower than average year for Katy Keene, probably as most are high valued and priced, but her Low Print 1983-1990 title and Digests continue to be in demand and short supply. Josie & the Pussycats has been a top seller for nearly a decade and this year was no different. Pre-Pussycats Josie #1-44 were up in demand, as were the 1960s appearances in Laugh #145-168 and Pep. Josie's first app in Archie's Pals 'N' Gals #23 is still very undervalued and now hard to find (sells at 150-200% Guide). Sabrina the Teen-Age Witch was not quite as popular this year, but still in steady demand. Early appearances of Little Sabrina (appearing in Little Archie #59-179) were selling decent, but later issues were slower titles.

The Red Circle/Archie Adventure Horror and superhero titles were titles often requested in VF or better, and they are in steady demand. The 1987-1992 Low Print Era Last Issues are in high demand as Minor-Key issues; Archie and Me #161 (2/87), Archie at Riverdale High #113 (2/87), Archie Giant Series #632 (7/92), Archie's Girls Betty & Veronica #347 (4/1987), Archie's Pals 'N' Gals #224 (9/1991), Archie's TV Laughout #105 (2/86), Betty & Me #200 (8/92), Everything's Archie #157 (9/91), Jughead #352

(6/87), Laugh #400 (4/87), Life with Archie #286 (9/91), Pep #411 (3/87); (at 150-200% Guide). The Archie brand Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles Adventures are the comics of choice by the general public, as those are the ones they remember on the newsstands.

TMNT Adventures #1,19,50-72, Special #6-10, Sourcebook #1-2, Digests, and Mighty Mutant Animals #5-9, are Low Print items (sell at 200-400% Guide). Early Sonic the Hedgehog are in demand and are some of the most valuable comics of the 1990s, but later issues are slower sellers. The 1995-1997 era Hanna-Barbera titles are already hard to find, are in high demand, sold out with almost all dealers and very undervalued in the Guide, with #1-5 issues being uncommon (sell at 150% Guide) with most #6-up issues being scarce (sell at 200-400% Guide).

Archie Comics #1 is now one of the hottest comics of the entire Golden Age, with low to mid grade CGC copies selling in the 300-400% Guide range. All Golden Age Archie comics are top sellers in any grade. The 70th Anniversary of the Archie gang approaches, making them among the most enduring comic characters of all time, members of an elite club, as only a handful of characters have attained uninterrupted newsstand distribution for 7 decades. Most of the others are DC characters. Superhero collectors often underestimate the potential of Humor and Cartoon characters.

Atlas/Marvel: More and more Marvel collectors are looking backwards and discovering the Atlas titles. 90% of what we sell is in the FR/GD through VG range, which works out great, as these are the condition the majority of copies we locate fall into. The Horror and Sci-Fi titles were once again the most requested, especially the 1956-1962 Kirby and Ditko Era issues. We sold about 100 low grade issues (at 115-135% Guide). Fans in the US want the post-Code issues they remember in the 1970s Marvel Reprint titles; UK fans want originals of issues reprinted in their Alan Class titles. Next most requested were all the Western titles (old and newer at 120-135% Guide). Millie the Model #18-93 by Dan DeCarlo were impossible to keep in stock (GD-FN copies bring 150-200% Guide; VF-NM copies at 125-150% Guide). If I could locate a set of the DeCarlo Millie, they would likely prove to be the bestselling of all Atlas Marvels. The Humor, Cartoon and Parody, Romance and War Titles were moderate steady sellers (at 115-130% Guide).

ATLAS/Seaboard comics (1974-1975): When these first hit the market, they were among the first major top-selling comics among collectors (as opposed to just the general public). I pre-ordered and sold an average of 250-500 copies of each in my early comic shop years and remember them well. The IDs (independent distributors) did not want to give them shelf space, so they had above-average returns. For these and other reasons, the publisher folded before any one title could print more than 4 issues. For nearly 25 years these were dumped into bargain bins, causing the worldwide dealer inventories to virtually disappear, with remaining copies now mostly in the VG-FN Condition ranges (VF copies are now uncommon; strict VF/NM or better copies are scarcer).

Circa 1999, due to the internet and eBay, these were back in demand. For the last decade, we have had constant demand, especially from collectors/completionists who want the full set of all comics produced from this publisher. The biggest obstacle for the last decade has always been the scarce Gothic Romances #1 (sells at 200% Guide) and My Secrets #1 (B&W magazine; 2/1975; sells at 300-500% Guide); Many fans finally settle on collecting only all the color comics and skipping all the magazines (or just those 2 rare magazines).

Vicki #3 and 4 are scarce, bringing 200% Guide in ANY grade. All these mags are Uncommon to Scarce: Devilina #2, Movie Monsters #2-4, Thrilling Adventures #2 and Weird Tales of the Macabre #2 (sell at 125-150% Guide), Movie Monsters (#1 is Uncommon and sells for $30 in VF/NM; #2-4 are hard to keep in stock & bring $50 each in strict VF/NM).

Longtime fans love this publisher due to familiar creators including: Adams, Austin, Boyette, Buckler, Chaykin, Colan, Conway, Craig, Ditko, Fleisher, Heath, Marcos, McWilliams, Milgrom, Nostrand, Ploog, Sekowsky, Springer, Summers, Thorne, Toth, Wood and Wrightson.

With the return of new Atlas comics, demand for back issues is already up by almost 50%. Most of the 1974-1975 Atlas/Seaboard comics remain low-to-modesty priced in the Guide, all are undervalued, especially in strict VF/NM or better investment grades. Bigger demand for the vintage issues should continue as long as the new product continues to be released. If you have not yet sampled these back issues, now is a great time to give them a try.

Captain Canuck: 2010 was the 35th Anniversary for Captain Canuck, Canada's most famous comic title and superhero. Captain Canuck #4 (2/1978; 2nd print; 11" x 17" Treasury sized, with handwritten signed & numbered Certificate of Authenticity bound-in) is one of the rarest comics of the entire Bronze Age. It is also among our Top 10 Most Requested comics of the entire Bronze Age. I've only seen 3 copies on eBay in the last decade (a VF copy sold for $525 in 2005). I finally uncovered the first copy I have ever had in stock and sold it quickly in FN for $295.00. Current Guide value of $30 in Fine is absurdly low.

Among our Top 10 Most Requested comics of the entire Modern Age are Captain Canuck Re-Born #3(1993/1994, only 8,000 copies printed and amazingly Scarce; current VF/NM Value is $50+) and Captain Canuck #15 (8/2004; 150 copies printed; current VF/NM Value is $125+). Richard Comely has mentioned he might print a Limited 2nd Printing of both of these high demand comics. Captain Canuck Legacy #2 & 3 never got published and might also appear in a future Limited Edition. As a friend of Richard Comely for 35 years, you can be sure I will stock all these Limited Editions, if he ever gets around to publishing them.

The IDW hardcover collections of Captain Canuck have once again stirred up interest in the classic original back issues. Comely assembled 50 Limited Edition sets of the IDW HC Books #1 & 2 with autographs on front endpage of both books, and with a unique new Original Art sketch on the front endpage of the Book #1s. We sold all 5 sets we got within a week of receiving them at $85.00 per set.

Charlton Comics: We have the world's biggest selection of Charlton Comics, with 95% of 1960-1986 issues and about 50% of the 1940s-1959 issues in stock. Thus we are the destination for collectors to go to fill in missing numbers and complete their sets. The Horror and Sci-Fi Titles were the bestsellers in both Lower and High Grades, with all issues from 1966-1986 in High Demand. For 1965 & older, only the Ditko issues were in high demand. After the Horror titles, the Hanna Barbera comics were the next most consistent sellers. Third most requested are the better artist issues, including: Aparo, Boyette, Buscema, John Byrne, Ditko, Glanzman, Himes, Wayne Howard, Severin, Sanho Kim, Larson, Morisi, Don Newton, Staton, Tom Sutton, Wood, Williamson and Mike Zeck. Due to poor printing, Charlton comics are notoriously Scarce in strict VF or better. Most investors are happy with VF/NM or better copies, as there are very few CGC graded copies, and if they wait for better copies, they might never find them: (GD-FN = 120-140% Guide; VF-VF/NM = 110-120% Guide; raw NM- & 9.2 copies = 150% of 9.2 Guide prices; raw NM & 9.4 copies = 200% of 9.2 Guide prices).

The next most requested (moderate sellers) were all the Western, War and TV titles, mostly to fans that simply enjoy those genres. All the other many genres are solid steady sellers (at 115-125% Guide). Unlike the major publishers, Charlton has virtually nothing that does not eventually sell and because we have very little competition on these, we always do well with them.

DC Comics: DC comics continue to be the #2 bestselling back issue publisher (after Marvel), but many are gaining in popularity with back issue collectors. Key issues in ALL grades, including #1s, origins, top Artist issues, Last issues and Scarcer issues, were the strongest sellers. In this spirit, I have prepared the list to follow, of the fastest selling DC comics at full Guide or higher prices. Most of them sell in these ranges; (GD-FN = 110-140% Guide; FN/VF-VF+ = 100-120% Guide; VF/NM, 9.0 to NM-, 9.2 = 120-140% Guide). Notable exceptions are listed (I might have missed a few).

Dell Comics: Dell Comics specialized in Popular Culture icons (licensing popular characters from other media, including cartoons (original, theater & TV), Golden Age of TV series, kids shows, movie classics, newspaper comic strips, novel & pulp series adaptations, radio stars and Westerns) and they featured more photo and painted covers than any other publisher in the history of comics. Because of this they have eternal worldwide appeal, as many of these TV shows are still in reruns all over the world, and on DVD, many with complete seasons. Many of the cartoon characters are so strong they have better worldwide recognition than almost all modern cartoon creations. Thus they have worldwide appeal in affordable grades and will sell forever when still in disposable income price ranges ($5 to $40 each), while slower in the pricey High Grade ranges ($50-$200+ each). The 1950s Dell sported some of the highest print runs in comics history, yet scores of them were well loved and read, and now residing in comics graveyards. But the upside is that almost all are still affordable in GD-FN, and most sets can be completed easier than perhaps any other publisher of the period. This adds to the desire to assemble complete sets. The majority of Dell sets have between 5 to 50 comics, certainly attainable goals. Even the long-running titles are mainly in the 100-250 copy range, and still no $1000 and up issues to worry about (as with Marvel, DC, etc).

We have one of the world's biggest selections with over 20,000 Dell comics in stock and thus they are usually our bestselling pre-1962 comics publisher. As usual, about 95% of what we sell falls into the range of FR/GD (reading copies) through FN (presentable, but still affordable). FN/VF and better copies were slower moving than usual this year. Most Dell comics in GD-FN are still undervalued in the Guide, while many VF-NM Dells are still overvalued in the Guide. The same Price-to-Condition spreads for Dell are far apart for Low Grades vs. High Grades, although this does not reflect real sales in the marketplace. The average VF is more than double the FN price in Guide, whereas VF copies should only list about 50% higher than FN copies. While most VF-NM- copies do not require a price drop, most GD-FN copies do need a price increase. These are especially popular with our international collectors around the world, and large amounts of back issues continue to disappear into permanent foreign collections each and every year.

Dell Variants (6/1956-1-2/1961 = 15 Cent variant; back cover variants with strips in place of ads; Giants with 30-35 cent cover prices) are up in demand since Jon McClure's article on Variants in Overstreet #40. The Dells that still have a demand in VF or better include: Key issues & First issues, Tarzan, Turok, Hanna-Barbera, popular TV shows, Carl Barks art comics and better Movie comics (John Wayne, Sci-Fi, etc).

Gold Key (see also Walt Disney comics): We have the world's biggest selection of Gold Key comics with over 35,000 in stock, with most in stock in GD-FN grades and a smaller selection in VF or better. We do our best to keep everything they published in stock at all times, including scores of Elusive to Scarce Cartoon titles. Thus we are now a major destination for many advanced and serious collectors who are looking to fill holes in their sets. In recent years I have run across more and more collectors completing large Gold Key collections (for example: all Hanna-Barbera, all Looney Tunes, all Cartoons, all Tarzan/Turok, all Horror titles, all Whitmans & Variants, all TV Titles, etc.) and a brave few that have attempted gathering the entire GK output. Collector Pat Simpson has a near complete GK set with all variants. His cataloged collection was of invaluable help to Jon McClure and me in our research for the Overstreet #40 Variant article. In addition, we are more than happy to help the constant flow of buyers that just want affordable reading copies.

Much like Dell comics, Gold Key continued their legacy and specialized in many Popular Culture icons, but added a lot of new original in-house titles. Because the price spreads for condition are much less extreme than with Dell, VF or better copies are decent sellers. Since most of these comics are sold to the general public and not to Collectors, even VF or higher graded copies can be a lot harder to find than one would expect. Putting together a VF to NM range set of Gold Key's Doctor Solar, Magnus, Tarzan, Turok or Twilight Zone (a few of the titles in demand in high grades) is actually a difficult task, but infinitely rewarding to those than manage to attain this lofty goal. These are beautiful comics, still very undervalued when compared to Marvel and DC comics of the same period.

As seen in the Overstreet #40 Variant article, Gold Key has a huge wealth of Variants from the pre-1988 vintage comics era, rivaling even Marvel and DC, thus they have become even more interesting to collectors of Scarce comics. Whitman Variants of the Gold Key comics (11/1971 thru 4/1980) continue to bring 125-200% of GK issue values to Variant collectors. Canadian Newsstand Variant cover price issues (4-8/1968 with 15 cent prices, 3/1972-4/1973 with 20 cent prices; 12/1977-3/1978 with reverse 30 Cent prices) sell at 125-150% Guide to Variant collectors. Whitman Variant 75 cent cover price issues (of 1984 Comics that are 60 cents in USA) are Rare and sell at 200%+ Guide.

As with Dell, most Gold Keys are currently undervalued in GD-FN condition ranges. All the uncommon to scarce issues tend to be sold out in virtually all dealer inventories worldwide. Many are so low that I am able to pay 75-100% Guide to restock Reading Copies. Many buyers will gladly pay 150-200% Guide in these grades. Most of our largest Gold Key orders (100-300+ comics for one one shipment) are for large groups of affordable reading copies.

Harvey Comics: We got in a nice collection of 400+ beautiful High Grade 1950s/1960s Harvey File Copies, most in the VF+, 8.5 through NM, 9.4 ranges. We sold a good number of the stronger characters (Baby Huey, Casper, Harvey Hits, Hot Stuff, Little Audrey, Little Dot, Little Lotta, Playful Little Audrey, Sad Sack, Spooky, Wendy, etc.). These strong titles were also our bestsellers in lower grades. The File copies of less popular characters and non-original Harvey characters had resistance (Blondie, Family Funnies, Joe Palooka, Junior Funnies, Little Max, Mutt & Jeff, Warfront, etc.), which surprises me, as many are undervalued and even scarcer than the mainstream titles. I sold them at these rates: 9.4 copies at 200% of 9.2 prices; 9.2 copies at 150% Guide; 9.0 copies at 9.2 prices; VF+ copies at 9.0 prices.

For Cartoon titles, late 1940s through 1962 were in high demand, 1963-1974 were in strong steady demand, 1976-1990 were in moderate demand and the Low Print 1991-1994 titles were in strong demand in any grade. The majority of our sales were books in the FR/GD through FN grade ranges. Many 1960s and 1970s titles are very undervalued in GD-FN grades and thus permanently sold out with almost all major dealers. We sell to them most GD-FN copies over Guide and thus have managed to keep nearly 90% of all titles in stock. We have 20,000 Richie Rich comics in stock and we have 10,000 other Harvey Comics in stock, easily the world's biggest selection. Most of them we sell in these price ranges: GD-FN = 125-150% Guide; FN/VF to VF/NM = 110-125% Guide.

A newly uncovered first app. is that of Fruitman in Bunny #3, thus now a superhero Key issue. Many fans always assumed the one-shot Fruitman #1 was the only appearance. He also appears in Bunny #6,8,9,10,12,13-17,19-21.

Marvel Comics: Marvel continues to be the bestselling back issue publisher. Iron Man was the title most up in demand this year (thanks to the movie sequel) and even though Iron Man #1 is one of the most common first issues of the 1960s, it was near impossible to keep in stock, selling at 125-200% of Guide everywhere. All 1970s Horror titles were in constant demand and many are getting harder to re-stock. Bronze Age comics were hands down the bestsellers (especially 1970-1974), followed by early 1961-1964 issues in any grades.

Key issues in ALL Grades, including #1s, Origins, top Artist issues, Last issues and Scarcer issues were far stronger sellers than any one title (often 3-10 times the demand of standard issues). In this spirit, I have prepared the list of the fastest selling Marvels at full Guide or higher prices. Most of them sell in these ranges: GD-FN = 135-200% Guide; FN/VF-VF+ = 110-135% Guide; VF/NM, 9.0 to NM-, 9.2 = 120-140% Guide. Notable exceptions are listed. I might have missed a few.

Variant Edition Comics: Jon McClure's Variant article in Overstreet #40 (on pages 1010-1038) has set the new and definitive standard, an absolute MUST HAVE for all Variant Collectors for the next decade. I was proud to have spent 40+ hours of labor assisting him with the monumental task. Since even most dealers and collectors are completely unfamiliar with this area of collecting, many noted to me it was 29 pages of dense and difficult reading, but usually easier to read the 2nd time through. Many of the newly uncovered Variants are not yet well known enough to have gained any premium values. But keep in mind, this is how the Marvel 30 & 35 cent cover price variants started, as they took several years to catch on, they are now some of the most sought after and hottest selling issues in the entire hobby. Because 90% of these Variants are NOT listed (and might never be listed) in the body of the main Overstreet Guide, it might take a while for momentum to build on these. There are probably 6000-9000 Canadian Cover Price Variants alone, and perhaps 3000-5000 UK Cover Price Variants.

The scarce 3/1962-4/1963 Archie Price Variants with 15 Cent Cover prices (approx 106 different estimated to exist) were noted in the article. We had several inquiries, but only had 4 in stock, and they sold instantly at 150% Guide (probably too low). These are some of the scarcest Test Variants and so far less than half have a single proven copy known to exist. Because of this, I think a reasonable starting point would be at 200% Guide. Eventually they could be worth 300-400% Guide values on regular issues.

We still have a good stock on many of the 35 Cent Variants of Archie and Harvey Square-bound Giants, as well as the 30 cent and 35 cent Dell Canadian Cover Price Variants. Only a few inquires so far, and they sold at 120-

135% Guide. As completionists learn of these, they will start to disappear from our inventory and only be replaced with increasing difficulty.

The early Marvel Direct Editions Variants (1977-1979) often mistakenly sold as "WHITMAN Variants of Marvel" comics are still in demand. These had print runs that vary from approx 2% to 10% of the quantities distributed as Newsstand editions. These Early Marvel Direct Editions (with Black Diamond on cover, with NO "cc" on cover, with NO UPC or obscured UPC Codes, or blank white UPC Codes) when correctly identified can sell at 120-150% Guide to Variant collectors. Whitman published Direct market White Logo printings from 2-6/1982 of many of their Gold Key/Whitman Cartoon titles, these sell at 150% Guide or more. The bestselling and by far the most requested Variants of the year for us were the Marvel and DC Canadian Newsstand Variant Cover Price editions, thus I have included a list of the most Desirable titles by these publishers. The scarcest titles as Canadian Variants are all the unpopular characters & all the Cartoon Series, but they are not included in the list for brevity purposes (We can email a free more complete list upon request)

Canadian Newsstand Variant Print Runs are 10% or less of American issue quantities. Newsstand copies had lower survival rates than Direct editions, thus they are about 50-100 times scarcer than a USA Direct Edition printing, with perhaps an average of 2500 copies each still existing. Because newsstand copies were sold to non-collectors, perhaps 90%, they are in lower grades (GD thru FN). Only a handful of these Variants have even been graded by CGC.

Dates for Canadian Newsstand Cover Price Variants Existing include: Archie comics & Digests (Giant from late 1950s thru mid 60s; and 9/1982-4/1997 with Digest to 12/1997); Charlton (2/1983-8/1984), DC (all Newsstand comics, magazines and digests from 10/1982-9/1988); Dell (6/1956-1-2/1961 = 15 Cent variant; Back Cover variants with strips in place of ads; Giants with 30-35 cent cover prices); Gold Key/ Whitman (5-8/1968, 3/1972-4/1973, 12/1977-3/1978, 1-7/1984); Harvey (1959-3/1974 Giants with 35 Cent cover prices); MAD (some 1964 & 7/1978-7/1979); Marvel (all Newsstand comics, magazines & Digests from 10/1982-8/1986); and Warren (3/1977-3/1983).

UK/British Pence cover price editions (1950s-1980s) of Dell, Marvel, DC, Gold Key and other publishers were published in the USA, but only sold in the UK. These are still being sold at discounted prices by UK dealers. Since these books are actually made in USA, Variants are 50-200+ times scarcer than the USA standard editions, so they should at least sell for the same as USA editions. Currently only the cheaper 1970s issues are bringing a small premium price in the USA. The high priced Silver Age issues are still being discounted and are a real bargain. Comics with the "MARVEL ALL-COLOUR COMICS" banner across the top of the front cover, mostly in the 1974-1980 Bronze Age era, sold at 120-150% Guide. The new UK on-line Price Guide by Duncan McAlpine was finally re-released in 10/2010, updating his 1997-98 guide. Duncan lists many "ND" (Not Distributed) periods in UK, where NO copies (USA Printings or UK Printings) were distributed and thus those issues are scarcer overseas.

Walt Disney: Walt Disney comics have been very popular worldwide for at least 60 years, especially the Cartoon titles. This is particularly true in Europe, where comics have less of a stigma and are more ingrained in the cultures of the lands. The Netherlands and Italy have reprinted most of the American comics, and due to their insatiable appetites for more, they have added thousands of new stories in their own original comics. Only a tiny portion of these European originals have seen print in the USA.

Carl Barks and Don Rosa have rock-star like status in certain circles. The childhoods of half the planet Earth were filled with the beloved memories of the Walt Disney movies, books, TV shows, merchandise, cartoons, theme parks and more. I have always been puzzled why the comics are not that popular among comic collectors. Certainly Carl Barks is widely considered one of the Top 10 creators in all of Comics History, with a huge cult following and some of the most valuable Original Art in our hobby. (Barks has always been my #1 favorite.)

This was a better than usual year for sales of Walt Disney comics. We have about 20,000 Walt Disney comics in stock from their many publishers (Dell, Gold Key, Whitman, Gladstone, Disney, March of Comics, Marvel, etc). Especially popular were all the Live Action TV Series and Movie Classic (both Cartoon & Live-Action) comics. Once again, Scarecrow of Romney Marsh #1-3 were the most requested of all Disney comics, undervalued in Guide and sold out with virtually all dealers. Even the reprint in WD Showcase #53 is hard to keep in stock. There has been a similar trend with Walt Disney movies, with Scarce/Rare titles (usually still on VHS, and out of print on DVD) inexplicably up in demand, selling for $25-100+ each on eBay, Amazon, Alibris & various websites (for example: Almost Angels, Charley & the Angel, Diamonds on Wheels, *Dr. Syn alias the Scarecrow, *Emil and the Detectives, *Fighting Prince of Donegal, Ghosts of Buxley Hall, *Horsemasters, *Light in the Forest, London Connection, Love Leads the Way, Scandalous John, Smith!, *Tonka, and Westward Ho the Wagons). Those seven marked with an asterix have comic adaptations. These rare titles have fueled demand as an alternative source to experience these stories and this has lead non-comic-collectors to our website through Google searches. These buyers loved the comics and came back for many other items, thus we now have new collectors in our hobby. Affordable copies in the FR/GD through FN grades are typically what we have in stock and luckily are also the most popular grades. (VF or better copies are often too pricey & slower sellers).

The pre-1950 Golden Age Disney titles were in low supply and in good steady demand. The 1960s Gold Key titles were in higher demand than the (often more common) 1950s Dell titles. The Four Color one-shot titles were the most requested Dell comics (except for the the nature and science type series). Most notably popular were: Annette Funicello, Brer Rabbit, cartoon movie classics, Davy Crockett/Fess Parker, Hardy Boys, Hayley Mills, Spin & Marty, Tinker Bell & Zorro/ Guy Williams comics. (VF-VF/NM=110-120% Guide; GD-FN =120-140% Guide).

Warren, Skywald & Misc. Horror Comic Magazines: This year we had an endless stream of requests for affordable Reading Copies (FR/GD, GD and VG) for all the Horror Mag publishers (including Marvel) and had to actually seek out more Low Grade collections. Ten years ago we often had 10-25 copies each in VG or lower grades, but today we now have about 35% of the issues with nothing left under FN, and about 15% with nothing left under VF. The slowest sellers were FN through VF+ copies. There is still good demand for VF/NM or better investment copies (although somewhat diminished from 2007-2009 sales, due to the slow economy). Our stock of VF/NM or better copies has also dropped greatly in the last 4 years and they are getting harder to replace. (FR/GD-VG Reading Copies sold at 125-175% Guide. Mid-grade FN through VF+ copies sold at 110-120% Guide.) On average the High Grade copies brought these rates: VF/NM at 120-130% Guide; raw 9.2 copies at 150% Guide; raw 9.4 copies at 200% of 9.2 prices.

I got in a near-complete set of Famous Monsters of Filmland #1-130 (many #11-38 in VF to VF/NM, many #39-130 in VF/NM to 9.2) and was pleasantly surprised that we sold almost 50% of them in only 2 months for excellent prices.

Creepy, Eerie and Vampirella as usual made up 90% of our Warren sales. Creepy and Eerie are even sellers up to #80, but from #81-up, Creepy sells about 50% better than Eerie. Creepy stays more true to the one-shot Horror anthology stories; Eerie strays more towards an anthology of alternating on-going series of Sci-Fi, Fantasy, Sword & Sorcery characters. Due to the passing of Frank Frazetta in 2010, demand for everything Frazetta doubled (including calendars, comics, fanzines, mags, paperbacks, posters, portfolios and more). Thus all the Warrens with Frazetta covers were up in demand. Vampirella covers by Frazetta were up 100% in demand. Other Warrens with original covers by Frazetta were up 50% in demand. Warrens with reprint covers by Frazetta were up 25% in demand. All Rare and scarcer Warren titles were in constant demand as per usual (at 150-300% Guide).

Monster Magazines (Famous Monster imitators, film related) are always highly collected. Unfortunately these are not listed in Overstreet so they fall off the radar of comic collectors. These always worthwhile collecting and have steadily increased in value over the last 10-20 years. Some of the bestsellers include: Castle of Frankenstein, Famous Monsters, Fangoria, Fantastic Monsters, For Monsters Only, Gorezone, Horror Monsters, Mad Monsters, Monsterscene, Monster Times, Monster World, Movie Monsters, Quasimodo's Monster Mag, Scream Queens, and World Famous Creatures. The 1958-1975 issues are all scarce in strict VF or better (with 1976-1990 issues scarce in VF/NM or better). Prices vary widely from $5-$200+. Most are excellent sellers.

The miscellaneous Horror mags by Eerie Pub, Globe, Hamilton, Major, Modern Day, Stanley, Tempest Pub, and World Famous were in high demand in FR/GD to FN affordable Reading copies. There was resistance to FN/VF through VF+ copies. Investment copies in VF/NM or better, although scarce, were slower sellers this year.

Skywald published only 69 magazines total (Crime Machine, Hell-Rider, King, Nightmare, Psycho and Scream). Due to this small output, they consistently have the fastest turnover of all Horror Mag publishers. These sell great in any and all grades (at 125-150% Guide). Once sold, they are hard to re-stock.

Whitman Comics: It has been 9 years (2001) since I put up for eBay auction the rare Uncle Scrooge #179(a VG copy sold for $510, and a VF copy sold for $1200) when they still listed at $10 in NM in the Guide. In 2003, I auctioned a Little Lulu #260(VG, it sold for $710). In 2005, a 9.8 copy of Lulu #260 sold for $1827. This started the stampede to collect all the Pre-Pack-Only Whitman Comics (from 8-12/1980, 1983-1984). For about 4-5 years, collectors went wild buying GD-VF copies at 200% to 2000% of Guide (especially the scarcer 8-12/1980 issues).

In 2007, the Random House File Copies Archives got dumped on the market all at once. The Gold Key comics and more common Whitmans had 100 each or more on many issues. There was also a smaller selection of 8-12/1980 issues (smaller quantities of 0-25 copies each), with many issues still having ZERO copies among the File Copy collection. This all has stalled the market a while, but virtually all the scarcer issues have already been absorbed into the Marketplace. The number of CGC-Graded Pre-Pack Whitmans in 8.0 through 9.4 increased by 200%-300% over the last 3 years. Suddenly they stopped appearing, and there is once again a shortage of the Pre-Pack issues (especially 8-12/1980). It is now estimated that the 8-12/1980 Pre-Pack issues have an average of 100-250 copies each still existing, while the 1983-1984 issues have about 250-500 copies each existing. There are 47 different RARE 75¢ Canadian Variant cover price editions existing (U.S. copies were 60¢), all from 1984, with an estimated 75-150 copies each still existing. They sell fast at 200-300% of regular 60¢ edition prices. In the 1980's these issues were all thought to be Very Rare and were on everyone's want lists: Buck Rogers #10, Popeye #160,161, Porky Pig #99, Woody Woodpecker #192 (but by 2005 it was found that they were NOT printed and do NOT exist). Whitman printed at least 31 Direct Market White Logo Variants from 1981-82 (they sell for 150% of standard Yellow Logo regular editions). Nine 40¢ Whitman Reverse Variants exist of 50¢ Whitman comics (11/1980-1/1981) selling at around 200% of the standard 50¢ edition prices. Most Whitman variant collectors prefer raw, non-CGC copies (with the exception of the issues that Guide over $100).

About 69% of all Gold Key comics published from 11/1971 through 2/1980 are proven to exist as Whitman Variant Editions (5-50 times scarcer than regular GK printings). This has proven to be one of the toughest Variant sets to complete in its entirety and only a few are trying. A lot more Variant collectors are seeking to complete their favorite titles or genres. Adventure, Horror, SF and TV titles sell at 150-200% of GK issue values). Cartoon titles sell at 125-150% of GK issue values.

I present the Complete List of 67, now legendary Scarce to Rare 8-12/1980 Whitman Comics. I have added the current quantities so far graded by CGC, according to their 12/2010 Census: Battle of the Planets #7(10/1980; x32), #8(11/1980; x24), #9(12/1980; x28); Beep Beep the Road Runner #91(8/1980; x4), #92(9/1980; x4), #93(10/1980; x5); Black Hole #4(9/1980; x2); Buck Rogers in the 25th Century #8(11/1980; x2), #9(12/1980; x8); Bugs Bunny

#221(9/1980; x16), #222(11/1980; x4); Chip 'N' Dale #67(8/1980; x5), #68(11/1980; x7), #69(12/1980; x10); Daffy Duck #129(8/1980; x4), #130(1980; x8), #131(12/1980; x8); Daisy and Donald #45(8/1980; x3), #46(10/1980; x5), #47(12/1980; x16); Donald Duck #221(8/1980; x7), #222 (10/1980; x19), #223(11/1980; x15), #224(12/1980; x13); Flash Gordon #30(10/1980; x5); Huey, Dewey and Louie Junior Woodchucks #65(9/1980; x3), #66(11/1980; x7); Little Lulu #260(9/1980; x33), #261(11/1980; x23); Looney Tunes #33(8/1980; x7), #34(1980; x14), #35(1980; x11); Mickey Mouse #207 (8/1980; x7), #208(10/1980; x18), #209(12/1980; x4); Pink Panther #75(8/1980; x8), #76(101980; x16), #77(12/1980; x16); Popeye #158(9/1980; x7), #159(11/1980; x5); Porky Pig #97(9/1980; x11), #98(11/1980; x18); Super Goof #60(7/1980; x10), #61(9/1980; x16), #62(11/1980; x3); Tom and Jerry #330(8/1980; x3), #331(10/1980; x7), #332(12/1980; x12); Tweety and Sylvester #105(9/1980; x10), #106(10/1980; x5), #107(11/1980; x6); Uncle Scrooge #179(9/1980; x44), #180(11/1980; x11), #181(12/1980; x13); Walt Disney's Comics and Stories #479(8/1980; x4), #480(9/1980; x19), #481(10/1980; x5), #482(11/1980; x9), #483(12/1980; x7); Winnie the Pooh #20(8/1980; x2), #21(10/1980; x4), #22(1980; x10); Woody Woodpecker #190(10/1980; x13), #191(11/1980; x3); Yosemite Sam #68(9/1980; x7), #69(10/1980; x21), #70(12/1980; x5); Take note that there are still 20 different issues with 5 or less copies graded by CGC. The Big-4 (Donald #222, Lulu #260, Scrooge #179, WDC&S #480) have been well known tough-to-find issues for 30 years. They were the first to bring record prices on eBay, and thus now listing relatively high in the Guide. A disproportionate number of copies have been CGC graded, but they are still scarce and in huge demand in spite of what the skewed CGC quantities would indicate. Battle of the Planets #7-9 have more copies slabbed than other titles, as many dealers judge them as a "better" title and more worthwhile to slab. Sales on the 8-12/1980 issues were up by over 50% this year and we are once again starting to sell out on most issues. Lower grade copies are undervalued and in demand; (GD-FN = 150-200% Guide; VF-NM- = 125-150% Guide).

The above list gives an idea what is the most scarce in high grade (although I suspect a lot of VF or better copies valued at $30 or less in the Guide have not yet been submitted to CGC, as they are judged by dealers as not yet being worth the costs of certification.

Currently the 37 rarest 8-12/1980 Whitmans in ANY Condition are (in alphabetical order): Beep Beep Roadrunner #92,93, Black Hole #4, Buck Rogers #8, Chip 'N' Dale #67-69, Daffy Duck #130,131, Daisy & Donald #47, Donald Duck #221,222, Huey Dewey Louie #65,66, Little Lulu #260,261, Looney Tunes #33-35, Mickey Mouse #208,209, Popeye #158,159, Super Goof #62, Tom & Jerry #330,331, Tweety & Sylvester #105,107, Uncle Scrooge #179, Walt Disney's Comics & Stories #479,480, Winnie the Pooh #20-22, Woody Woodpecker #191 and Yosemite Sam #68,70. It's estimated that 100-150 copies each exist in the current marketplace.

Marvel Whitman Variants DO NOT exist. They are actually low print run early DIRECT Market variant editions from the 1977-1979 era (see page 1033 of Overstreet #40).

Whitman Variant editions of DC Comics are about 20-50 times scarcer than standard DC printings and are still in high demand among Variant collectors (at 150-200% Guide). Only a small quantity have so far been graded by CGC and they remain scarce in strict VF or better.

Now that 2010 is almost over we can reflect on the comic book market of the past year and talk about what a crappy movie Jonah Hex turned out to be, even with Megan Fox playing a hooker. 2010 had a lot of ups and downs in the comic book market. Record prices were realized for Action Comics #1 (CGC 8.5 $1,500,000) and Detective Comics #27 (CGC 8.0 $1,075,500) well above any previous prices for any comic book. However, the economy is still in the toilet, which has lead to the continued decline in comic prices for almost all non-key books and some keys, from all ages. The biggest areas to be affected have been high grade CGC graded books from the Modern to Bronze Age. People are no longer willing to spend outlandish prices to obtain a 9.4 or above on books like Fantastic Four #150. Many CGC graded books from the Bronze thru Modern Age sell for less than the cost of slabbing the books. Considering the majority of high grade books from the Bronze Age have been pressed, these high graded books are no longer elusive in high grades. Collectors are more often than not, opting to buy raw books in VF or above from these eras, for less than Guide value.

The only books from 2010 that I believe deserve a price increase are Golden and Silver Age keys in un-restored condition. All other books have been selling at or below Guide value. I think if the overall economic conditions continue in a downward spiral, this comic market trend will continue in 2011.

Golden Age - DC: The series with the most demand have remained the same for years: Action Comics #1-23, Detective Comics #27-40, 140, Batman #1-5, 11, Superman #1-14, All-American #16-20, 61, Wonder Woman #1-6, All Star Comics #3, 8, and More Fun Comics #52,55,73. They are selling well in all grades. Pre-Robin Detectives #28-37 and Superman Action covers (#7, 10, 13, 15, 23) always sell well above Guide value in any grade and condition. All of these Detective and Action Comics issues demand a price increase of at least 25% from last year's value. While numerous copies of issues such as All-American Comics #16 and Adventure Comics #40 have sold during 2010, most of them have been restored and have sold at a fraction of their un-restored counterparts.

Golden Age - Timely/Marvel: Captain America Comics #1-8, 16, 46 (Holocaust cover), 74 have sold very well during the past year. The hottest Timely comic of the past year was Marvel Mystery Comics #9. The copies sold within the past year have sold for multiple times Guide value. Sub-Mariner Comics #1 has had a huge increase in demand along with All-Select Comics #1. Supply for Marvel Comics #1 has exceeded demand and has decreased the value of this issue drastically. If you have ever wanted to own this book, now would be your best opportunity without having to work three jobs to afford it.

All Other Golden Age: Good Girl cover art books continue to sell without a problem with Blue Beetle #54 and Phantom Lady #17 leading the way. Whiz Comics #1 has sold for well less than Guide value during the past few years, so now would be the best time to pick up this issue for a reasonable price. If a Shazam! movie is ever given the green light, expect future prices to reflect the demand of this issue from collectors and investors.

Silver Age - Marvel: Amazing Fantasy #15 is still the most desirable Silver Age key, but prices have stabilized from recent years. Incredible Hulk #1 and Journey Into Mystery #83 are the other most demanded Marvel issues, selling above Guide value in all conditions, with lowered graded copies selling for a premium. Amazing Spider-Man #1, Fantastic Four #1, X-Men #1, and Tales of Suspense #39 have all sold around or below Guide value in all grades, except high grade (VF & above), which sell for well above Guide value. Avengers #1 and #4 have been in strong demand the past year with the Avengers movie on the horizon. The two Marvel keys that I think are the most undervalued are Sgt. Fury and his Howling Commandos #1 (1st Nick Fury) & Strange Tales #110 (1st Dr. Strange). The time to pick up these keys in high grade is now, before the market catches up with them.

Silver Age - DC: The two hottest DC books from this area are Showcase #4 (1st Silver Age Flash) and Brave and the Bold #28 (1st JLA). Both of these books are highly undervalued and are on the verge of exploding. Considering the importance of these DC keys and their value in relation to Marvel keys of the same era, these books are relative steals. Green Lantern #1, 7 and Showcase #22 have sold quite well, but have stabilized from the prices that were fetched last year.

Bronze Age - Marvel: Most keys such as Incredible Hulk #181, Amazing Spider-Man #129, and Marvel Spotlight #5 are easily obtainable and sell for around Guide value, except in high grade, which still sell for above Guide. Demand for these books in high grade is still strong, but with more issues being pressed and graded at 9.4 and above, the prices will start to drop. Giant Size X-Men #1 and X-Men #94 have sold well below Guide value in all grades with supply exceeding demand.

Bronze Age - DC: High grade copies of Green Lantern #76 (9.0 or above) have continued to sell above Guide value. Other DC keys in high demand include: All-Star Western #10 (even though the movie was horrible), Batman #227, 232, 234, and Detective #400.

The upcoming Avengers movie has Avengers #4 in strong demand.

San Diego Comic-Con: The 2010 Comic-Con was definitely better then 2009. Myself, along with my friend and fellow advisor Jamie Newbold (owner of Southern California Comics), were able to acquire a large Detective Comics run #32-80 that were part of Jerry Robinson's personal collection while working at DC. All of the books were signed by Mr. Robinson and CGC graded. While the amount of people that attend Comic-Con seems to increase, the amount of actual dealers that have booths at the show seems to dwindle each year. This is something that I would like to see change within the years to come. The San Diego Comic-Con originated from the gathering of back-issue comic book dealers into one place as a way for collectors to buy and talk about comics, and that, it seems, is something which with the Comic-Con has started to lose touch. I hope the city of San Diego and the Comic-Con administrators can come to a suitable agreement, because changing the venue from San Diego to another city would affect the total experience of attending Comic-Con, and not in a positive way.

Here are some notable books that I have sold or purchased within 2010:

Action Comics #15 CGC 3.5 $2,400
Detective Comics #30 CGC 5.5 $4,500
Detective Comics #32 CGC 2.0 (Signature Series Jerry Robinson) $1,100
Detective Comics #33 CGC 0.5 (complete, cover split and detached) $2,500
Detective Comics #34 CGC 1.8 $750
Detective Comics #37 CGC 1.0 $1,700
Detective Comics #39 CGC 2.0 $800
Detective Comics #39 CGC 1.0 (Signature Series Jerry Robinson) $400
Detective Comics #140 CGC 4.0 $1,500
Detective Comics #140 CGC 5.0 $2,000
Amazing Fantasy #15 CGC 1.8 (Signature Series Stan Lee) $2,700
X-Men #1 CGC 3.5 (Signature Series Stan Lee) $1,700
Captain America Comics #2 CGC 4.5 $3,500
Batman #55 CGC 5.5 $450
Batman #181 CGC 8.0 $260
Batman #232 CGC 9.2 $400
More Fun Comics #55 CGC 1.0 $1,200

Well, the best advice I can give to collectors is that if you are out of college and you still live in your parents' basement, maybe you should rethink your priorities, because you're giving the rest of us collectors a bad rap. Also, if you plan on attending any comic book show, please put on some deodorant as a common courtesy. Until next year, stay fanboys my friends.

Collector's Edition & The Comic Book Store

While 2010 made big news with multiple Million Dollar book sales, in my market high ticket sales were the worst I've ever seen. But that doesn't mean that back issues weren't selling. This year ushered in a fundamental shift in what customers were buying. Back issue sales were no longer driven by collectors buying key issues, and became more driven by readers filling in the gaps of the story. Sales actually increased by nearly 20 percent over the year before for some months, but it was mostly Seventies and Eighties comics with price tags less than New Comic cover prices, which tells you that I sold a bunch of them! From the Dark Age of the Nineties, Marvel and DC were selling in that same price range, but nothing else moved from that period.

When I did sell a high dollar book, it didn't move until discounted during a sale. This is exemplified by the fact that my highest dollar back issue sale was a copy of Brave & the Bold #28, introducing the Justice League, in GD- because of a loose center page, for only $300. DC comics also had the next top sale with Adventure Comics #214, featuring the 2nd appearance of Krypto, in Fine+ for $190.

Disney Duck artist Carl Barks has always stayed in demand, with the sale of a couple of Donald Duck *Four Color*s, #408 and #422, both in Fine for $55 each. And early Jesse Marsh Dell *Tarzan*s were moving. Sold #9 in VG- for $40, #25 in FN- for $42, #26 in FN- for $40, and Tarzan's Jungle Annual #1 in FN+ for $55.

My top Marvel back issue sale was a copy of X-Men #94 in VG+ for $80. While I did move some non-Super Hero Marvels, like Patsy Walker #26 in VG for $22.50. Marvel key sales have been trending downward for a while now, but this was a record low year.

The only real surprise was the reemergence of some interest for Western comics. Example sales were The Rebels (Four Color #1076) in VF for $25, Restless Gun (Four Color #1045) in VG for $20, and Saddle Justice #7 in GD+ for $17. It wasn't a lot of demand, but in a tough year it was a welcome surprise.

Thanks to a diversity of content, the old Dell Four Color comics kept moving, as you can tell by some of the key sales mentioned.

The economic woes of the local economy continued to get even worse this year, and put a lot of pressure on consumer buying not only in the area of old comics, but even more on new comics. New comics hit a record low in 2010, with at least one month where not a single comic had a print run of over 100,000. While this might make for some hot books in short supply in the future, it's rough to be a retailer right now.

In 2008, the #1 selling comic was the Amazing Spider-Man #583, thanks to the variants with the President Obama cover. This led to a number of other comics featuring Obama. But by 2010, things had changed, and I couldn't sell a single copy of 2008's hottest comic.

The industry did try repeating certain gimmicks to get interest percolating. In 2009 DC offered retailer incentives of Blackest Night giveaway rings, one for each color of lantern in the series; Green, Violet, Red, Blue, Indigo, Orange, Yellow, and Black. If a retailer qualified, customers got a specific ring with certain book purchases. The rings were hugely popular, as was Blackest Night.

In 2010, DC did another promotion by offering a Flash, White Lantern, and more Green Lantern rings for their sequel series; Brightest Day. These rings helped the series have a hugely successful launch and Brightest Day would remain a top seller throughout the year, but reader reactions were mostly disappointment. Spinoffs like Birds of Prey and Green Arrow were better received.

DC hit a home run with the original graphic novel, Superman: Earth One, where they skipped making periodicals and went straight for bookstore shelves.

Giveaway rings helped Brightest Day #0 have a huge launch.

While the Iron Man 2 movie did well in theaters, it didn't provide any kind of bounce at all for the comics. The same was true for DC's Jonah Hex movie, which hexed the comic book.

Marvel's event books had their problems, as Siege experienced delay problems at the end, which caused a sharp sales falloff. The delays continued with the end of the Daredevil themed Shadowland event. And while the Fall of the Hulk's mystery of 'Who is the Red Hulk?' finally revealed the Red Hulk to be General Ross, and the Red She-Hulk to be his daughter Betty, no one cared. After teasing readers for a couple years, Marvel far exceeded the expiration of customer expectation.

But it wasn't all bad for Marvel. The Avengers relaunch was a strong seller, and X-Men: Second Coming was a hit.

Aside from the economy, the new comics industry encountered four core problems in 2010. Prices continuing to escalate across the line to $3.99 was the biggest problem, which publishers finally recognized by the end of the year and started scaling back to a $2.99 price point for 2011. Throughout the year I saw an incredible number of single copy sales, which had never happened before. Usually customers bought their comics in bunches. And even worse was when they'd slap down a credit card for that single copy, which meant that the credit card processors were the only ones making a profit. In my market, cash was scarce.

The number of titles shipping late seemed to get better, but it was still a sporadic problem. More endemic was uneven shipping, with light weeks at the start of the month, and an avalanche of product at the end. Customer's budgets couldn't handle this, and so they kept their spending habits from the light weeks, meaning that any new titles released in the latter part of the month was doomed. Marvel was the worst about this, until after their purchase by Disney. Then, later in the year, DC seemed to pick up where they left off.

Another problem was the late shipping caused by Monday holidays. You never disrupt your customer's shopping habits, and in a tough economy, the negative effects escalated. So many customers just skipped to the next week, and like with the product dumping at the end of the month, only spent that week's budget, once again meaning any new titles were doomed. Since the majority of comics are new titles, this made for real trouble. Fortunately, this problem was also recognized, and with 2011 changes were made to ensure that Wednesday is now New Comics Day each and every week, with no exceptions. That sound you hear in the distance is me clapping my approval.

The Fourth, and biggest, problem is the lack of a uniform Target Audience Guideline system for identifying content, like every other visual media already does. Marvel has one, but DC doesn't. The Independent publishers are a mixed bag, mostly going with 'either it's mature, or it's not.' The problem with this is that it was a huge missed opportunity, because in 2010 I saw huge numbers of new readers coming in, wanting to start the hobby of collecting comics. The ongoing wave of comic-related movies had a lot to do with this, as popular culture's embrace of comics grew ever stronger. There was even a TV reference where a character commented that saying he owned a comic book store was a sure fire way to pick up girls. Okay, the show was Big Bang Theory, and he was talking about ComicCon, but still...

Heavy media coverage of events like ComicCon was yet another source of new interest. It was a record year for new readers walking through the door. The catch was that all of the new readers were preteens being brought in by their parents, and all of mainstream comics are targeted at teen-agers or older. The only teen-agers buying comics are the ones who got hooked on the hobby as preteens. So, when the parents were trying to buy comics for their children, they ran into an information wall -- as in lack thereof. We did everything we could to guide these potential new shoppers, and the ones who returned were those who benefited most from our guidance. But many times the parents would be influenced more by what their children wanted than our suggestions, and when they later found those choices to be inappropriate, they weren't seen again. The lack of a Uniform Rating System is a huge missed opportunity for growing the sales of new comics. The interest is there, but the problem is that while comics have matured, we haven't matured in the packaging.

Kids today love comics just as much as they ever have. This year's Halloween on the Hill at my North Little Rock store was bigger than ever, as we gave away several thousand ashcan comics and 50 pounds of candy. The official crowd estimate was only 1200, but as always we kept getting hit two and three times again by the same Trick-or-Treaters. They just kept coming back for more -- which proves that comics are brain candy!

The industry addressed and made corrections in 2010 on three of the four biggest problems facing the sale of new comics. Hopefully the fourth and biggest problem of all will finally be up for correction. I've always said that new comic sales influence what sells old, and that was never more evident than this year.

The 2010 market continued many trends from 2009 with high grade Marvels and Marvel keys being the top sellers. With more movies coming in 2011 with many mainline heroes like Thor and Captain America, this will continue for 2011. Top sellers continue to be Amazing Spider-Man, Thor and Iron Man.

DC Golden Age remained steady in 2010 with top sellers Batman, Action Comics and Wonder Woman. DC Silver Age remains scarce and in high demand.

Timely prices have remained steady during 2010 with Captain America Comics and related titles being the top sellers.

Nedors have been strong for many years with War covers always selling out.

Early Archie stuff has always been scarce, but recently has seen a surge in prices with early Pep issues setting record prices.

Prices for mainline Horror and ECs have remained relatively inexpensive compared with other Golden Age, so demand has remained steady.

Fiction House has been steady with the early issues. Issues of Fight Comics and Rangers Comics are selling the quickest.

Fawcetts have remained relatively steady with Master and Mary Marvel issues the best sellers.

CGC books are continuing to grow in the overall marketplace as more books get graded. As the internet has become a more important part of the overall market, this will continue into 2011.

2011 should continue all these trends as the economy rebounds and the "baby boomers" become more active in the market.

Vincent Zurzolo - Metropolis Collectibles, Inc.

I love comic books. I have ever since I was a little kid. I still get excited when I open up a new or old comic book, waiting to see what is in store for me. Dynamic art, intriguing plots, compelling dialogue, twist endings… I just can't wait! Having passion in your life is so vitally important. I have been in the comic book business for over 24 years and it is still fun and exciting for me. I hope you feel the same way.

2010 has been a stellar year for me both on a personal and professional level. On May 29th, my fiancé Josephine and I were married at a beautiful Church in Midtown Manhattan. We moved into our new home in the city this past spring as well. And as of this writing, yes, we are still unpacking. Professionally speaking, business has never been better. We had our best year to date. I don't write this to sound boastful, as I realize how tough the economy has been the last few years. I am very grateful for the success we have had and I thank all who have patronized our business. To you all, a very sincere thank you. We will continue to strive to improve our business every day to meet your needs.

I believe, in part, one of the reasons Metropolis has had such a good year is due to the unparalleled level of publicity and marketing success we have had. Because of major sales, acquisitions and our general standing as an industry leader, we have appeared in newspapers, magazines, online articles, TV news programs, documentaries and even the TV show Hollywood Treasures. Through this barrage of publicity, people who have never purchased a comic book before are made aware of a new market for investment. They also want to know more about comics, collectors and their stories.

People love to tell their stories, whether they are buying or selling their comic books. Oftentimes, the story of the collector rivals the story inside the comic book itself. People's experiences with their collections have tremendous value. For example, take the Suscha News Pedigree Collection we found this past summer. It consisted of over 40 boxes of comic books, mostly Marvels, published between 1965-1977. What makes this collection so special to me is the story of the original owner. This man bought his books from a store called Suscha News in Sheboygan, Wisconsin. He made a deal with the store which enabled him to hand-pick all the books straight out of the distributor boxes before they ever made it to the newsstand. That is simply astounding and the first time I have ever heard of anything like this happening. Not only did he buy the best copies he could find, but then he held onto them for the next 45 years in virtually the same pristine condition until he was ready to sell. Throughout the decades, he made three major moves across country and dealt with countless challenges to keep the collection intact. So far, the reaction from comic collecting veterans and rookies alike who have seen the Suscha News Pedigree has been overwhelmingly positive.

The sale of this CGC-certified 9.4 copy of Fantastic Four #1 for $300,000 was not too shabby.

Though our sister site ComicConnect.com grabs most of the attention with record breaking sales like the first comic to break a million dollars (Action #1 8.0) and our current world record of $1.5 million for the highest graded Action Comics #1 (8.5) the sales at Metropolis haven't been too shabby either. Here are some highlights: Detective Comics #27 CGC 6.0 $575,000, Action Comics #1 CGC 5.0 $465,000, Fantastic Four #1 CGC 9.4 $300,000, Detective Comics #27 CGC 3.5 $240,000, Action Comics #7 CGC 7.0 $175,000, Amazing Fantasy #15 CGC 9.0 $150,000, Superman #1 CGC 4.5 $90,000, Superman #2 CGC 9.2 $85,000, Action Comics #1 Ashcan CGC 9.0 $50,000, Tales of Suspense #39 CGC 9.2 $49,750, and Detective Comics #27 CGC 4.5 restored $44,500. Nobody gets better prices for key Golden and Silver Age comics than Metropolis and I think more record-breaking sales are just around the corner.

As evidenced by these sales, you can see that the vintage comic book market is strong. Key Golden and Silver Age comics are doing very well. But not all is rosy in the world of comic books. More common late Silver and Bronze Age issues have seen a reduction in price. With more high-grade issues coming into the market place, it will take some time for demand to catch up and prices to rebound. Based on past analysis I do believe that most of the prices will come back, so don't be too concerned. However, it may take some time, so remember, patience is a virtue.

As I mentioned above I really do love comic books. I read them as often as I can. If you are an investor putting your hard earned money into comics, it is still important to take time to read them. Recently, I read Captain America Comics #1-5 and Fantastic Four #1-10. The Caps hearken back to the early days of comics. Oftentimes the stories are basic "good guy beats up bad guy", but the art, WWII stories, Cap, Bucky and the Red Skull make it all worthwhile. FF #1-10 recapture a simpler time in comics. The stories are fun, and the originality of Kirby and Lee's creations ring as true today as they did then.

I've also had a chance to read the entire Walking Dead Compendium. This encompassed about five years of stories. I had a hard time putting it down. It was extremely graphic at times, but what else would you expect from a post apocalyptic zombie filled story? What really sets the series apart is the intense characterization, believable dialogue between people stuck in a horrible situation, and the observations Kirkman makes about human nature when people are put to the test.

Reading Detective Comics between issues #460 and #490 was very interesting for me as the stories seem as relevant today as they were almost 25 years ago. Stories about Islamic terrorists and illegal immigration could have been written just yesterday. It really made me think about how much and how little progress we have made over the last three decades.

In closing, yes Marvels are still hot, Amazing Fantasy #15 still sells really well and high grade DCs are tough to get. Let's see what's in store for us in 2011 when Thor, Green Lantern, X-Men: First Class and Captain America hit the movie theaters. Something is telling me 2011 will be a big year for comic books. Thanks for reading!

Frank Cwiklik - Metropolis Collectibles

It's been a tumultuous and hectic time for everyone these past few years, with changes coming almost daily, and the comic business has been no exception. However, many of these changes have allowed for new frontiers and new opportunities for comics dealers and collectors, and some of these changes have even allowed for some old methods and styles to come back into play. With the influx of new buyers, and the shift in interest from older collectors, previously moribund titles are now selling, and the sky seems to be the limit for hot key titles if you play your cards right. "May you live in interesting times", indeed!

While we are doing very well with top tier vintage comic books we're also returning to an old-school style of comic book retail. Many of our customers are completists looking for scarce books to finish their runs or new buyers who are building their collections with care and eagerness, looking for great deals and books that speak to them.

We've had quite a few customers come back into the fold, excited and energized by the action and heat generated by the record breaking prices in the vintage comic market. Plus, so many new books and collections come into our showroom that we're restocking our inventory to meet demand. With so many new collections coming in it's hard to keep up!

I've become the go-to guy for sorting new collections and separating out inventory selections from overstock. This puts me in a unique position to see the shift in customer interest, both from a sales perspective and from an inventory perspective. When I'm sorting through boxes and checking against our current stock, I'm surprised to see how many supposedly "dead" books need to be restocked because they are selling again. Off-grade Bronze Marvel, Silver Age DC, mid-grade pre-code Horror, all books that would have gathered dust years ago are selling well now, if priced a little below Guide. My client base has diversified dramatically and I'm now regularly talking to customers who are buying books simply for pleasure or on a budget. Collectors who would have been squeezed out of the market a few years ago are now happily shopping on our site as the bigger collectors and investors climb up to spend their time buying high grade books almost exclusively. This has helped our business as we are seeing an increase in interest in a broader spectrum of vintage comic books. New buyers are stepping into the marketplace as investment buyers move into specialized territory. It's exciting and refreshing, and a good sign for long-term growth in the market.

That's not to say we're not still selling keys and scarce high-ticket items. Amazing Fantasy #15 is still the unstoppable monster key, and we sold a really nice unrestored 9.0 CGC copy at this year's San Diego con for $150,000 -- nothing wrong with that! Mid-grade and lower-grade copies are still roaring along as well, with 5.0s selling in the $10K range, 6.0 copies selling at $17K, and a 6.5 CGC selling for $25,000 – healthy increases in value, all.

Also, my prediction about Wonder Woman holds true, as we sold not one, but two Sensation Comics #1s at San Diego this year, which is a great treat for a shameless Wonder Woman fanboy like me! San Diego also saw sales of the Rockford Detective #84 CGC 9.4 $3,650.00, the "D" Copy of House of Mystery #1 CGC 8.5 $2,000.00 and a Fantastic Four #48 CGC 9.6 $4,750.00 amongst others.

Convention sales in general this year were still not quite as intense as some past years, but certainly a step up from last year, and very strong in light of the slowly recovering economy. Reed's first C2E2 show in Chicago was a pleasure to work at, and while not quite at the sales level of San Diego or NYCC, it was still a very promising start, and I think hosting the show in Chicago proper is a great idea. The success of Wizard's venerable Chicago Comic Con in August proves that the Midwest can support 2 monster cons. I think between Reed's muscle and Wizard's expertise, we can bring the coastal convention magic to comic fans who can't make the trip to the other two big shows.

New York Comic Con is growing exponentially year by year. There's no getting around the fact that they put on a heck of a show. This year's show was busier than I have ever seen and shows the interest in comic books and pop culture is ever-increasing. I can't recommend the show enough to anyone who hasn't yet been, as it is, like NYC itself, a very unique phenomenon. Our sales were very healthy and we were nonstop busy. We sold Captain America Comics #46 CGC 8.5 for $11,700.00, the Rockford Pedigree Detective #38 CGC 6.5 for $10,000.00, a Giant-Size X-Men #1 CGC 9.6 for $3,000.00 and a Sensation Comics #1 CGC 5.0 for $7,000.00. Score another win for Wonder Woman!

The Wizard Big Apple Convention was strong. Filled with familiar faces and longtime clients stopping by to make purchases sales were healthy. It never ceases to amaze me that we meet brand new customers at the Big Apple Con. I'm also heartened to see at least one or two little tykes stopping at our booth and being able to identify the superheroes by name. A new generation of comic collectors is being born right before our very eyes.

The comic community is still taking its cues from Hollywood. With the upcoming Green Lantern and Thor movies making their way to cinemas soon, previously dead keys and issues of those series have become popular again. Green Lantern #7, the first appearance of Sinestro, which has always been a tough book in general has become increasingly popular. Journey into Mystery #83 has always been in demand, but is now on every speculator's must-watch list. And, with the upcoming Avengers and Captain America movies, Avengers #1, 4 and really any early Avengers in high grade are solid sellers.

Other than what I have mentioned already, it's challenging to list many specific books or trends to watch mostly because it's become such a varied and unusual market. What I can tell you is that I have a feeling the next trend is going to come out of nowhere as there's no single magic bullet anymore. New buyers and old are getting back into buying books that thrill them, please them and excite them. That is a good thing as that is what the hobby is all about anyway. While we've attracted more big time collectors who are hungrily devouring key books and setting record sales prices at auction, much of our day-to-day business is coming from clients buying stacks of Richie Rich keys for their Harvey fan friends; Katy Keene fans spending their money on reliving their childhoods with old issues of Pep or other Archie books; Batman fans building mid-grade runs of Detective and Batman Golden Age issues simply for the joy of reading them; and even newer collectors discovering the graphic, gory, glory of Biro crime books and snapping up group lots of Crime Does Not Pay for fun and entertainment. There's no obvious trend anymore, and I find that very energizing. While the glory and attention are being (understandably) paid to the big, top dollar sales, the underlying stability of the business can be seen with these smaller but still very committed collectors, who, in the midst of a recession are rediscovering the simple pleasures of the hobby and passing them on to other fans young and old.

I'm looking forward to hearing from more of them in the coming year, both on the phone and online, and meeting them all at convention time. Maybe that's you! Anyone who wants to know more, or would like our help in filling your want list, or building your collection, please feel free to contact me at orders@metropoliscomics.com or call 1-800-229-METRO (international 001-212-260-4147) – I'm always happy to help collectors old and new!

Rob Reynolds - ComicConnect.com

According to the Guinness World Records book, at 8 feet 11 inches, Robert Wadlow was the tallest man in medical history. Robert Hughes, tipping the scales at 1070 pounds, held the Guinness record for the world's heaviest man. In 2010, I, Robert Reynolds, had the pleasure of being on the team that sold the world's most expensive comic book for $1.5 Million. ComicConnect.com's achievement of landing squarely on the pages of the Guinness World Records book is the realization of a life-long dream.

This past year was indeed one for the record books at ComicConnect.com. In February, ComicConnect.com was the first to ever sell a comic book for 7 figures, with the $1 Million sale of Action Comics #1 CGC 8.0 VF. In the following month, ComicConnect.com made the record breaking sale of the Action Comics #1 CGC 8.5 VF+ for $1.5 Million. The phones rang night and day while my e-mail inbox went from orderly to much less so. Reporters from all over the world wanted interviews, and ComicConnect.com was offered Superman comics in a dozen different languages. Everyone wanted something, and surprisingly it was all amazingly positive.

With the worlds' economy in shambles, folks were losing their careers, their life-savings, and their homes. After sifting through thousands of phone calls and e-mails, the call we were waiting for came in. This call was about a comic, but it was a comic that came with a story that was told over family dinners, in diners, and at water coolers across the country and around the world. A family dealing with their house being foreclosed upon was packing up in the basement, and came across a box of Grandpa's old comics that had rested untouched for years. Inside, a copy of Action Comics #1 that was later certified 5.0 VG/FN by CGC. ComicConnect.com sold the comic at auction for $436,000, saving the family's home and leaving them with plenty of money left over.

Good ol' Archie Andrews was the surprise of the year for us when a copy of Pep Comics #22 CGC 5.0 VG/FN (Archie's first appearance) sold at auction. This was one of the few comics we auctioned where we really had no idea what the market would bear. And boy did it bear to the tune of $50,000. This sale of the Pep directly led to the sale of a copy of Archie Comics #1 CGC 5.0 VG/FN for $34,000 in our very next ComicConnect.com Event Auction. Buyers, by far, outstrip supply for these books and I highly recommend the purchase of any mid to high grade Archies that you can get your hands on.

With a total of six Action Comics #1 sales this year, totaling more than all other auction houses in the world combined, ComicConnect.com is truly the place for consignors and bidders to meet and trade the best of the best.

In the Silver Age and later, major keys and unique high grade comics exceeded our expectations in auctions and in our fixed price marketplace. Amazing Fantasy #15, Showcase #22, Fantastic Four #1 and Amazing Spider-Man #1 performed admirably, while a comic like Amazing Spider-Man #54 that would sell for $30 or so in 5.0 VG/FN sold for a whopping $5,427 in CGC 9.8 NM/MT condition.

Transformers #1 CGC 9.9 Mint hit $1,550 while a Gem Mint copy of Wolverine #1 CGC 10.0 was snatched up for $14,000. These were the comics I collected as a boy back in Indiana and here, at ComicConnect.com, I get to sell them for small fortunes and I love every second of it.

I see the first six issues of the Incredible Hulk as the next big run of books that will leap in value over the next couple of years (if only they could make a good movie!). But, if you are going to buy only one comic in 2011, I can't recommend Amazing Fantasy #15 enough, in any condition you can buy it.

A sale price of $50,000 for this Pep Comics #22 was the surprise of the year.

ComicConnect.com debuted the newest comic book pedigree, the Suscha News Collection, in our last Event Auction of the season with a modest offering of just over 75 comics. With 40 short boxes to process, this is just the start of what we have to offer.

"This stunning collection was amassed by one of the most fastidious collectors I've ever met," said Vincent Zurzolo, my employer and co-owner of ComicConnect.com. "He made a deal with a comic book distributor that allowed him access to newly arrived comics before anyone else got their hands on them."

Besides low-distribution titles that many collectors just never saw, the original owner of the Suscha News Pedigree would carefully go through distributor boxes filled with the same issue of a book. He would get it down to around a dozen or so mint copies of a given book to try to find the MOST mint copies in the group. He was looking for books with the best centering, the shiniest staples, the flattest covers and the sharpest top and bottom of the spine. The collection dates back to the mid 1960s and ends in 1976, totaling almost 50 boxes of comic books.

ComicConnect.com's original comic art auctions hit their stride in 2010 with a large chunk coming from our representation of the L.B. Cole Estate Collection at auction. It was a memorable time going through all of the files and original art that the Golden Age legend had amassed over his career. The collection consisted of paintings, pencil work, recreations, and his files. Amazing.

Jack Kirby and Steve Ditko pages proved to be the gold standard for original art buyers and are always in demand. Collectors are willing to pay a premium for their work.

Noteworthy Original Art Sales:
Amazing Spider-Man #22 pg. 3 Steve Ditko $10,202
Fantastic Four #16 pg. 4 Jack Kirby $18,088
Ghost Rider #8 Cover Gil Kane $5,900

Warlord #39 Cover Mike Grell $4,400

Time flies when you are having fun and in 2010, I felt like I was in a rocket ship. I had an incredible trip to my first San Diego Comic-Con, where I helped sell an Amazing Fantasy #15 CGC 9.0 for $150,000 and I had a great time meeting so many of our customers. It was an amazing experience that I will always cherish.

I would like to extend my thanks and gratitude to all of our customers and consignors. Without so many passionate comic book fans, I wouldn't have the opportunity to work doing what I love. I'm always an e-mail (support@comicconnect.com) or a phone call (212.895.3999) away if I can ever be of service helping you buy or sell comics. I want to get back in the Guinness book with a new, amazing consignment to top our own world record.

THE WAR REPORT

with Richard Evans, Andy Greenham, Keith Marlow and Mick Rabin & the War Correspondents

Welcome back! I am delighted to confirm that you are now reading the 3rd War Correspondent Report, a comprehensive dispatch on the War comic genre composed by devoted collectors and enthusiasts, and an annual account of the War comic book marketplace replete with insight and conjecture from renowned War book specialists from around the U.S. and Canada. Speaking of which, this year's War Correspondents consist of several returning and respected veterans of the field, such as Richard Evans, Keith Marlow and Mick Rabin. Further, hailing from the Great North, we are pleased to have our ranks bolstered by the venerable War comic expert Andy Greenham. Those of you who follow the genre should be all too familiar with the contributions each of these fine men has made to the pastime, and I want to thank them again here for their aid and significant role in developing this year's report.

As I have mentioned in the last two reports (and just about belabored to a nub), one of the original goals behind the creation of the War Correspondents was to develop a definitive ranking of the Top 10 to 20 War comics ever published. For the sanity of our return readers, I will not repeat all of the details regarding how we established our categorical methodology for ranking the books. For that, I recommend that you revisit our original reports in Overstreet #39 and #40, respectively. There you will find a blow-by-blow account of how we accomplished that feat. However, to give some point of reference, the key parameters that define the War comic book category are briefly summarized below.

This year's report will be much like last year's format, as our team felt that the overall structure and content delivered seemed to work well both from our point of view and from the feedback we received from our readers. We will share some thoughts on the market in general and will also dedicate a section of our report to providing opinions and musings on common queries as they relate to the War comic hobby. Of course, just as importantly, we will include the latest, most up-to-date war comic rankings for the genre —which, interestingly, have had some noteworthy movement since our last publishing. So read on and enjoy.

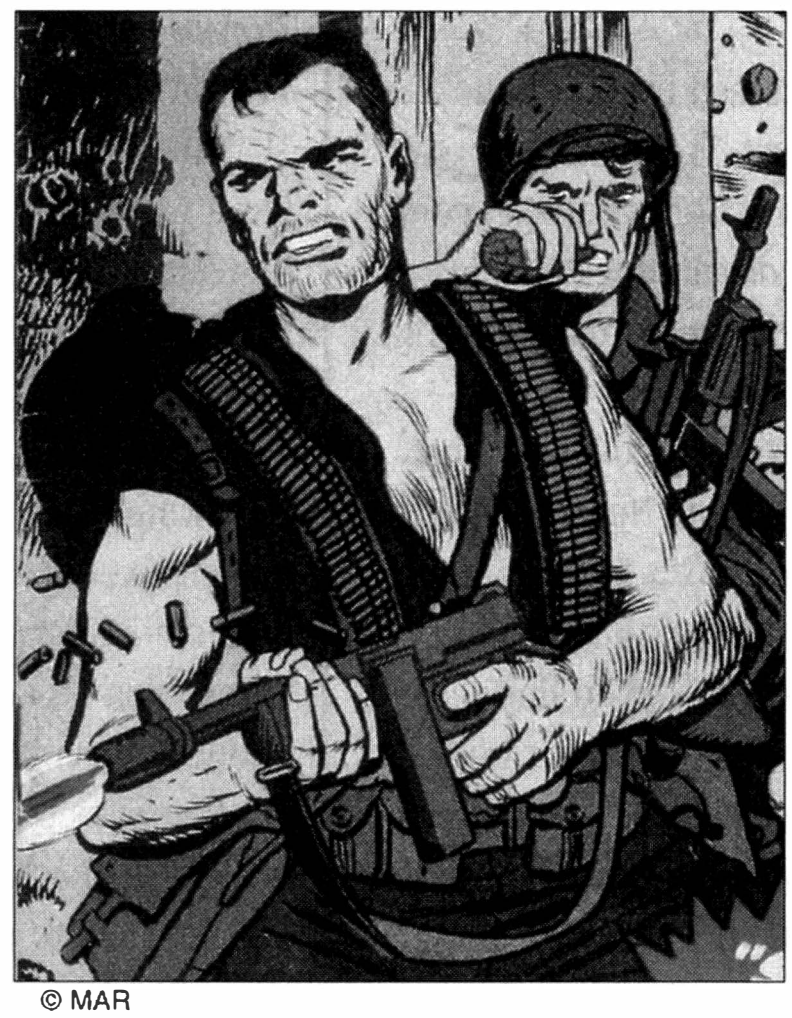
Definition of a "War Book" revisited

Utilizing Overstreet, the web, and other publications, we developed a 2000+ catalog of war-related comic titles and then employed long-winded and complex processes to develop a refined list.

We narrowed the field by characterizing War comics as "stories centered on the military, which is involved in armed conflicts" and, as such, needed to be relegated to those wars which were categorized as "a major conflict". (I.e., no cold war, police actions, spy stories, etc.)

We eliminated war stories with super-heroes (by employing the notion that "any war story blended with a super-hero is by definition a 'fantasy' story and would not be a war story").

We defined and developed a classification for specific war themes. We selected "War Battle Tales" (I.e., stories that were predominantly centered on characters engulfed in battle). Therefore (for now) we purged classifications such as Military Life, War Adventure, War Propaganda, and Tragedy in Wartime, etc.



We categorized two main comic book ages:

- The Golden Age
- The Atom/Silver Age (which we will now, as of this year, officially expand to include the Bronze Age as one or two titles from that era keep making their way into the rankings)

As time progresses we may break the ages down a bit more, but these two categorizations seem to work quite well for now.

News from the Front - A Market Report

If you have been on the fence about getting into this niche of the comic collecting hobby, or you have been dabbling in periodic purchases but have not committed to the genre, it is our opinion that this year would be an opportune time to dive in. Let me share with you why: After three solid years of aggressive and heavy gains in the War book field, the market has ostensibly stabilized during the latter half of 2010 and into 2011. Except for some singular (yet significant) transactions, we witnessed radical price drops on low-grade books, meaningful price declines for mid-grade books and notable dips and steadied values for the sought after high grades. Candidly it is near impossible to predict how long the prices will remain at these relatively attainable levels. Thus, from an investment standpoint, we leave the value forecasting to you (although the War Correspondents are all looking to see if we can benefit from the slow-down by targeting more difficult to find and typically more expensive issues before they begin to increase in price). Speculation aside, whether you are one looking to complete your collection, a casual collector, a fan of the category, or simply someone who only recently gained interest in the genre for the sake of the art, stories or its overall mystique, then this is a fitting time to pick up copies of once nearly unattainable comics. But, before you go running to your comic shop or computer to snag great deals on War books, let me set your expectations based on one constant: you are not likely to find any form of affordable War book that is either listed as highest on census, a mid- to high- grade key, or known to be scarce in this segment of the hobby. These books are still commanding extremely high prices and (as we have mentioned before) in a lot of cases, summoning big dollar figures that are, by far, outdoing comparable superhero books of equivalent grade quality. However, what we ARE saying is that now is a good time to get some solid filler material that you will still be proud to own and show off. Mick Rabin had this to share about the topic:

"The 2010 auction results from Heritage and ComicLink suggest a bit of cooling down in terms of the record prices and hype that they'd received from the 2007-2009 period (roughly contemporaneous with Heritage's offering of Keith Marlow's unprecedented group of high grade War books until the Mound City auction in November of 2009). This doesn't mean that War comics are slow by any means, but it does mean that they typically can be acquired for prices anywhere from 15-40% cheaper than they were attaining before 2010."

So, why do we believe the prices stabilized? Contrary to what you are thinking, we strongly and emphatically believe that it has little to do with the economic downturn and a great deal to do with availability and supply. Thanks to Richard Evans' advocacy on that point, the War Correspondents spent significant time via conference-call debating the matter and reaching the same conclusion. Among other factors was the "War Comic Rush" that ignited in 2007 which drove buyers to shake out what were once considered nearly impossible books to find. And although high grade or key books are still very limited in number, supply has slowly been able to meet demand over these last four years, particularly for ardent collectors. Notwithstanding, these same collectors, even if small in numbers, would not hesitate to pay premiums for select scarce and high grade books at any given moment—so toss out the idea that a slow economy would hinder high dollar sales and new record prices being actualized (the recent Heritage auction featuring the Savannah pedigrees is a great example of that fact). Moreover, and probably the biggest factor, is that with all the attention this genre has received in recent years, the number of low to medium grade books have literally poured out into the market. Keith articulated a point that illustrates the phenomenon quite well. He noted that five years ago when hunting on eBay, you would only come across a couple thousand War comics at any given time, at whatever grade or abundance. Today, as of the date of this report, you can do an on-the-spot search for War comics on that same popular consumer portal and bring up literally ten thousand or more listings in the category. Not to mention the influence on the market by the escalated attention bestowed on the genre by auction sites like the aforementioned Heritage and ComicLink. In short, the above are all evidence that support our assertion that the possible price dips or leveling the market experienced in 2010 and part of 2011 have more to do with "greater amount of supply" versus potential "economic factors." We hope that you can use this information and our position on the specific matter to your benefit.

Prices in the War market are generally stabilizing, but high grade keys still command extremely high prices. (Showcase #45 shown)

Andy Greenham has had recent and firsthand experience with this fluctuating market deviation when he chose to sell his impressive and comprehensive War book collection through a series of ongoing auctions on Heritage during the latter half of 2010. He expressed the following with regard to his overall experience:

"I had been buying strongly for the past few years, putting two full collections of the Big Five together. I felt from doing this, I should have a pretty good grasp on what these books would sell for. I was wrong. The market is ever-changing. Books that I felt would sell for a lot, sometimes didn't and others that I felt would bring average results, did extremely well. To be honest, I wish I was a buyer in 2010 as it was definitely a buyer's market. Don't get me wrong, my sales were not all bad, in fact, I had a great deal of books that did very well for me. Even though it was very sad to see them go, overall, I was pleased with the final results."

Other Factors Influencing the War Comic Market

I hate to point out the obvious, but it would be negligent not to bring up the CGC Census (and third party grading in general). Its impact on our genre has been just as pervasive as it has on other comic niches. The prediction formula is straight forward: the highest census gets the highest prices. And although I am not intoning a fact that isn't already wholly known and accepted in the comic book industry, it is always good to note that, so far (except for a few odd cases), new, first time books recognized as "Single Highest on Census" continue to draw larger and larger dollar figures, underscoring the reality that regardless of the competition, there is always someone willing to pay exceedingly high prices for these new reigning books. Concurrently, unless the scarcity level of a War book keeps its value in place, books now relegated to 2nd or 3rd on census take an initial hit on the investment value. Blame easily pinned on the new king of a particular issue's census ranking, but it remains an important factor to consider as you think about purchasing or selling a cherished book.

Another noteworthy influencer is the highly debated and somewhat controversial practice of "pressing" books. Whether you are for it, against it, or remain generally neutral on the subject, you cannot ignore the impact that pressing has on the market—especially when its implementation allows a lower grade book on census to suddenly leap-frog the highest book on census. This circumstance has obviously affected pricing for War comics in ways that add another level of unpredictability and has played a role in driving prices up on high grade books. I won't dwell on this topic any further as there are far more astute experts on this subject matter, who most likely have already meticulously addressed the point. Nonetheless, it is worth mentioning.

Also to note, in our recent War Correspondent conference call, Mick perceptively emphasized the notion that online communities are playing a big role in the way collectors and buyers are acquiring War comics, specifically, the War comic community on the CGC Forum Boards. Although small in percentage, they seemingly represent what War book collectors are thinking overall in the market. In support of that axiomatic perception, Mick said: "War comics maintained a strong collector base (in 2010). The War comic threads on the CGC message boards remain abuzz with interest and a devoted group of enthusiasts."

And with the wealth of information shared daily on the boards, collectors abroad can easily refer to forums to get intelligence and insight on the genre, particular titles, writers, artists, and details on specific issues; thus arming them with the ability to make sounder acquisitions or sales. This is a factor that was non-existent prior to 2000, where most of us were buying, selling, and collecting with a learning curve and making decisions with only partial information. That is obviously not the case today. Not only are the boards insightful for the reader, but the threads are propagating an escalated interest from collectors. We highly recommend visiting (and contributing to) the boards for your own benefit.

Cover Fire

Due to a combination of aspects, such as the aforementioned third party grading and online communities, it is interesting to note that the overall buying psyche has changed over the last few years with respect to what drives a collector to buy a specific War book. Twenty years ago a significant influential factor to purchase a particular comic was highly subject to the contributing artists within the issue; for instance, the novelty that the "interior" was done by Heath or Kubert. And not surprisingly, yet indubitably, Overstreet gave and continues to bestow respect to the deserving creative scribes and artisans who had toiled on the interior pages of a comic book. However, with the advent of "slabbing", buyers and collectors are now judging books merely by their cover. A marked consequence of this trend has been the effect it is having on the price of some particular War comics. Coupled that with the fact that books are now being scanned and posted on boards, whereby multiparty admiration of books with "cool covers" thrive, thus creating a trend that has exponentially propelled prices on those specific issues. We suggest you not discount this important factor as there is a clear and evident frenzy and subsequent price boosts with regard to this latest cool cover craze. Andy had this to share about the point: "Another area within DC War that has been getting a lot of attention is classic, or cool, covers. Books that aren't specifically listed in Overstreet, but are known to the die-hard War collectors, are selling for very good prices, when found in nice grade. A little DC War classic cover cheat sheet needs to be created and perhaps we'll have that ready for our readers in next year's edition."

Something to Marvel At

Although its importance to the genre has not been lost on us, Sgt. Fury #1 has gained an enormous and surprising amount of momentum in 2010, and, candidly, with a force that has been stronger than we anticipated. Frankly, we have not been blind to the fact that this book is rather significant. In previous reports, even with the #10 spot on our list of top War comics, there was already rumbling among our ranks that the book would have to move up a slot or two in future listings. What we didn't anticipate was the amount of attention this book would receive in the last year! Whether you credit the recent movie mythos build-up with Samuel L. Jackson, or that the book was created by none other than the supreme Kirby and Lee, or the fact that for a Marvel Comic from only 1963 (unlike its superhero counterparts) there are very few high grade copies to be had, you cannot ignore that this book has garnered some concentrated interest. With only 200 or so books currently on Census, a 9.4 status being its highest book, and impending interest from non-War comic enthusiasts, you can expect some serious action on this core comic! In complete countenance, Andy offered: "In my opinion, the hottest War book of 2010 was not a DC War book; it was Marvel's Sgt. Fury and His Howling Commandos #1. My CGC 8.5 copy sold at Heritage for $5750. This book has taken the collecting community by storm, especially high grade copies of it. I believe one of the main reasons is that it is a Superhero/War comic. With it being borderline Superhero, there are masses of people that are looking for high grade copies of this book. I still consider Sgt. Fury to be a War book, but there is no denying the massive influx of interest in this particular title. My guess is many of the new buyers that are driving this price up are not war comic collectors."

Another Milestone

If you are a War comic fan of any station you are already aware that 2009 marked a 50th anniversary for the iconic character Sgt. Rock, and yes I have mentioned that in every report so far. It's just that the fifty year mark appears to be a key landmark for comic book characters in our industry when reflecting on their impact and relevance. It is apparent that when a key comic character reaches that particular milestone, there is a unified realization and veneration that exudes from the entire comic book marketplace over the character and the book in which he first appeared, and that reaction seemingly propels both into a comic collecting Hall of Fame. The most obvious example would be Superman and Action #1 reaching 50 in 1988 (by the way, any of you War comic cats have a copy of the 49 year old Amazing Fantasy #15?). And ok, while I may be comparing apples and oranges here in aligning Sgt. Rock with Superman, these half-century milestones are nevertheless worthy of acknowledgement for any comic book character or mythos. I am meandering, so let me get to the point. I mention all of this to bring to light the following: 2011 is the 50th year anniversary of G.I. Combat #87 and the introduction of the infamous Haunted Tank (and its loyal and revered crew) by the likes of respected war comic monolith's Kanigher and Heath. Don't underestimate this book and its significance to our genre!

Gaining Rank

Since our first report in Overstreet #39, we have been watchful of the market and its fluctuations and movements, providing a ranking of the top books in the War category. After developing the initial rank listing in 2008 we've been careful not to make any abrupt changes to the position of the books. Last year we barely modified the list, with only a few small changes in the teens. This year is another story. We have had ample time to watch the industry, test the market and receive feedback from all corners (thank you). As a result there have been some adjustments that we see as very befitting and necessary (including the committed inclusion of Bronze Age books). After careful deliberation we present the following war books ranked as:

TOP 35 ATOM / SILVER / BRONZE AGE WAR COMICS

Notable again: Foxhole #1 with the Classic Kirby cover. Perhaps as our ranking grows over time it will eventually brandish the Top 50 War books in the category, and we will see Foxhole, among other outstanding titles, make the list. Time will tell.

Mick also contributed the following with regard to our addition of G.I. Combat #75 to the Top 35 list: "G.I. Combat #75 began the legendary "perty-thirty" washtone run (ending with G.I. Combat #104). There has never been a run of washtones that lasted longer than G.I. Combat #75-104. Even the Sea Devils couldn't match that. In high grade, it is easily among the most difficult runs to assemble of ANY title from ANY run in the Silver/ Atomic age. And G.I. Combat #75 is the first of the uninterrupted run."

The titles and corresponding ranking for Golden Age War comics had very little movement since last year and hold steadfast in their original positions. They are as follows:

TOP 5 ATLAS AND CHARLTON WAR COMICS

Last year we introduced the top five issues that from our point of view rank as the best Atlas and Charlton War books. This year, even after some scrutiny, the books remain at the ranks imparted on them last year. The only book that made any kind of upward move in our voting this year was Charlton's Attack #54, but it did not score enough voting points to claim a higher ranking than its original position.

Intel from the War Correspondents

Like last year, in this section of our report we wanted to supply whatever useful and helpful advice that might aid you in your continued pursuit of the War comic book collecting hobby. We consider key questions that we typically discuss amongst ourselves and then summarize our deliberations to share with you. Some of the information offered might even shed light on how certain titles or issues work their way up on to our top War lists. Following last year's framework, we broached many of the same subjects in an attempt to churn up new data from typical topics, and we even included some new subject matter posed by individuals who contacted us throughout the year (thanks – we like hearing from you and truly appreciate your feedback!)

Name some War books that are underrated or underappreciated and why:

G.I. Combat #88 - A scarce book and 2nd appearance of the Haunted Tank, a book which rarely shows up in Fine or better.

Our Fighting Forces #49 - 1st Pooch, very tough to find and very undervalued.

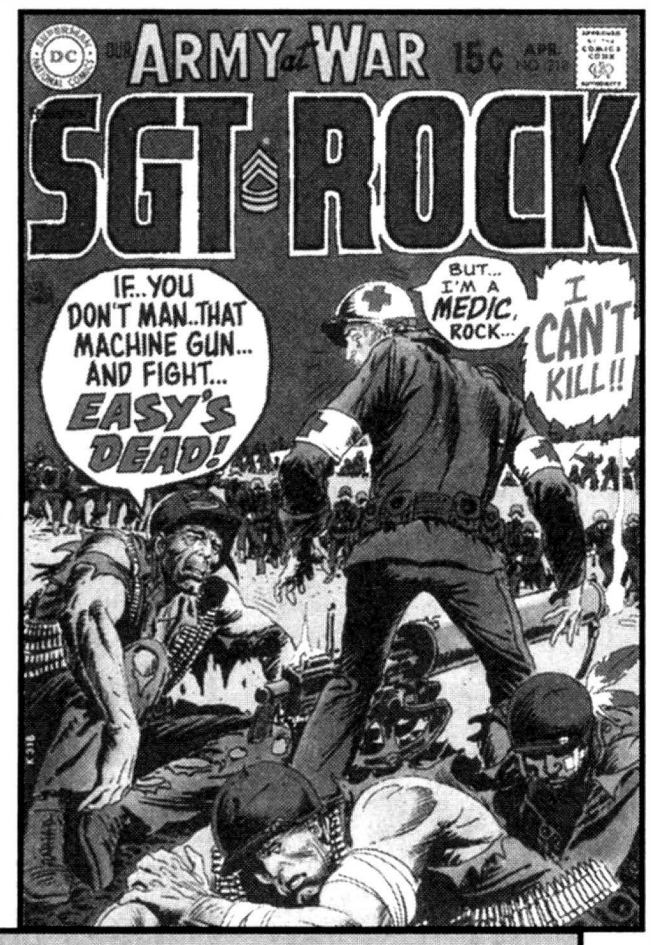
Our Army at War #218 First Glanzman USS Stevens – one of the best series ever written. Mick expounded with the following: "Glanzman deserves to have these ALL reprinted in DC Archives and Showcase formats. They are beautifully drawn and stunningly honest in their assessment of the war in the Pacific as Sam Glanzman himself witnessed it. To my knowledge, it is the longest running semiautobiographical works in DC Comics history. All of the original issues that featured Sam's USS Stevens stories are coveted by War comics collectors, but the first one is Our Army at War #218 and with a dark cover, it is tougher to get in high grade than many of the surrounding issues."

High Grade DC War Keys - OK, this may be stating the obvious, but to re-emphasize the fact that key high-grade DC War books are scarce, consider this: other than the single copies of G.I. Combat #68 in CGC 9.2 and Our Army at War #151 in CGC 9.2 (which are comparably low grades compared to other books of the same time period), there is not a single DC War book from our top 20 Rank that tops CGC 9.0 on the census. Stick that in your pipe and smoke it.

Name some War books to look out for in 2011:

Again, the keys: in short, the top 10 Books on any of our lists.

Classic covers and cool covers.



The issues that were tough in 2008 and 2009 remained tough in 2010. Mick added: "I certainly would have bought multiple copies of Our Army at War #100 and G.I. Combat #75-104 if they were available in grade."

Name War books that are perhaps overrated:

Although Star Spangled War Stories #90 made the "Overrated List" last year, we want to stress not to overlook it. Andy shared the following about the book: "It's not a favorite of mine, but it is still very sought after."

CGC 9.8 copies of Big-5 titles from mid-'70s to late '80s should not command any more of a premium than 9.4 copies since they tend to be relatively plentiful.

© DC

Our Army at War #218, the start of Sam Glanzman's USS Stevens series which deserves a wider following.

Name which War books have been easiest to find in 2010-2011:

Many 10 and 12 cent DC War books are readily available in GD to GD/VG, even VG. I feel they are overvalued with many dealers offering these for 50% of catalogue value.

All American Men of War #112 - a beautiful comic in every way, it comprises the 1st appearance and origin of Steve Savage - Balloon Buster with incredible interior and cover art by Russ Heath. However, multiple copies in 9.0 and above have met resistance to what would be considered reasonable prices on ComicLink and the CGC message boards.

Name War books that are currently overabundant:

Low grade War books. As reported in our Market Report throughout.

Low to mid-high grade copies of Our Army at War #151, Sgt. Fury #13, and Showcase #45 (as reported last year).

G.I. Combat #87 in 6.0 and below is relatively available right now if you want it.

The 9.6 copy of Showcase #45 attained a record price with the Savannah copy selling at Heritage this year, despite its more abundant availability in the 8.5 to 9.2 range.

Name which War books have been the hardest to find in 2011:

Our Fighting Forces #49

G.I. Combat #88

Star Spangled War Stories #6 (also listed as "extremely scarce" in Chris Pedrin's Big Five Information Guide).

All 10¢ War comics in high grade are tough.

Name featured key sales in 2011 and why they were important:

Not necessarily pedigree books, but with 500 CGC graded War books offered from the Andy Greenham collection, that in itself gave collectors much to choose from, in a market in short supply of quality War books.

Since the Mound City Auction, there have been numerous auctions – mainly Heritage – that prominently featured DC War comics. Though many have met with record prices, the vast majority of these War comics have sold for softer prices than before the Mound City Auction.

The release and auctioning of the Savannah Pedigrees will probably be the single most significant War books auction (for the first half of this year in the least, if not longer). The quality of the books themselves along with some of the highest grades seen for War books since the Mound City Auction, this was certainly an auction to note. See some of the record prices realized below. Could this be the beginning of the next upswing?

Showcase #45 in the Savannah Auction stands out because it's not just the War comic devotees who are vying for these issues. As with ANY DC Silver Age comic, but perhaps especially Showcase #45, 9.6 and better copies will routinely sell for record prices… And of course it did, realizing $6,600

Name key individual sales in 2011:

Sgt. Fury #1 CGC 9.0 $10,000 (A War book breaks the five figure barrier again! But take note, this was only a 9.0)

Sgt. Fury #1 CGC 8.5 $5750 (The hottest War book of 2010, Sgt. Fury #1 seems to be on fire with many long-time Marvel Collectors finally discovering how tough that book is to find in nice condition. It's met with a great deal of interest and record prices in recent auctions.)

Our Army At War #128 CGC 9.4 Savannah Pedigree $4500 (Key "Origin of Sgt Rock" book)

Our Army At War #118 CGC 9.6 Savannah Pedigree $3350 (Wow! Single highest by 3 slots, impossible to find in high grade, and only CGC 9.6 Our Army At War issue between issues #75 and #135)

G.I. Combat #100 CGC 9.4 $3,100 (Wow! That price was unexpected)

G.I. Combat #123 CGC 9.4 $2875 (Mlle. Marie app in Haunted Tank – big price for this book only underlines the growing interest in the one major female character in the DC War mythos!)

Our Army At War #120 CGC 9.4 Savannah Pedigree $2400 (highest previous book – a CGC 9.0)

Our Army At War #123 CGC 9.4 Savannah Pedigree $2300 (highest previous book – a CGC 9.2)

Our Army At War #116 CGC 9.4 Savannah Pedigree $2275 (surprisingly high price since there are two 9.4s on census, still, scarce book overall)

Our Army At War #117 CGC 9.4 Savannah Pedigree $2030 (same scenario as the OAAW #116)

Our Army At War #109 CGC 9.2 Savannah Pedigree $1675 (tale of Sgt. Rock's first battle – great price considering that the 9.0 went for twice that during the Mound City Auction)

Star Spangled War Stories #112 CGC 9.4 Savannah Pedigree $1675 (The Dino books are still getting plenty of love)

Our Army At War #83 CGC 6.0 $1600 (1st true Sgt. Rock appearance)

Our Army At War #107 CGC 9.4 Savannah Pedigree $1550 (only 8 books on census)

Star Spangled War Stories #118 CGC 9.4 Savannah Pedigree $1550 (Dinos attack!)

G.I. Combat #68 CGC 7.0 $1400 (Sgt. Rock prototype)

All-American Men Of War #94 $1300 (classic Russ Heath cover)

Our Army At War #60 CGC 9.0 $1300 (classic washtone cover)

G.I. Combat #87 CGC 6.5 $1100 (1st appearance of Haunted Tank)

Our Army At War #81 CGC 6.5 $1100 (last Sgt. Rock prototype)

Our Army At War #83 CGC 5.5 $1100 (1st true Sgt. Rock appearance)

Our Army At War #151 CGC 9.4 Savannah Pedigree $1000 (2nd highest on census that features the first appearance of Enemy Ace. A great deal

© MAR

Sgt. Fury #1 was certainly the hottest War book of 2010.

for this book!)

Our Army At War #115 CGC 9.0 Savannah Pedigree $1000 (Mlle. Marie's 1st crossover is key, and $1000 for the 9.0 was a fair price for all parties)

Our Army At War #83 CGC 4.0 $900 ($900 for a 4.0? – this book is getting the attention it deserves!)

G.I. Combat #114 CGC 9.0 $850 (Origin of Haunted Tank)

G.I. Combat #87 CGC 6.0 $850 (1st appearance Haunted Tank)

Star Spangled War Stories #84 CGC 9.0 $775 (1st Mlle. Marie. Great price for the buyer!)

Our Fighting Forces #123 CGC 9.6 $750 (single highest for the first 1st Losers book – fair price)

Our Fighting Forces #27 CGC 9.0 $700 (great cover)

Our Fighting Forces #49 CGC 9.0 $550 (1st appearance of Pooch. Low price for a very undervalued book)

Last year, Our Army At War #100 was on the list as a book to look out for, and a CGC 7.0 copy of it sold for $425!

Our Army At War #1 CGC 6.0 $600 (good deal for the buyer)

Our Fighting Forces #45 CGC 7.5 $180 (1st Gunner and Sarge. What?! Previous sales were somewhere around $1100 for this one. Someone pulled off the perfect crime – nice one!)

Name a Copper thru Modern Age war book worth getting your hands on:

Andy contributed the following: "Unknown Soldier by Joshua Dysart and Alberto Ponticello has been a real joy for me to read. Even though it strays from the classic Unknown Soldier that we all know and love, the book has been the most enjoyable modern War book that I've read in the longest time. Unfortunately, the series has now ended with issue #25. However, with well written stories and superbly drawn artwork, it comes very highly recommended."

Name this year's choice for best DC War Cover:

Andy is planning on running his "Best Cover Contest" again this year on the CGC boards. With the intent of retiring the winners from the previous years, we look forward to seeing what gems surface to the top. However, candidates to consider in the future for best DC War Cover are:

- Our Army At War #112
- Our Fighting Forces #71
- G.I. Combat #78
- G.I. Combat #83
- G.I. Combat #87
- Our Fighting Forces #20

A Candidate to Consider for best NON-DC War Cover:

- Foxhole #1 (classic Jack Kirby cover)

In what issues can we find what you consider the finest War stories written?

Our Fighting Forces #40 "The Silent Ones" by Kubert.

Our Army at War #79 "What's the Price of a B-17" Kubert drawing in an almost Heathesque cross-hatching style. Intensely cool story.

Virtually EVERY one of Sam Glanzman's USS Stevens stories that began with Our Army At War #218 and ran from roughly 1970 until 1977 as a back-up feature in numerous issues of Our Army At War. The series is a triumph and Glanzman's work is amongst the best-kept secrets of all War collectors.

R. Ballard reminded us that one of the finest stories written in the early '70s was "Burma Sky" in Our Fighting Forces #146. Its engrossing tale of the Flying Tigers and a stoic hero amongst them—always leaves a lasting impression on the reader.

Name a key War comic or series that stands out in your mind that isn't a DC, Charlton or Atlas AND explain why you feel it is worth mentioning /collecting:

The obvious one here would be Sgt. Fury and His Howling Commandos. It's a long running series by Marvel Comics that literally every comic collector has heard of.

A much lesser known title would be Combat by Dell Publishing. The series ran 40 issues with the last 14 issues reprinting the first 14. The covers were beautifully painted, the stories were well-written and there's a whole lot of great Sam Glanzman artwork in there as well.

What information can you provide on variant issues:

There's not a lot of information on variants when it comes to War comics. For instance, with many of the later issues in G.I. Combat and Sgt. Rock, there were both newsstand and direct edition versions, usually identified by the UPC code or lack thereof. There are also pricing variants, such as Canadian, US, and British, at the very least. Whitman variants exist for Sgt. Rock #329 and many Brave and the Bold DC war books. Some books had Mark Jewellers inserts. Andy happily admits that: "Collecting these different versions of the same book have been fun to me and continue to prove to be a challenge."

Over and Out

TOP BOOKS

The following tables denote the rate of appreciation of the top Golden Age, Platinum Age, Silver Age and Bronze Age books, as well as selected genres over the past year. The retail value for a Near Mint- copy of each book (or VF where a Near Mint- copy is not known to exist) in 2011 is compared to its Near Mint- value in 2010. The rate of return for 2011 over 2010 is given. The place in rank is given for each comic by year, with its corresponding value in highest known grade. These tables can be very useful in forecasting trends in the market place. For instance, the investor might want to know which book is yielding the best dividend from one year to the next, or one might just be interested in seeing how the popularity of books changes from year to year. For instance, Archie Comics #1 was in 35th place in 2010 and has increased to 23rd place in 2011. Premium books are also included in these tables and are denoted with an asterisk(*).

The following tables are meant as a guide to the investor. However, it should be pointed out that trends may change at anytime and that some books can meet market resistance with a slowdown in price increases, while others can develop into real comers from a presently dormant state. In the long run, if the investor sticks to the books that are appreciating steadily each year, he shouldn't go very far wrong.

GRADING DEFINITIONS

When grading a comic book, common sense must be employed. The overall eye appeal and beauty of the comic book must be taken into account along with its technical flaws to arrive at the appropriate grade.

10.0 GEM MINT (GM): This is an exceptional example of a given book - the best ever seen. The slightest bindery defects and/or printing flaws may be seen only upon very close inspection. The overall look is "as if it has never been handled or released for purchase." Only the slightest bindery or printing defects are allowed, and these would be imperceptible on first viewing. No bindery tears. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with high reflectivity. Well centered and firmly secured to interior pages. Corners are cut square and sharp. No creases. No dates or stamped markings allowed. No soiling, staining or other discoloration. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples must be original, centered and clean with no rust. No staple tears or stress lines. Paper is white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. No interior autographs or owner signatures. Centerfold is firmly secure. No interior tears.

9.9 MINT (MT): Near perfect in every way. Only subtle bindery or printing defects are allowed. No bindery tears. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with high reflectivity. Generally well centered and firmly secured to interior pages. Corners are cut square and sharp. No creases. Small, inconspicuous, lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable as long as they are in an unobtrusive location. No soiling, staining or other discoloration. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples must be original, generally centered and clean with no rust. No staple tears or stress lines. Paper is white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is firmly secure. No interior tears.

9.8 NEAR MINT/MINT (NM/MT): Nearly perfect in every way with only minor imperfections that keep it from the next higher grade. Only subtle bindery or printing defects are allowed. No bindery tears. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with high reflectivity. Generally well centered and firmly secured to interior pages. Corners are cut square and sharp. No creases. Small, inconspicuous, lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable as long as they are in an unobtrusive location. No soiling, staining or other discoloration. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples must be original, generally centered and clean with no rust. No staple tears or stress lines. Paper is off-white to white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is firmly secure. Only the slightest interior tears are allowed.

9.6 NEAR MINT+ (NM+): Nearly perfect with a minor additional virtue or virtues that raise it from Near Mint. The overall look is "as if it was just purchased and read once or twice." Only subtle bindery or printing defects are allowed. No bindery tears are allowed, although on Golden Age books bindery tears of up to 1/8" have been noted. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with high reflectivity. Well centered and firmly secured to interior pages. One corner may be almost imperceptibly blunted, but still almost sharp and cut square. Almost imperceptible indentations are permissible, but no creases, bends, or color break. Small, inconspicuous, lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable as long as they are in an unobtrusive location. No soiling, staining or other discoloration. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples must be original, generally centered, with only the slightest discoloration. No staple tears, stress lines, or rust migration. Paper is off-white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is firmly secure. Only the slightest interior tears are allowed.

9.4 NEAR MINT (NM): Nearly perfect with only minor imperfections that keep it from the next higher grade. Minor feathering that does not distract from the overall beauty of an otherwise higher grade copy is acceptable for this grade. The overall look is "as if it was just purchased and read once or twice." Subtle bindery defects are allowed. Bindery tears must be less than 1/16" on Silver Age and later books, although on Golden Age books bindery tears of up to 1/4" have been noted. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with high reflectivity. Generally well centered and secured to interior pages. Corners are cut square and sharp with ever-so-slight blunting permitted. A 1/16" bend is permitted with no color break. No creases. Small, inconspicuous, lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable as long as they are in an unobtrusive location. No soiling, staining or other discoloration apart from slight foxing. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples are generally centered; may have slight discoloration. No staple tears are allowed; almost no stress lines. No rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is cream to off-white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is secure. Slight interior tears are allowed.

9.2 NEAR MINT– (NM–): Nearly perfect with only a minor additional defect or defects that keep it from Near Mint. A limited number of minor bindery defects are allowed. A light, barely noticeable water stain or minor foxing that does not distract from the beauty of the book is acceptable for this grade. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with only the slightest dimming of reflectivity. Generally well centered and secured to interior pages. Corners are cut square and sharp with ever-so-slight blunting permitted. A 1/16"-1/8" bend is permitted with no color break. No creases. Small, inconspicuous, lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable as long as they are in an unobtrusive location. No soiling, staining or other discoloration apart from slight foxing. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples may show some discoloration. No staple tears are allowed; almost no stress lines. No rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is cream to off-white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is secure. Slight interior tears are allowed.

9.0 VERY FINE/NEAR MINT (VF/NM): Nearly perfect with outstanding eye appeal. A limited number of bindery defects are allowed. Almost flat cover with almost imperceptible wear. Inks are bright with slightly diminished reflectivity. An 1/8" bend is allowed if color is not broken. Corners are cut square and sharp with ever-so-slight blunting permitted but no creases. Several lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable. No obvious soiling, staining or other discoloration, except for very minor foxing. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples may show some discoloration. Only the slightest staple tears are allowed. A very minor accumulation of stress lines may be present if they are nearly imperceptible. No rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is cream to off-white and supple. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is secure. Very minor interior tears may be present.

8.5 VERY FINE+ (VF+): Fits the criteria for Very Fine but with an additional virtue or small accumulation of virtues that improves the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

8.0 VERY FINE (VF): An excellent copy with outstanding eye appeal. Sharp, bright and clean with supple pages. A comic book in this grade has the appearance of having been carefully handled. A limited accumulation of minor bindery defects is allowed. Cover is relatively flat with minimal surface wear beginning to show, possibly including some minute wear at corners. Inks are generally bright with moderate to high reflectivity. A 1/4" crease is acceptable if color is not broken. Stamped or inked arrival dates may be present. No obvious soiling, staining or other discoloration, except for minor foxing. Spine is almost flat with no roll. Possible minor color break allowed. Staples may show some discoloration. Very slight staple tears and a few almost very minor to minor stress lines may be present. No rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is tan to cream and supple. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is mostly secure. Minor interior tears at the margin may be present.

7.5 VERY FINE– (VF–): Fits the criteria for Very Fine but with an additional defect or small accumulation of defects that detracts from the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

7.0 FINE/VERY FINE (FN/VF): An above-average copy that shows minor wear but is still relatively flat and clean with outstanding eye appeal. A small accumulation of minor bindery defects is allowed. Minor cover wear beginning to show with interior yellowing or tanning allowed, possibly including minor creases. Corners may be blunted or abraded. Inks are generally bright with a moderate reduction in reflectivity. Stamped or inked arrival dates may be present. No obvious soiling, staining or other discoloration, except for minor foxing. The slightest spine roll may be present, as well as a possible moderate color break. Staples may show some discoloration. Slight staple tears and a slight accumulation of light stress lines may be present. Slight rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is tan to cream, but not brown. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is mostly secure. Minor interior tears at the margin may be present.

6.5 FINE+ (FN+): Fits the criteria for Fine but with an additional virtue or small accumulation of virtues that improves the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

6.0 FINE (FN): An above-average copy that shows minor wear but is still relatively flat and clean with no significant creasing or other serious defects. Eye appeal is somewhat reduced because of slight surface wear and the accumulation of small defects, especially on the spine and edges. A FINE condition comic book appears to have been read a few times and has been handled with moderate care. Some accumulation of minor bindery defects is allowed. Minor cover wear apparent, with minor to moderate creases. Inks show a major reduction in reflectivity. Blunted or abraded corners are more common, as is minor staining, soiling, discoloration, and/or foxing. Stamped or inked arrival dates may be present. A minor spine roll is allowed. There can also be a 1/4" spine split or severe color break. Staples show minor discoloration. Minor staple tears and an accumulation of stress lines may be present, as well as minor rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is brown to tan and fairly supple with no signs of brittleness. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Minor interior tears at the margin may be present. Centerfold may be loose but not detached.

5.5 FINE– (FN–): Fits the criteria for Fine but with an additional defect or small accumulation of defects that detracts from the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

5.0 VERY GOOD/FINE (VG/FN): An above-average but well-used comic book. A comic in this grade shows some moderate wear; eye appeal is somewhat reduced because of the accumulation of defects. Still a desirable copy that has been handled with some care. An accumulation of bindery defects is allowed. Minor to moderate cover wear apparent, with minor to moderate creases and/or dimples. Inks have major to extreme reduction in reflectivity. Blunted or abraded corners are increasingly common, as is minor to moderate staining, discoloration, and/or foxing. Stamped or inked arrival dates may be present. A minor to moderate spine roll is allowed. A spine split of up to 1/2" may be present. Staples show minor discoloration. A slight accumulation of minor staple tears and an accumulation of minor stress lines may also be present, as well as minor rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is brown to tan with no signs of brittleness. May have the faintest trace of an acidic odor. Centerfold may be loose but not detached. Minor tears may also be present.

4.5 VERY GOOD+ (VG+): Fits the criteria for Very Good but with an additional virtue or small accumulation of virtues that improves the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

4.0 VERY GOOD (VG): The average used comic book. A comic in this grade shows some significant moderate wear, but still has not accumulated enough total defects to reduce eye appeal to the point that it is not a desirable copy. Cover shows moderate to significant wear, and may be loose but not completely detached. Moderate to extreme reduction in reflectivity. Can have an accumulation of creases or dimples. Corners may be blunted or abraded. Store stamps, name stamps, arrival dates, initials, etc. have no effect on this grade. Some discoloration, fading, foxing, and even minor soiling is allowed. As much as a 1/4" triangle can be missing out of the corner or edge; a missing 1/8" square is also acceptable. Only minor unobtrusive tape and other amateur repair allowed on otherwise high grade copies. Moderate spine roll may be present and/or a 1" spine split. Staples discolored. Minor to moderate staple tears and stress lines may be present, as well as some rust migration. Paper is brown but not brittle. A minor acidic odor can be detectable. Minor to moderate tears may be present. Centerfold may be loose or detached at one staple.

3.5 VERY GOOD– (VG–): Fits the criteria for Very Good but with an additional defect or small accumulation of defects that detracts from the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

3.0 GOOD/VERY GOOD (GD/VG): A used comic book showing some substantial wear. Cover shows significant wear, and may be loose or even detached at one staple. Cover reflectivity is very low. Can have a book-length crease and/or dimples. Corners may be blunted or even rounded. Discoloration, fading, foxing, and even minor to moderate soiling is allowed. A triangle from 1/4" to 1/2" can be missing out of the corner or edge; a missing 1/8" to 1/4" square is also acceptable. Tape and other amateur repair may be present. Moderate spine roll likely. May have a spine split of anywhere from 1" to 1-1/2". Staples may be rusted or replaced. Minor to moderate staple tears and moderate stress lines may be present, as well as some rust migration. Paper is brown but not brittle. Centerfold may be loose or detached at one staple. Minor to moderate interior tears may be present.

2.5 GOOD+ (GD+): Fits the criteria for Good but with an additional virtue or small accumulation of virtues that improves the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

2.0 GOOD (GD): Shows substantial wear; often considered a "reading copy." Cover shows significant wear and may even be detached. Cover reflectivity is low and in some cases completely absent. Book-length creases and dimples may be present. Rounded corners are more common. Moderate soiling, staining, discoloration and foxing may be present. The largest piece allowed missing from the front or back cover is usually a 1/2" triangle or a 1/4" square, although some Silver Age books such as 1960s Marvels have had the price corner box clipped from the top left front cover and may be considered Good if they would otherwise have graded higher. Tape and other forms of amateur repair are common in Silver Age and older books. Spine roll is likely. May have up to a 2" spine split. Staples may be degraded, replaced or missing. Moderate staple tears and stress lines may be present, as well as rust migration. Paper is brown but not brittle. Centerfold may be loose or detached. Moderate interior tears may be present.

1.8 GOOD– (GD–): Fits the criteria for Good but with an additional defect or small accumulation of defects that detracts from the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

1.5 FAIR/GOOD (FR/GD): A comic showing substantial to heavy wear. A copy in this grade still has all pages and covers, although there may be pieces missing. Books in this grade are commonly creased, scuffed, abraded, soiled, and possibly unattractive, but still generally readable. Cover shows considerable wear and may be detached. Nearly no reflectivity to no reflectivity remaining. Store stamp, name stamp, arrival date and initials are permitted. Book-length creases, tears and folds may be present. Rounded corners are increasingly common. Soiling, staining, discoloration and foxing is generally present. Up to 1/10 of the back cover may be missing. Tape and other forms of amateur repair are increasingly common in Silver Age and older books. Spine roll is common. May have a spine split between 2" and 2/3 the length of the book. Staples may be degraded, replaced or missing. Staple tears and stress lines are common, as well as rust migration. Paper is brown and may show brittleness around the edges. Acidic odor may be present. Centerfold may be loose or detached. Interior tears are common.

1.0 FAIR (FR): A copy in this grade shows heavy wear. Some collectors consider this the lowest collectible grade because comic books in lesser condition are usually incomplete and/or brittle. Comics in this grade are usually soiled, faded, ragged and possibly unattractive. This is the last grade in which a comic remains generally readable. Cover may be detached, and inks have lost all reflectivity. Creases, tears and/or folds are prevalent. Corners are commonly rounded or absent. Soiling and staining is present. Books in this condition generally have all pages and most of the covers, although there may be up to 1/4 of the front cover missing or no back cover, but not both. Tape and other forms of amateur repair are more common. Spine roll is more common; spine split can extend up to 2/3 the length of the book. Staples may be missing or show rust and discoloration. An accumulation of staple tears and stress lines may be present, as well as rust migration. Paper is brown and may show brittleness around the edges but not in the central portion of the pages. Acidic odor may be present. Accumulation of interior tears. Chunks may be missing. The centerfold may be missing if readability is generally preserved (although there may be difficulty). Coupons may be cut.

0.5 POOR (PR): Most comic books in this grade have been sufficiently degraded to the point where there is little or no collector value; they are easily identified by a complete absence of eye appeal. Comics in this grade are brittle almost to the point of turning to dust with a touch, and are usually incomplete. Extreme cover fading may render the cover almost indiscernible. May have extremely severe stains, mildew or heavy cover abrasion to the point that some cover inks are indistinct/absent. Covers may be detached with large chunks missing. Can have extremely ragged edges and extensive creasing. Corners are rounded or virtually absent. Covers may have been defaced with paints, varnishes, glues, oil, indelible markers or dyes, and may have suffered heavy water damage. Can also have extensive amateur repairs such as laminated covers. Extreme spine roll present; can have extremely ragged spines or a complete, book-length split. Staples can be missing or show extreme rust and discoloration. Extensive staple tears and stress lines may be present, as well as extreme rust migration. Paper exhibits moderate to severe brittleness (where the comic book literally falls apart when examined). Extreme acidic odor may be present. Extensive interior tears. Multiple pages, including the centerfold, may be missing that affect readability. Coupons may be cut.

OVERSTREET ADVISORS

Even before the first edition of The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide was printed, author Robert M. Overstreet solicited pricing data, historical notations, and general information from a variety of sources. What was initially an informal group offering input quickly became an organized field of comic book collectors, dealers and historians whose opinions are actively solicited in advance of each edition of this book. Some of these Overstreet Advisors are specialists who deal in particular niches within the comic book world, while others are generalists who are interested in commenting on the broader marketplace. Each advisor provides information from their respective areas of interest and expertise, spanning the history of American comics.

While some choose to offer pricing and historical information in the form of annotated sales catalogs, auction catalogs, or documented private sales, assistance from others comes in the form of the market reports such as those beginning on page 72 in this book. In addition to those who have served as Overstreet Advisors almost since The Guide's inception, each year new contributors are sought.

With that in mind, we are pleased to present our newest Overstreet Advisors:

METROPOLIS

METROPOLIS ? WE'RE CONFUSED!

We hope that someone who reads this will be able to explain why this kind of thing happens, because we don't get it!

The following is a true story...

At the biggest convention of the year, a dealer who traveled hundreds of miles to set up bought a high-grade Fantastic Four #1 for roughly 1/2 the price that we would have paid. After that comic passed through the hands of several dealers, Metropolis did in fact buy it. The fellow who initially sold it at the convention could easily have made seven thousand dollars more if he had sold it to us.

SHOULDN'T THESE GUYS KNOW BETTER? SHOULDN'T EVERYONE?

Is it still better to get more money for your comics than less? Does the Earth still revolve around the Sun? Are there still people out there who are not offering their books to Metropolis and losing money by selling to the wrong guy?

If anyone out there can shed some light on why this still happens in this day and age, could you please let us know?

FACT 1: ABSOLUTELY NO OTHER COMIC DEALER BUYS MORE GOLDEN AND SILVER AGE COMICS THAN METROPOLIS.

Although the pages of the price guide are filled with other dealers offering to pay "top dollar," the simple truth is that Metropolis spends more money on more quality comic book collections year in and year out than any other dealers in the country. We have the funds and the expertise to back up our word. The fact is that we have spent nearly 4 million dollars on rare comic books and movie posters over the last year. If you have comic books to sell please call us at 1.800.229.6387. A generous finder's fee will be given if you know of any comic book or movie poster collections that we purchase. All calls will be strictly confidential.

FACT 2: ABSOLUTELY NO OTHER COMIC DEALER SELLS MORE GOLDEN AND SILVER AGE COMICS THAN METROPOLIS.

We simply have the best stock of Golden and Silver Age comic books in the country. The thousands of collectors familiar with our strict grading standards and excellent service can attest to this. Chances are, if you want it, we have it !

APPRAISAL SERVICE

If you'd like to know the value of your comics, why not ask the guys who created the universal 10 point grading scale? Metropolis offers the following absolutely free!

1. VALUE APPRAISAL to determine your comics' retail value based on all parameters including current desirability of the comic, relative scarcity and historical significance.

2. COMPLETE EXAMINATION of comics for all types of restoration.

3. DOUBLE GRADING SYSTEM to ensure greatest accuracy.

Our staff reflects over 50 years of comic evaluation and retail experience. There is not a more knowledgeable staff anywhere. For more info, call Toll-Free

1.800.229.METRO (6387)

Please limit the number of comics to 10.
Comics should be from 1930 -1975.
That is our field of expertise.

SELLER TIP :

Sometimes having your comics sealed by a 3rd party grader increases the value. Other times it won't and you only lose money on grading fees. Our consultation determines when and when not to have a comic "slabbed", and you'll even save 20% submitting comics to 3rd party graders through Metropolis!

COMIC CONNECT

THE ONLINE MARKETPLACE TO BUY AND SELL COMICS

For over 25 years, the experts at ComicConnect.com have been recognized and renowned for selling the most sought after comic books and collections. Our services have been enlisted by the individuals who are the most aggressive collectors in the market. If you're considering selling your comics there is no company better poised than ComicConnect.com to help you realize the best return.

In today's market, the decision of just how to sell your comics is critical. Making the right choice is like walking a tightrope without a net. Perhaps the most common pitfall novice sellers fall into is blindly consigning to an auction house. If you're considering parting with your collection, and think an auction house is the best way to go, we strongly advise you consider the following:

Do the Math. The commission rate an auction house charges you, the seller, is typically 15%. However, the auction house will also charge the bidder a "buyer's premium" of 19.5%. Make no mistake about it, a bidder in an auction simply deducts that additional 19.5% from the final price they are willing to pay. Bottom line: The auction house is taking nearly a 35% cut from each and every transaction. By having their hand in the pocket of both the bidder and the seller, the auction house ensures the most profit for itself, while the consignor hemorrhages on their investment. At ComicConnect.com, our seller's commission is only 10%, and we do not charge buyer's premiums. That's it. The rest of the proceeds go back into your pocket where it rightfully belongs.

When you consign to ComicConnect.com, you have at your disposal the services of the most experienced comic book sellers in the world. More importantly, you benefit from the thousands upon thousands of long-term customer relationships we've developed over the past 25 years. We're in it for the long haul, and will work with you to develop a strategy that will get you the highest return. We won't "square-peg" your collection into a formula that doesn't fit. We will pursue the avenue or avenues that work best for the comics you consign. Sometimes, that means selling your comics to the private individuals who pay the very best for being offered the very best. Oftentimes, we will arrange exclusive viewings at our showroom in Manhattan. We also maintain thousands of want lists of customers waiting in the wings for certain comic books to come to market - comic books that you may have in your collection.
If you're thinking of selling your comics, visit our online marketplace at ComicConnect.com. For a free consultation, call ComicConnect.com at 212.895.3999 or email support@comicconnect.com.

Dan Hampton, Las Cruces, NM

These are just two of the many satisfied customers that have bought books from us in the past. We can say this with much confidence because our representatives travel to the majority of the 50 states and Canada plus attend many of the major comic book conventions (San Diego, Chicago, Detroit, New York, etc.) to uncover books you would not have the opportunity to find. When we are not on the road, we spend MANY hours on the phone locating books from our long list of past and present comic sources we've developed over the 25 years we have been dealing in comic books. When sending your want list either E-MAIL us, or mail us and include a self-addressed stamped envelope (if possible), your phone number, and a good time to reach you. We DON'T send out catalogs, so please ask for specific books and conditions desired. We will contact you when we find the items you've requested. Phone calls are also welcomed. Paying up to 100% or more of guide for many comics of interest

▼ POINTS TO CONSIDER ▼

TO SELL ON EBAY OR NOT TO SELL ON EBAY—THAT IS YOUR QUESTION?

- Consigning your comics to an eBay seller or an auction may not let you realize your collection's potential. EBay sellers and auctions charge 15% to 35% on every transaction regardless if they sell for less than guide. Many items sell for way below guide and you still pay all related charges. Many dealers buy these items well below market value. After you consider all charges and the final selling price you will generally net much less then we would pay. Selling to us there will be no charges, no waiting for payment. It's easy, and you will be treated with honesty and fairness.
- We have over 25 years experience in comic fandom. We have purchased many well-known collections while competing against other interested parties. Give us the chance to show you your top price.
- Being a collector/dealer gives us the ability to buy your entire collection and pay you the most for it. You will maximize your collection's value.

You have everything to gain by contacting us. WHY miss out on your BEST OFFER? Call 603-869-2097 today!

The Comic Strip

The death of billionaire Jackson Reynolds throws his impossibly high-grade collection of pop culture artifacts into the most comprehensive auction the world has ever seen and it attracts a colorful cast of interested parties who are not what they seem.

This hardcover volume collects the complete story with plenty of extras including one previously unpublished strip, the non-continuity Christmas and New Year's strips, a character key, a guest appearance by the legendary comic creator Stan Lee, and much more.

GEMSTONE PUBLISHING

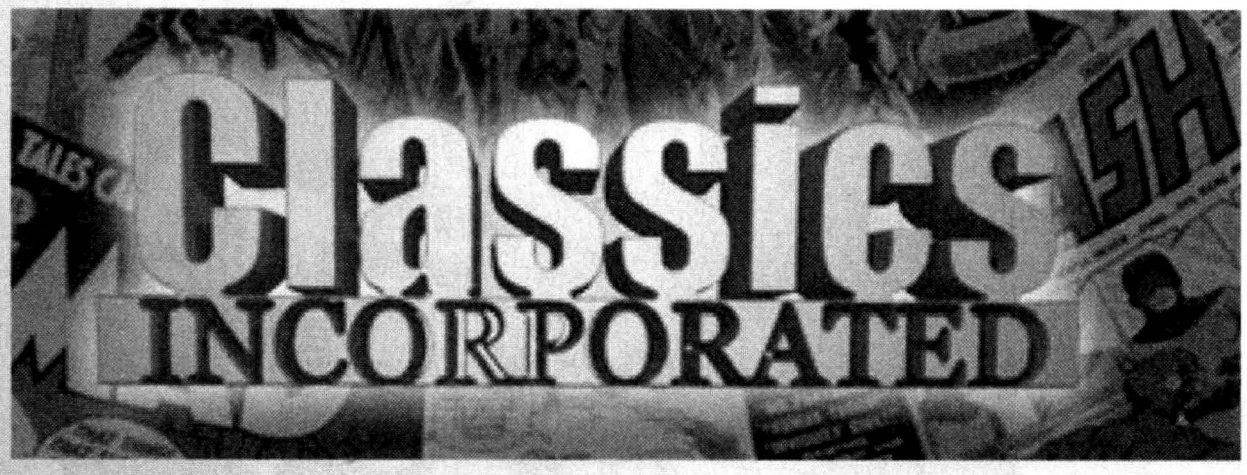
COMIC BOOK PRESSING AT ITS FINEST.

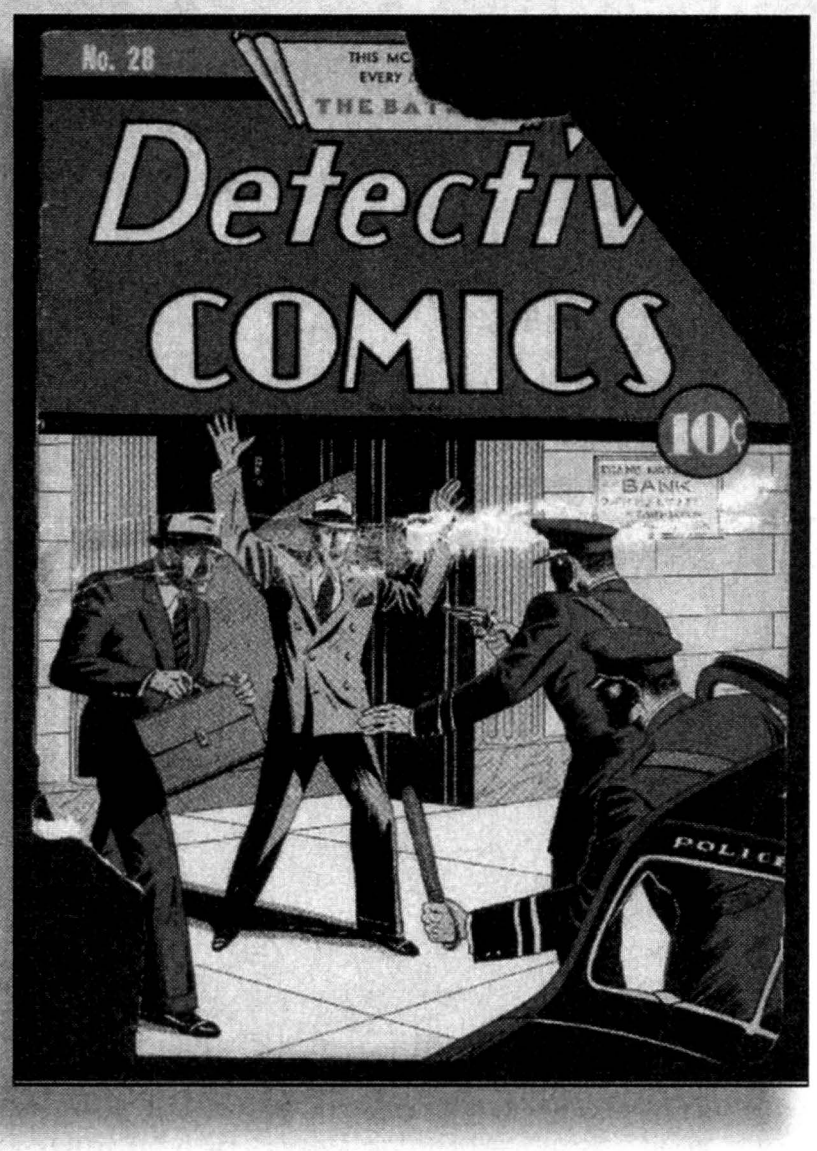
This copy of Amazing Fantasy #15 was submitted to us as a CGC 6.0.



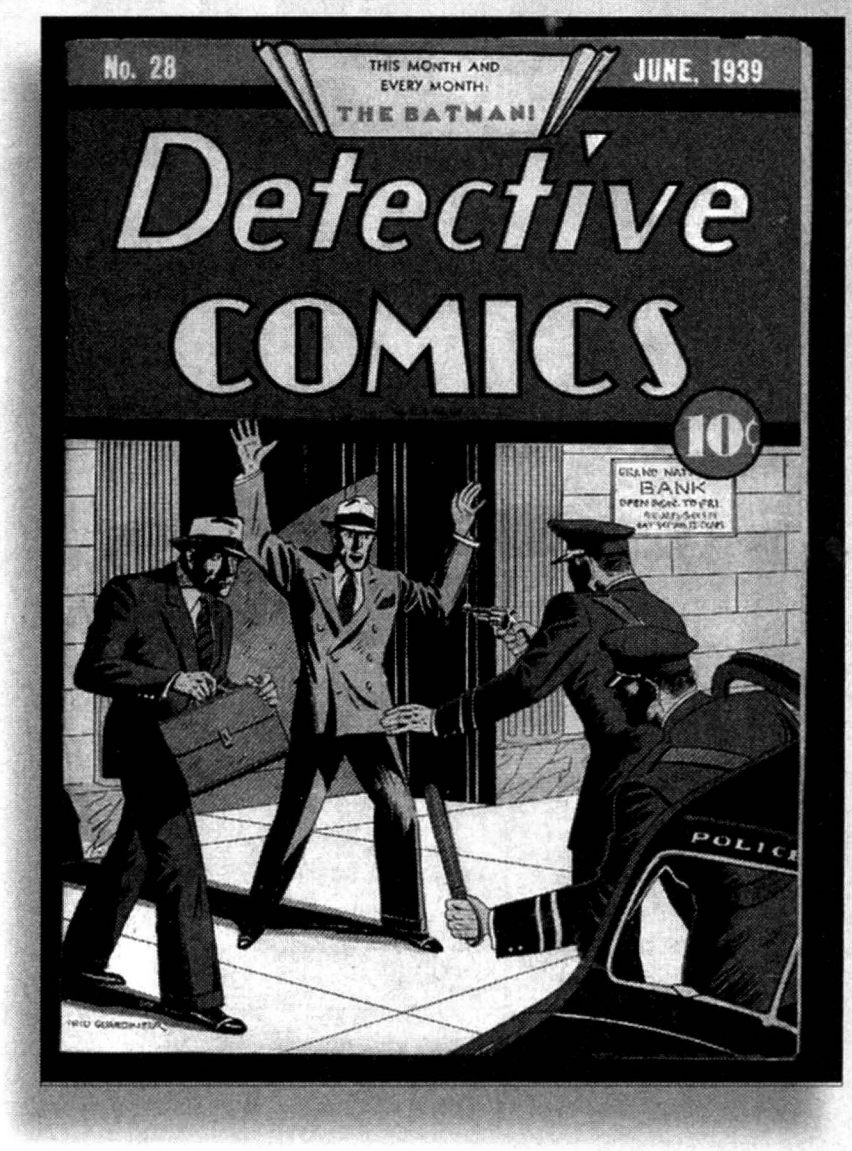
After our expert pressing and resubmission to CGC, the book received an unrestored grade of CGC 7.5 and a value increase of $25,000.

Pressing is the most radical concept to emerge in the comic book market since CGC. Matt Nelson, owner of Classics Incorporated, offers the most effective, safe pressing in the industry--and the most trusted eye for any comic book in any grade. He has viewed over 100,000 vintage comic books the past decade, including many of the most valuable and scarce comics in the world. No one else can offer a more complete knowledge of a book's grade, value and demand in the marketplace.

Be weary of others who offer to press comics; they usually don't maximize your books' grades, or worse, damage occurs from improper pressing. There are countless kinds of comics and possible defects, so there is no simple way to press a book. You must consider the company who has invested the most research and development into a process that accounts for all variables.



Our proscreen service is just as vital, which determines if your comic should even be pressed in the first place. We achieve the most successful upgrades in the industry thanks to our deadly accurate proscreens. In fact, most other pressers don't offer a proscreen service, leaving you to take your own chances. As critical as pressing is for your collection's value, it's just as critical to determine when not to press your books so you avoid wasted fees, downgrades, or even damage.



Visit our website for more information on pressing. We do on-site proscreens at the major shows each year, including San Diego, Chicago and New York, and offer guaranteed turn times and discounts for bulk submissions. Our reputation speaks for itself. Ask anybody!

COMIC BOOK RESTORATION AT ITS FINEST.

Before Restoration

After Restoration

We're proud to offer a revolutionary process in comic book restoration called leafcasting, which has dramatically improved the appearance of comics we restore. Prior to 2008 the traditional method of piece replacement to covers and interior pages involved a painstaking process by hand. Leafcasting accomplishes all of this in one step, creating a seamless fill that matches thickness and flexibility.

Our color touch methods have also evolved, which, in hand with leafcasting, has created stunning results, higher grades and value. This means the field of candidacy has now broadened. But the most important question still remains…is your comic book worth restoring? The answer to this question involves finding a balance between value, cost and preservation.

When we proscreen your comic book for restoration, our expert eye evaluates the book's integrity, and then compares its potential value against various scenarios of restoration to determine what best works to achieve your goal. Be assured that we will give you an honest appraisal of your comic's restoration potential, even if it means suggesting that nothing be done to your comic book.

Visit our website classicsincorporated.com for detailed information regarding our restoration service, including a number of before/after examples. You'll also find a valuable tool that allows you to enter pertinent information about your comic book to determine if it's worth restoring.

CGC

The Industry's Choice!

"CGC has enabled buyers of high-grade comics to become 'confident buyers' despite the baying of some nay-sayers; CGC has adhered to the very high standards of our hobby. The CGC staff have always dealt with me courteously, and professionally."

Gary Dolgoff • Overstreet Advisor

"I'm slab-happy over your superlative service."

Michelle Nolan • Overstreet Advisor

"We no longer have to worry about buying undisclosed damaged goods. It is easy to see the results of risk free CGC transactions. I would never sell a high grade book without having it certified by CGC first!"

John Hauser • Overstreet Advisor

"From the consistent grading and restoration detection for books submitted, to the friendly customer service, you have changed the landscape of the comic book hobby to heights we never would have achieved without your service. I can safely say that I exclusively buy and sell only CGC certified books."

Robert Roter • Overstreet Advisor
Pacific Comic Exchange

"I can tell you the grading is accurate and the holder is an excellent product. There is no doubt that CGC is the future of comic book collecting."

Jef Hinds • Overstreet Advisor

"CGC is an ever growing presence in the comic collecting hobby/industry. For a 4 year old third party grading service to have gained so much influence and respect in the comic community, one must only look to its top quality grading and unbeatable customer service to see why!"

Carl De La Cruz • Overstreet Advisor
Darthdiesel Comics & Collectibles

"Just a quick note to tell you how much I like the service so far. For the most part, the difference was no more than a half grade between us. This was what I was looking for from your service. Keep up the good work and stay on track."

Rob Rogovin • Overstreet Advisor
Four-Color Comics

"CGC has vastly improved my turnover time on sales of quality comics from all ages: Golden Age to Modern. Not only do books sell faster, they often sell for more! That translates into increased profits and I love it. I give CGC my highest recommendation."

Chris Foss • Overstreet Advisor
Heroes and Dragons

"The level of grading consistency and integrity that CGC has brought to our hobby has reinforced my confidence in the fact that comic books are among the best investments anywhere – better than stocks, better than bonds, on par with real estate. I am proud to say that ComicLink clients have learned that firsthand."

Josh Nathanson • Overstreet Advisor
ComicLink

"CGC has been an incredible asset to the comic community with their restoration check and help in identifying pedigree books. Finding out if a book has been restored or is truly a pedigree copy has been solved!"

Tom Gordon • Overstreet Advisor
comicspriceguide.com

"CGC is the only way to go to get maximum dollars for high-grade books. Their support services are backed by friendly, responsive and professional people who know how to get the job done."

Dan Greenhalgh • Overstreet Advisor
Showcase New England

"The level of accuracy, consistency, professionalism and beauty of the end product at CGC has revolutionized, energized and stabilized this hobby, lifting it to a height that would have otherwise been impossible."

Mark Wilson • Overstreet Advisor
PGC Mint

"CGC has always been both professional and extremely helpful when I deal with them. From their inception when Sotheby's first helped premiere their service with our live auction in 1999, to the present time. They have changed the market place in the arena of both live and Internet auctions. They have given the collecting community something that never existed before – the knowledge that a book being bid upon is the grade described and cannot be tampered with. This simple fact has given the market a stability that it never had before, and we are all receiving the benefits!"

Jerry Weist • Senior Overstreet Advisor

"The CGC gang did an outstanding job in grading our Lost Valley Collection. We could not have been happier with the service we received. Getting the rarest and best graded comics in this comic collection professionally graded was THE smartest thing we did all year."

Al Stoltz • Overstreet Advisor
Basement Comics

"We are amazed at the prices our CGC comic books are realizing on eBay."

Stephen Fishler • Overstreet Advisor
Metropolis Collectibles

"CGC has rewritten the rule book for the comic book industry. With its professional grading standards, there are no more 'mystery' grades and disappointed comic book buyers. Its census report provides an accurate and current picture of what's rare and what's not, which is an invaluable tool for both buyer and seller alike. All things considered, no major player in comics can ignore CGC and expect to be successful!"

Dave Anderson • Overstreet Advisor
Want List Comics

"CGC has now set the industry standard."

Bob Storms • Highgradecomics.com

"CGC has created an unsurpassed consumer confidence in comics. It's much easier to sell CGC graded books online and by mail order."

Rob Hughes • Overstreet Advisor

"I now know that a CGC certified book can command a much higher price than a non-graded book in equal condition."

Terry O'Neil • Overstreet Advisor
Terry's Comics

"When buying a valuable collectible, one always wants to feel confident that he/she is receiving what they are paying for. CGC provides that. All Star Auctions has always provided its clients the finest in comic collectibles and CGC supports that."

Joe & Nadia Mannarino • Overstreet Advisors
All Star Auctions

"CGC is the best thing that has happened to comics since Bob Overstreet put out his first price guide."

Steve Lauterbach • Investmentcollectibles.com

"The CGC guys are great. They are changing the landscape of collecting."

David T. Alexander • Overstreet Advisor

"The hobby has been rejuvenated! The credit goes to CGC."

John Chruscinski • Overstreet Advisor

HERITAGE AUCTIONS IS PROUD TO HAVE STEVE BOROCK ON OUR TEAM!

Steve Borock is one of the best-known and most respected figures in the vintage comics hobby. His expertise has further cemented Heritage's status as by far the leading auctioneer for vintage comics and original comic art. During his long tenure as President of CGC, Steve had the final word on every grade that CGC assigned. His reputation for fairness, honesty and impartiality was a key component in CGC's acceptance among the community of collectors and dealers.

"Steve is a true comics fan and has been a great statesman for our hobby. CGC would not be where it is today without him!"
Mark Haspel, CGC President and Primary Grader

"I wouldn't have joined Heritage unless I truly believed it's the very BEST place for collectors to get top dollar for their comic collections," Steve says. Protecting collectors and sellers alike has been my primary focus for over two decades, and I am now doing the same for all who consign their comic books and original comic art to Heritage."

Steve can be reached at SteveB@HA.com or 1-800-872-6467, ext. 1337.

The goal of Comic Art Appraisal LLC is to establish The Comic Art Appraisal Rating which identifies the key factors that affect value in the narrative and illustration art market through a 100 point standard. Not to be confused with a price guide, this evaluation service provides a numerical rating for examples of original art while establishing authenticity and proof of ownership.

Collectors, dealers, enthusiasts as well as institutions can authenticate, document and ascertain the relative factors that determine the value of narrative and illustration art. A security laden, Comic Art Appraisal Rating Certificate is issued with each rating.

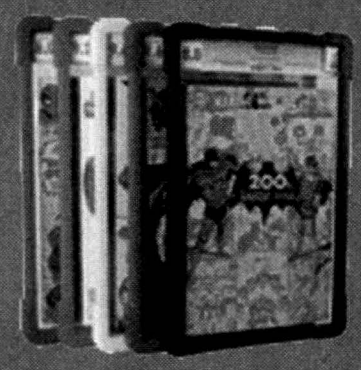
SLAB-PRO

PROTECTING AND ENHANCING YOUR GRADED COMIC BOOKS

DESIGN

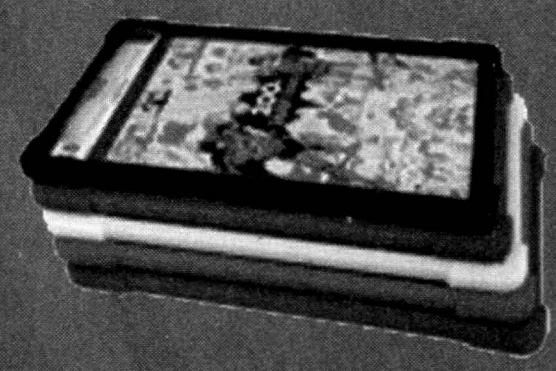
Slab-Pro is a silicone rubber that provides security around your comic book case with dense rubber on the four corners for added protection. They easily slip on and off and give a more comfortable feel when handling your books. You can personalize your comic to go with the colors in the cover or to organize by grade.

The unique design of Slab-Pro enhances your comic books. The rubber silicone borders your comic book case so it does not cover or divert attention from the comic or grading label.



PROTECTION

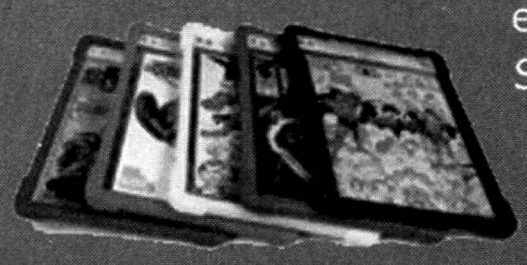
This custom mold is designed to protect the border of the comic book case. The impact from a drop may not only cause damage to the case, but also to the comic, therefore, the value and grade can decrease significantly. Consider this a shelter, which is intended to protect your comic book from exterior damage, such as cracks and falls. Since cases can get easily damaged, having Slab-Pro can help avoid this from occurring.



DISPLAYING

Collectors enjoy showcasing their collections whether it's their most valuable book or their favorite superhero. The rubber silicone band has added grip to prevent slipping and falling off shelves or display cases. Aside from the protection, it gives your comic a new sleek look and intensifies the colors of your comic book.

STACKING & SHIPPING



Comic books are frequently stacked during shipping or when carried. Stacking puts too much strain and resistance on the comic cases. Slab-Pro has additional silicone rubber support on the back to relieve pressure and assist in separating the cases when stacked to prevent common damage.

If your comics are not securely packaged, a little movement or bang can result in a damaged case. Slab-Pro will ensure safer shipping.

CATEGORIZE

Slab-Pro is offered in blue, purple, yellow and green which coincide with the colors of the grading labels, making it easier to classify by grade. Standard black is also available.

JOHN VERZYL AND DAUGHTER ROSE, "HARD AT WORK."

John Verzyl started collecting comic books in 1965, and within ten years he had amassed thousands of Golden and Silver Age comic books. In 1979, with his wife Nanette, he opened "COMIC HEAVEN," a retail store devoted entirely to the buying and selling of comic books.

Over the years, John Verzyl has come to be recognized as an authority in the field of comic books. He has served as a special advisor to the "Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide" for the last 25 years. Thousands of his "mint" comics were photographed for Ernst Gerber's "Photo-Journal Guide to Comic Books." His tables and displays at the annual San Diego Comic Convention and the Chicago Comic Convention draw customers from all over the country.

The first COMIC HEAVEN AUCTION was held in 1987, and today his Auction Catalogs are mailed out to more than ten thousand interested collectors and dealers.

BIG LITTLE BOOKS

INTRODUCTION

In 1932, at the depths of the Great Depression, comic books were not selling despite their successes in the previous two decades. Desperate publishers had already reduced prices to 25¢, but this was still too much for many people to spend on entertainment.

Comic books quickly evolved into two newer formats, the comics magazine and the Big Little Book. Both types retailed for 10¢.

Big Little Books began by reprinting the art (and adapting the stories) from newspaper comics. As their success grew and publishers began commissioning original material, movie adaptations and other entertainment-derived stories became commonplace.

GRADING

Before a Big Little Book's value can be assessed, its condition or state of preservation must be determined. A book in Near Mint condition will bring many times the price of the same book in Poor condition. Many variables influence the grading of a Big Little Book and all must be considered in the final evaluation. Due to the way they are constructed, damage occurs with very little use - usually to the spine, book edges and binding. More important defects that affect grading are: Split spines, pages missing, page browning or brittleness, writing, crayoning, loose pages, color fading, chunks missing, and rolling or out of square. The following grading guide is given to aid the novice:

9.4 Near Mint: The overall look is as if it was just purchased and maybe opened once; only subtle defects are allowed; paper is cream to off-white, supple and fresh; cover is flat with no surface wear or creases; inks and colors are bright; small penciled or inked arrival dates are acceptable; very slight blunting of corners at top and bottom of spine are common; outside corners are cut square and sharp. Books in this grade could bring prices of guide and a half or more.

9.0 Very Fine/Near Mint: Limited number of defects; full cover gloss with only very slight wear on book corners and edges; very minor foxing; very minor tears allowed, binding still square and tight with no pages missing; paper quality still fresh from cream to off-white. Dates, stamps or initials allowed on cover or inside.

8.0 Very Fine: Most of the cover gloss retained with minor wear appearing at corners and around edges; spine tight with no pages missing; cream/tan paper allowed if still supple; up to 1/4" bend allowed on covers with no color break; cover relatively flat; minor tears allowed.

6.0 Fine: Slight wear beginning to show; cover gloss reduced but still clean, pages tan/brown but still supple (not brittle); up to 1/4" split or color break allowed; minor discoloration and/or foxing allowed.

4.0 Very Good: Obviously a read copy with original printing luster almost gone; some fading and discoloration, but not soiled; some signs of wear such as corner splits and spine rolling; paper can be brown but not brittle; a few pages can be loose but not missing; no chunks missing; blunted corners acceptable.

2.0 Good: An average used copy complete with only minor pieces missing from the spine, which may be partially split; slightly soiled or marked with spine rolling; color flaking and wear around edges, but perfectly sound and legible; could have minor tape repairs but otherwise complete.

1.0 Fair: Very heavily read and soiled with small chunks missing from cover; most or all of spine could be missing; multiple splits in spine and loose pages, but still sound and legible, bringing 50 to 70 percent of good price.

0.5 Poor: Damaged, heavily weathered, soiled or otherwise unsuited for collecting purposes.

IMPORTANT

Most BLBs on the market today will fall in the Good to Fine grade category. When Very Fine to Near Mint BLBs are offered for sale, they usually bring premium prices.

A WORD ON PRICING

The prices are given for Good, Fine and Very Fine/Near Mint condition. A book in Fair would be 50-70% of the Good price. Very Good would be halfway between the Good and Fine price, and Very Fine would be halfway between the Fine and Very Fine/

Near Mint price. The prices listed were averaged from convention sales, dealers' lists, adzines, auctions, and by special contact with dealers and collectors from coast to coast. The prices and the spreads were determined from sales of copies in available condition or the highest grade known. Since most available copies are in the Good to Fine range, neither dealers nor collectors should let the Very Fine/Near Mint column influence the prices they are willing to charge or pay for books in less than near perfect condition.

The prices listed reflect a six times spread from Good to Very Fine/ Near Mint (1 - 3 - 6). We feel this spread accurately reflects the current market, especially when you consider the scarcity of books in Very Fine/Near Mint condition. When one or both end sheets are missing, the book's value would drop about a half grade.

Books with movie scenes are of double importance due to the high crossover demand by movie collectors.

PROMOTIONAL COMICS

THE MARKETING OF A MEDIUM

by Dr. Arnold T. Blumberg, DCD

with new material and additional research by Sol M. Davidson, PhD, and Robert L. Beerbohm

Everyone wants something for free. It's in our nature to look for the quick fix, the good deal, the complimentary gift. We long to hit the lottery and quit our job, to win the trip around the world, or find that pot of gold at the end of the proverbial rainbow. Collectors in particular are certainly built to appreciate the notion of the "free gift," since it not only means a new item to collect and enjoy, but no risk or obligation in order to acquire it.

Ah, but there's the rub. Because things are not always what they seem, and "free gifts" usually come with a price. As the saying goes, "there's no such thing as a free lunch," so if it seems too good to be true, it probably is. This is the case even in the world of comics, where premiums and giveaways have a familiar agenda hidden behind the bright colors and fanciful stories. But where did it all begin?

Some of the earliest characters that were used as successful tools in promotional comics were Palmer Cox's creation "The Brownies." The illustration shown here showcases them drinking and endorsing Seal Brand Coffee.

EXTRA EXTRA

As we learn more about the early history of the comic book industry through continual investigation and the publishing of articles like those regularly featured in this book, we gain a much greater understanding of the financial and creative forces at work in shaping the medium, but perhaps one of the most intriguing and least recognized factors that influenced the dawn of comics is the concept of the premium or giveaway. (Note: Some of the historical information referenced in this article is derived from material also presented in Robert L. Beerbohm's introductory articles to the Platinum Age and Modern Age sections.)

The birth of the comic book as we know it today is intimately connected with the development of the comic strip in American newspapers and their use as an advertising and marketing tool for staple products such as bread, milk, and cereal. From the very beginning, comic characters have played several roles in pop culture, entertaining the youth of the country while also (sometimes none too subtly) acting as hucksters for whatever corporation foots the bill. From important staples to frivolous material produced simply to make a buck, these products have utilized the comics medium to sell, sell, sell. And what better way to hook a prospective customer than to give them "something for nothing?"

Starting in the 1850s, comics were being used in free almanacs such as Elton's, Hostetter's and Wright's to lure readers for the little booklets to sell patent medicine, farm products, tobacco, shoe polish, etc. Most of these are exceedingly rare today, hence it is difficult to compile an accurate history. More mention of these early precursors can be found in the Victorian Comics Era essay following this one. But although comic characters themselves were already being aggressively merchandised all around the world by the mid-1890s--as with, for example, Palmer Cox's The Brownies--the real starting point for the success of comics as a giveaway marketing mechanism can be traced to the introduction of The Yellow Kid, Richard Outcault's now legendary newspaper strip.

Newspaper publishers had already recognized that comic strips could boost circulation as well as please sponsors and advertisers by drawing more eyes to the page, so Sunday "supplements" were introduced to entice fans. Outcault's creation cemented the theory with proof of comic characters' marketing and merchandising power.

This unused cover was designed as the second cover for "Motion Picture Funnies Weekly." While the concept for this promotional comic title never caught on, the inaugural issue did feature the origin and first printed appearance of the Sub-Mariner.

Soon after, Outcault (who had most likely been inspired by Cox's merchandising success with The Brownies in the first place) caught lightning in a bottle once more with Buster Brown, who has the distinction of being America's first nationally licensed comic strip character. Soon, comic strips proliferated throughout the nation's newspapers as tycoons like Hearst and Pulitzer recognized the drawing power of the new medium and fought circulation wars to capture the pennies of the nouveau readership. They paid exorbitant salaries to comic strip artists such as Rudolph Dirks (Katzenjammer Kids), and used the funnies as newspaper supplements and as premiums to attract readers. Corporations soon had the chance to license recognizable personas as their own personal pitchmen (or women or animals...). Comic character merchandise wasn't far behind, resulting in a boom of future collectibles now catalogued in volumes like Hake's Price Guide to Character Toys.

TWO BIRTHS FOR THE PRICE OF ONE

Comic books themselves were at the heart of this movement, and giveaway and premium collections of comic strips not only appealed to children and adults alike, but provided the impetus for the birth of the modern comic book format itself. It could be said that without the concept of the giveaway comic or the marketing push behind it, there would be no comic book industry as we have it today. Well-known now is the story of how in spring 1933 Harry Wildenberg of Eastern Color Printing Company convinced Proctor & Gamble to sponsor the first modern comic book, Funnies on Parade, as a premium. Its success led to the first continuing comic book, Famous Funnies, and the rest, as they say, is history.

In 1935, while working on the printing presses of Eastern Color developing how modern comic books get printed, Juliun J. Proskauer came up with an idea for printing "Comic-Books-For-Industry." In July 1936 he made his first sale through his newly formed William C. Popper & Co. to David M. Davies, then advertising manager for Seagram's Distillers Corp. for three million copies of Seagram's Merrymakers in time for the 1936-37 Christmas season. "Thus was a new industry born," wrote Printing News in August 1945.

Even a casual perusal of the listings in this section of the Guide will dazzle the reader with the endless variety of purposes that this medium has served. Yes, promos have been used to hawk products from athletic equipment to zithers and zip codes, but comics are too versatile an art form to be confined to a few uses. They've swayed elections in cities (The O'Dwyer Story, 1949), in states (Giant for a Day: Jacob Javits, 1946) and nationwide (The Story of Harry Truman, 1948); solicited for charities (Donald Duck and the Red Feather, 1948); addressed health issues (Blondie, 1949, mental hygiene); discouraged kids from smoking (Captain America Meets the Asthma Monster, 1987); coached youngsters in sports skills (Circling the Bases, 1947, A.G. Spaulding); explained scientific complexities (Adventures in Science, 1946-61, GE); pleaded for social justice (Consumer Comics, 1975); espoused religious causes (Oral Roberts' True Stories, 1950s); protected the environment (Our Spaceship Earth, 1947); encouraged tourism (Wyoming, The Cowboy State, 1954); conveyed a sense of history (Louisiana Purchase, 1953); taught about computers (Superman Radio Shack Giveaway, 1980); trained employees (Dial Finance Dialogues, 1961-70) and executives (Beneficial Finance System, Managing New Employees, 1950s); cautioned safety (Willy Wing Flap, 1944(?)); announced corporate annual results (Motorola Annual Report, 1952); defended free enterprise (Steve Merritt, 1949); hammered communism (How Stalin Hopes to Destroy America, 1951); fought discrimination (Mammy Yokum & the Great Dogpatch Mystery, 1956, B'nai Brith); aided young workers in job-hunting (The Job Scene, 1969); battled the scourge of sickle cell anemia (Where's Herbie, 1972, U.S. H.E.W.); inspired the overcoming of adversity (Al Capp by Li'l Abner, 1946); fostered reading (Linus Gets a Library Card, 1960); recruited for the armed forces (Li'l Abner Joins the Navy, 1950); beguiled readers into learning languages (Blondie, 1949, Philadelphia public schools); and even instructed in such delicate matters as birth control (Escape from Fear, 1950 (revised 1959, etc.), for Planned Parenthood).

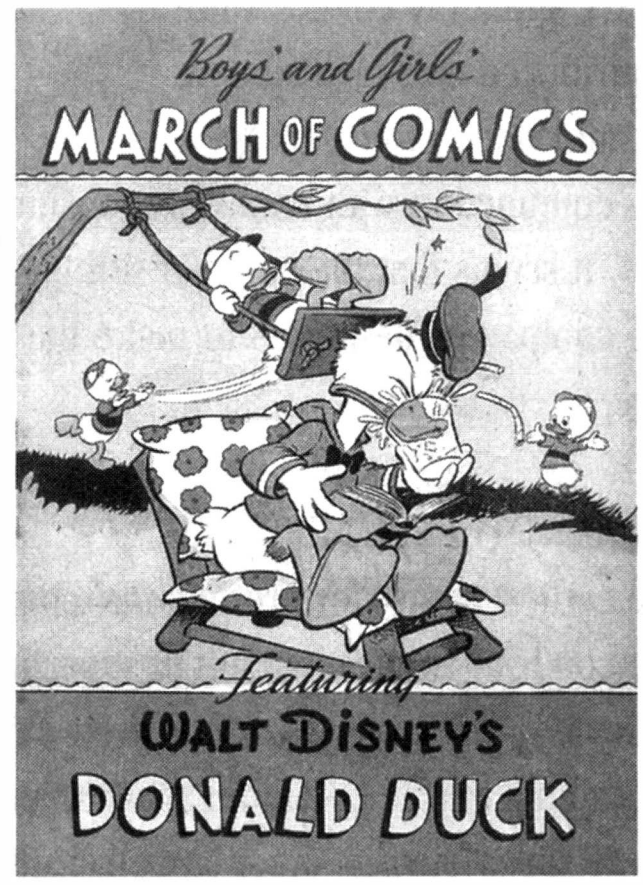
READ ALL ABOUT IT

The impact of this new approach to advertising was not lost on the business world. Contrary to modern belief, comic books were hardly discounted by the adults of the time...at least not those who had the marketing savvy to recognize an opportunity - or a threat - when they saw one. In the April 1933 issue of Fortune magazine, an article titled "The Funny Papers" trumpeted the arrival of comics as a force to be reckoned with in the world of advertising and business, and what's more, a force to fear as well. At first providing a brief survey of the newspaper comic strip business (which for many of the magazine's readers must have seemed a foreign topic for serious discussion), the article goes on to examine the incredible financial draw of comics and their characters:

"Between 70 and 75 per cent {sic} of the readers of any newspaper follow its comic sections regularly...Even the advertiser has succumbed to the comic, and in 1932 spent well over $1,000,000 for comic-paper space."

"Comic Weekly is the comic section of seventeen Hearst Sunday papers...Advertisers who market their wares through balloon-speaking manikins {sic} may enjoy the proximity of Jiggs, Maggie, Barney Google, and other funny Hearst headliners."



Although the article continues to cast the notion of relying on comic strip material to sell product in a negative light, actually suggesting that advertisers who utilize comics are violating unspoken rules of "advertising decorum" and bringing themselves "down to the level" of comics (and since when have advertisers been stalwart preservers of good taste and high moral standards), there is no doubt that they are viewing comics in a new light. The comic characters have arrived by 1933...and they're ready to help sell your merchandise too.

Fortune wasn't the only one to take notice as World War II came and went. In 1948, Louis P. Birk, the head of Brevity, Inc., an important promotional comics publisher said, "Comics are serious business." In an article in Printers' Ink magazine, he estimated that more than 80 different "comic booklets" had been produced and more than 45,000,000 million copies distributed in the five years before 1948. But of course, comics were serious business long before businessman/historian Birk noted the fact for posterity.

THE MARCH OF WAR AND BEYOND

Through the relentless currents of time, comic strips, books, and the characters that starred in them became more and more an intrinsic part of American culture. During the turmoil of the Great Depression and World War II, comic characters in print and celluloid form entertained while informing and selling at the same time, and premium and giveaway comics came well and truly into their own, pushing everything from loaves of bread to war bonds.

In the 1950s and '60s, there was a shift in focus as the power of giveaway and premium comics was applied to more altruistic endeavors than simply selling something. Comic book format pamphlets, fully illustrated and often inventively written, taught children about banking, money, the dangers of poison and other household products, and even chronicled moments in

The promotional title "March of Comics" was a prolific comic that ran for 36 years and 488 issues featuring a variety of subjects and characters. (#20 shown)

American history. The comic book as giveaway was now not only a marketing gimmick--it was a tool for educating as well.

The 1970s and '80s saw another boom in premium and giveaway comics. Every product imaginable seemed to have a licensing deal with a comic book character, usually one of the prominent flag bearers of the Big Two, Marvel or DC. Spider-Man fought bravely against the Beetle for the benefit of All Detergent; Captain America allied himself with the Campbell Kids; and Superman helped a class of computer students beat a disaster-conjuring foe at his own game with the help of Radio Shack Tandy computers.

Newspapers rediscovered the power of comics, not just with enlarged strip supplements but with actual comic books. Spider-Man, the Hulk, and others turned up as giveaway comic extras in various American newspapers (including Chicago and Dallas publications), while a whole series of public information comics like those produced decades earlier used superheroes to caution children about the dangers of smoking, drugs, and child abuse.

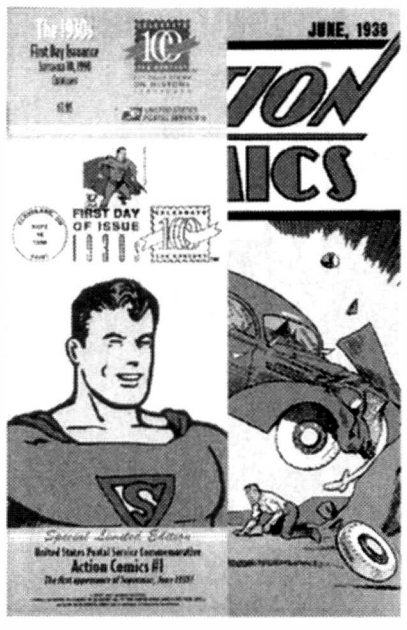
Comics also turned up in a plethora of other toy products as the 1980s introduced kids to the joy of electronic games and action figures. Supplementary comics provided "free" with action figure and video game packages told the backstory about the product, adding depth to the play experience while providing an extra incentive to buy. Comics became an intrinsic part of the Atari line of video cartridges, for example, eventually spawning its own full-blown newsstand series as well.

As the twentieth century gave way to the twenty-first, giveaway comics were still being produced for inclusion in action figure and video game packages, as well as in conjunction with countless consumer items and corporations. It seems that the medium still has a lot to offer for all those companies desperate to make the most of their market share.

Today, promotional comics continue to be used as a marketing tool to reach both children and adults alike. This 2005 comic was produced by Marvel Comics as a salute to the men and women of the armed forces.

A COMIC BY ANY OTHER NAME

One of the earliest names for promotional comics was "special purpose comics." In their pursuit of superheroes, collectors have allowed promotional comics to lie fallow - underappreciated and uncollected. Without a legitimate name, these products were given sundry other appellations - industrial comics, promos, giveaways, premiums, promics - each accurate but only for a small segment of the unorganized but lusty and lively medium. Perhaps no one name can cover all the variations and purposes of this branch of comic art, but for practical reasons if we accept the general premise that these comics were created to promote an idea, a product or a person, then "Promotional Comics" is probably as convenient a catch-all title as we can come up with.



We used the phrase "for practical reasons" because the word "practical" goes to the heart of promotional comics more than it does for any other comics product. What greater testimony is there to the medium's impact on American culture than to note their use by hard-headed, profit-minded business people and corporations? They invest their money and they expect results.

Today, premium comics continue to thrive and are still utilized as a valuable marketing and promotional tool. "Free" comics are still packaged with action figures and video games, and offered as mail-away premiums from a variety of product manufacturers. The comic industry itself has expanded its use of giveaway comics to self-promote as well, with "ashcan" and other giveaway editions turning up at conventions and comic shops to advertise upcoming series and special events. Many of these function as old-fashioned premiums, with a coupon or other response required from the reader to receive the comic.

As for the supplements and giveaways printed all those years ago, they have spawned a collectible fervor all their own, thanks to their atypical distribution and frequent rarity. For that and the desire to delve deeper into comics history, we hope that by focusing more directly on this genre, we can enhance our understanding of this vital component in the development and history of the modern comic book.

Whether you're a collector or not, we're all motivated by that desire to get something for nothing. For as long as consumers are enticed by the notion of the "free gift," promotional comics will remain a vital marketing component in many business models, but they will also continue to fight the stigma that has long been associated with the industry as a whole. "Respectable" sources like Fortune may have taken notice of the power of comic-related advertising 71 years ago, but after all this time comics still fight an uphill battle to establish some measure of dignity for the medium. Perhaps the higher visibility of promotional comics will eventually prove to be a deciding factor in that intellectual war.

See ya in the funny papers.

MOTION PICTURE FUNNIES WEEKLY (Amazing Man #5 on?)
First Funnies, Inc.: 1939 (Giveaway)(B&W, 36 pgs.) No month given; last panel in Sub-Mariner story dated 4/39 (Also see Colossus, Green Giant & Invaders No. 20)

1-Origin & 1st printed app. Sub-Mariner by Bill Everett (8 pgs.); Fred Schwab-c; reprinted in Marvel Mystery #1 with color added over the craft tint which was used to shade the black & white version; Spy Ring, American Ace (reprinted in Marvel Mystery #3) app. (Rare)-only eight known copies, one near mint with white pages, the rest with brown pages.

Covers only to #2-4 (set) 900

NOTE: Eight copies (plus one coverless) were discovered in 1974 in the estate of the deceased publisher. Covers only to issues No. 2-4 were also found which evidently were printed in advance along with #1. #1 was to be distributed only through motion picture movie houses. However, it is believed that only advanced copies were sent out and the motion picture houses not going for the idea. Possible distribution at local theaters in Boston suspected. The "pay" copy (graded at 9.0) was discovered after 1974, bringing the total known to nine. The last panel of Sub-Mariner contains a rectangular box with "Continued Next Week" printed in it. When reprinted in Marvel Mystery, the box was left in with lettering omitted.

Discovered with business papers, letters and exploitation material promoting Weekly Comic Magazine for use by newspapers in the same manner of The Spirit weeklies. Interesting note: these are dated three weeks before the first Spirit comic. Letters indicate that samples may have been sent to a few newspapers. These sections were actually 15-1/2x22" pages which will fold down to an approximate 8x10" comic booklet. Other various comic sections were found with the above, but were more like the Sunday comic sections in format.

THE PIONEER AGE

The American Comic Book: 1500s-1828

For the last few years, we have featured a tremendous article by noted historian and collector Eric C. Caren on the foundations of what we now call "The Pioneer Age" of comics. We look forward to a new article on this significant topic in The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide #42. In the meantime, should you need it, Caren's article may be found in the 35th through 39th editions.

That said, even with the space constraints in this edition of the Guide, we could not possibly exclude reference to these incredible, formative works.

The Murder of King Henry III (1589).

Quite frankly, because we can see in them the very building blocks of the comic art form.

The shooting of the Italian Concini (1617).

Over the course of just a few hundred years, we the evolution of narration, word balloons, panel-to-panel progression of story, and so much more. If these stories aren't developed first, how would be every have reached the point that that The Adventures of Mr. Obadiah Oldbuck could have come along in 1842?

As the investigation of comic book history has blown away the notion that comic books were a 20 century invention, it hasn't been easy to convince some, even with the clear, linear progression of the artful melding of illustration and words.

"Want to avoid an argument in social discourse? Steer clear of politics and religion. In the latter category, the most controversial subject is human evolution. Collectors can become just as squeamish when you start messing with the evolution of a particular collectible," Eric Caren wrote in his article. "In most cases, the origin of a particular comic character will be universally agreed upon, but try tackling the origin of printed comics and you are asking for trouble."

"The Bubblers Medley" (1720).

"Join, or Die" from the Pennsylvania Gazette, May 9, 1754.

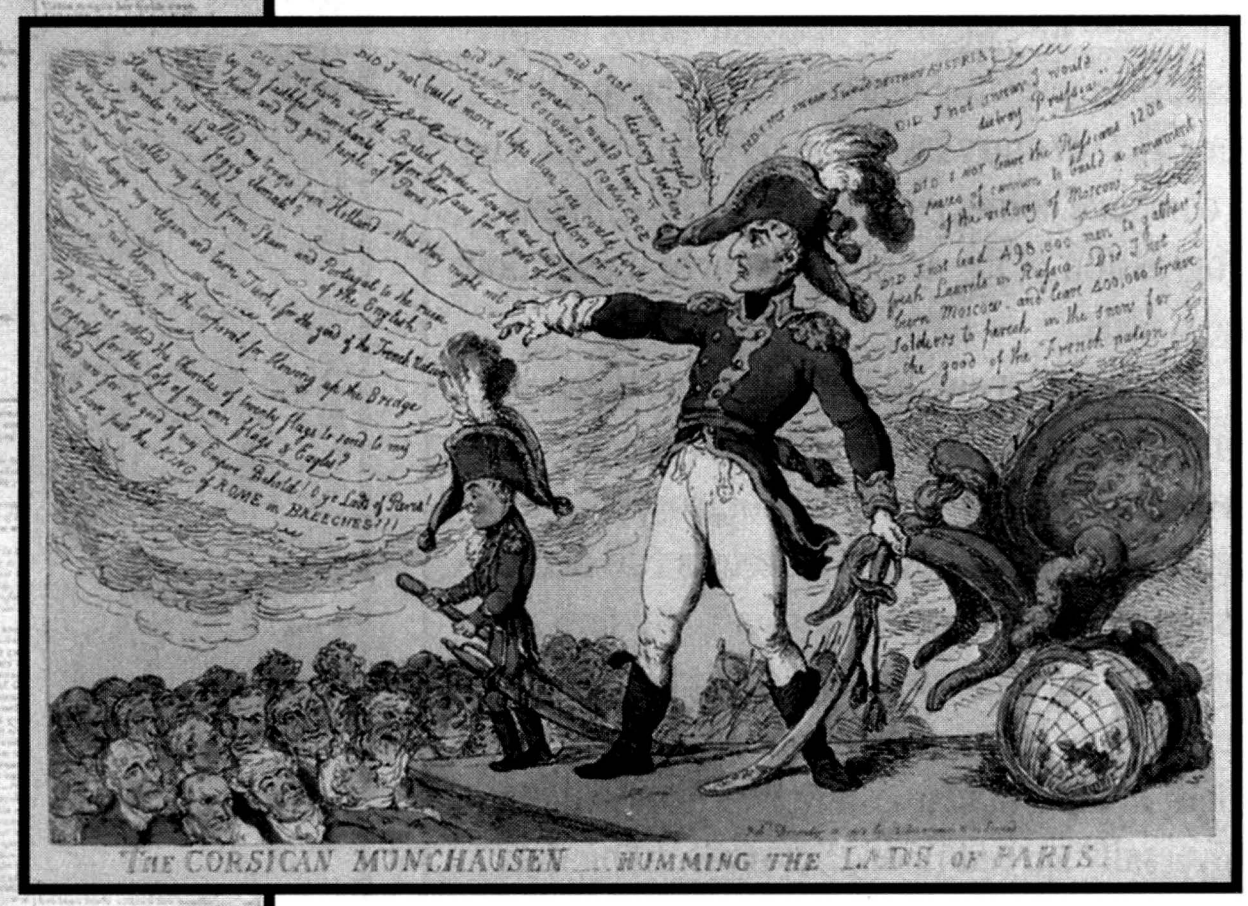
"Amusement for John Bull..." from
The European Magazine (1783).



But the evidence is there for any who choose to look. Before the original comics of the Golden Age, there were comic strip reprints collected in comic book form. The practice dated back decades earlier, of course, but coalesced into the current form when the realities of the Great Depression spawned the modern incarnation of the comic book and its immediate cousin, the Big Little Book.

Everything that came later, though, did so because the acceptance of the visual language had already been worked out. Before Spider-Man and the Hulk, before Superman and Batman, before the Yellow Kid, Little Nemo, and the Brownies, cartoonists and editorial illustrators were working out how to tell a story or simply convey their ideas in this new artform.

Without this sort of work, without these pioneers, we simply wouldn't be where we are today.

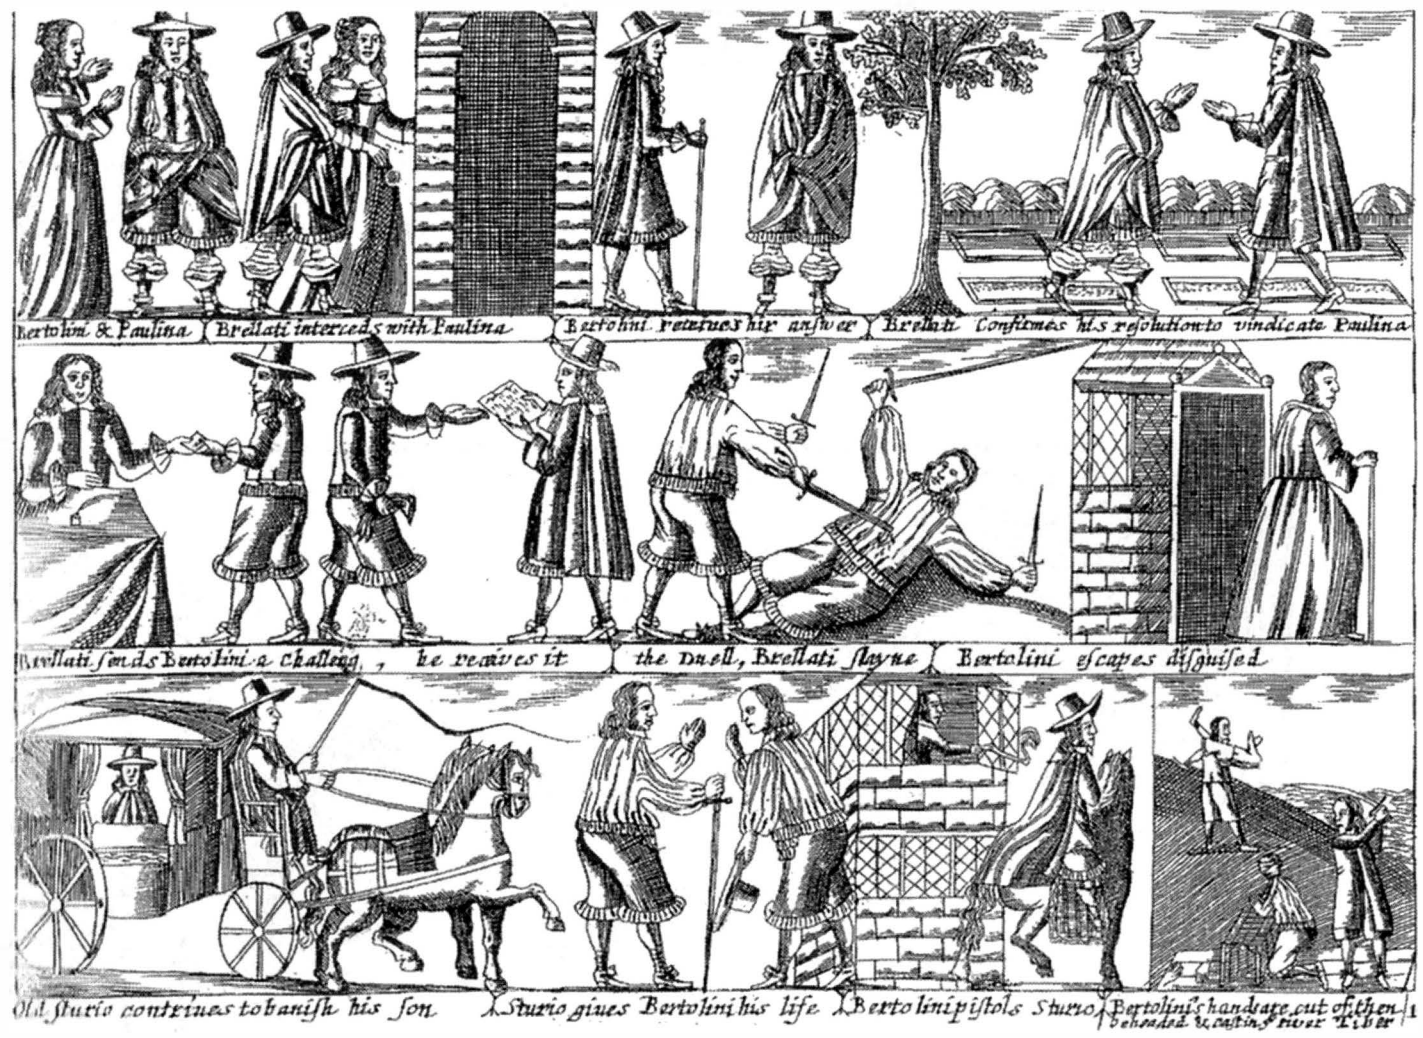
ORIGINS OF EARLY AMERICAN COMIC STRIPS BEFORE THE YELLOW KID



by Robert Lee Beerbohm, Richard Samuel West

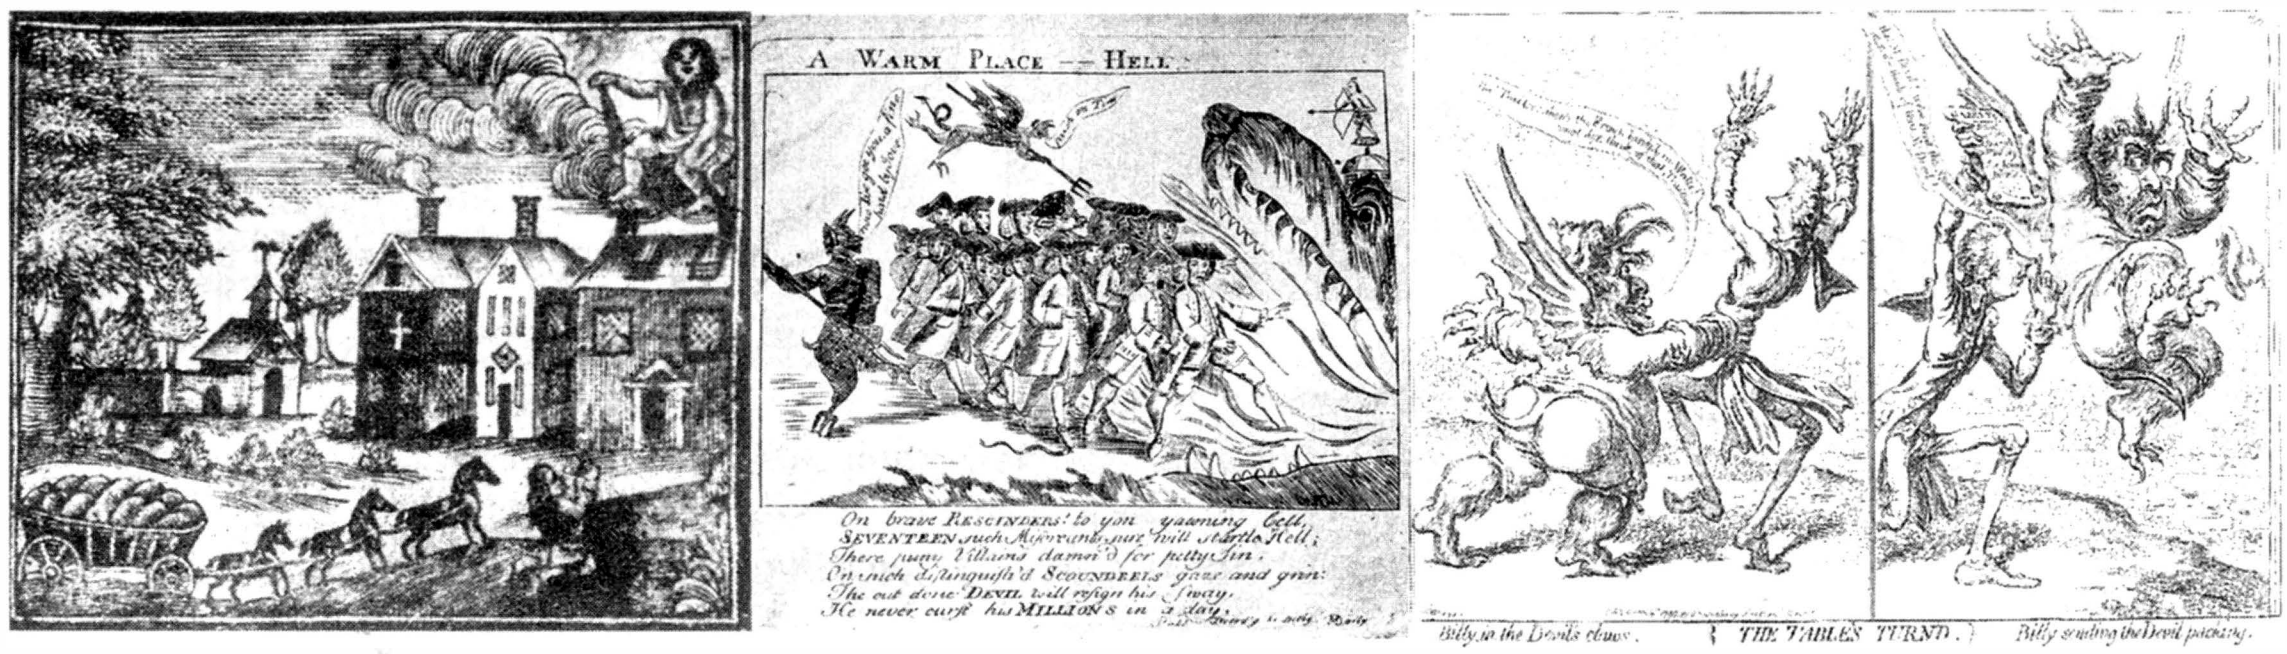
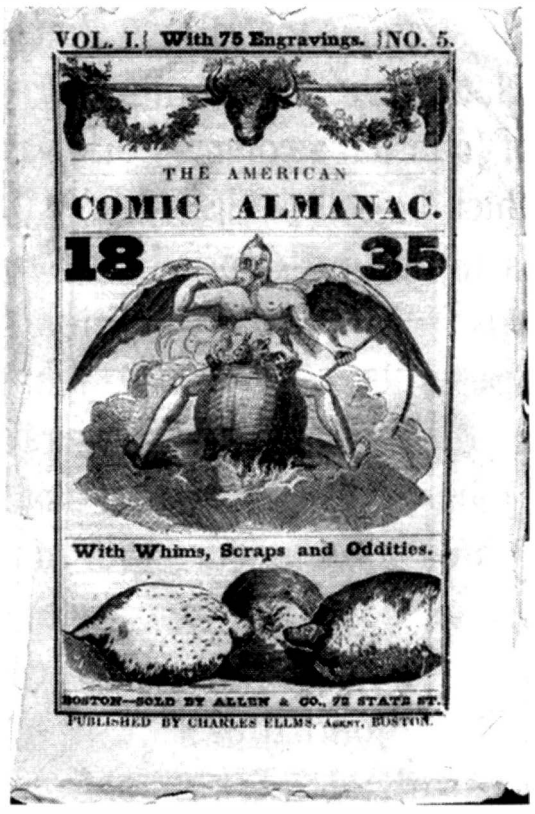
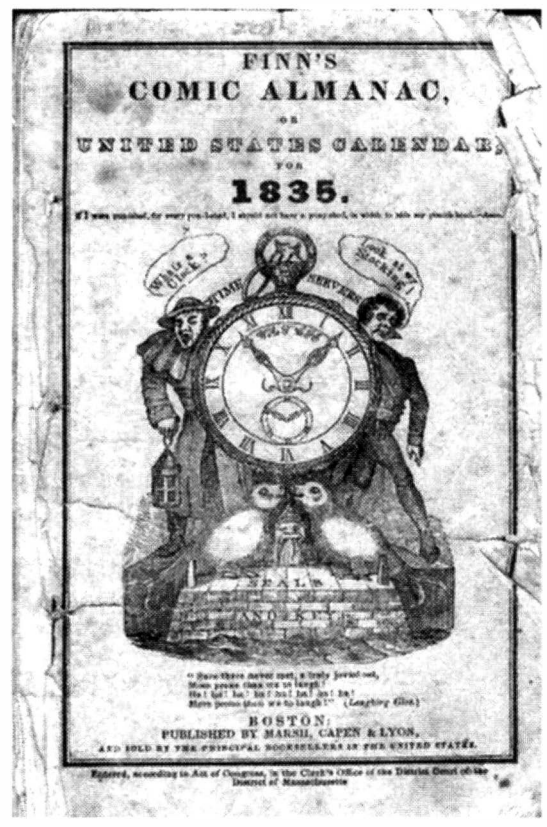
(This article was originally created by Doug Wheeler, Robert Beerbohm and Richard D. Olson, PhD for CBPG #32 and continues to be revised annually by the current authors.) We welcome any and all corrections and additions.

Special Thanks This Installment To Leonardo De Sa, Terrence Keegen, Gabriel Laderman and Joe Rainone.





Left: "The Burning of Mr. John Rogers," 1646 is the earliest-known North American cartoon printed on paper printed in the earliest children's primer in America.



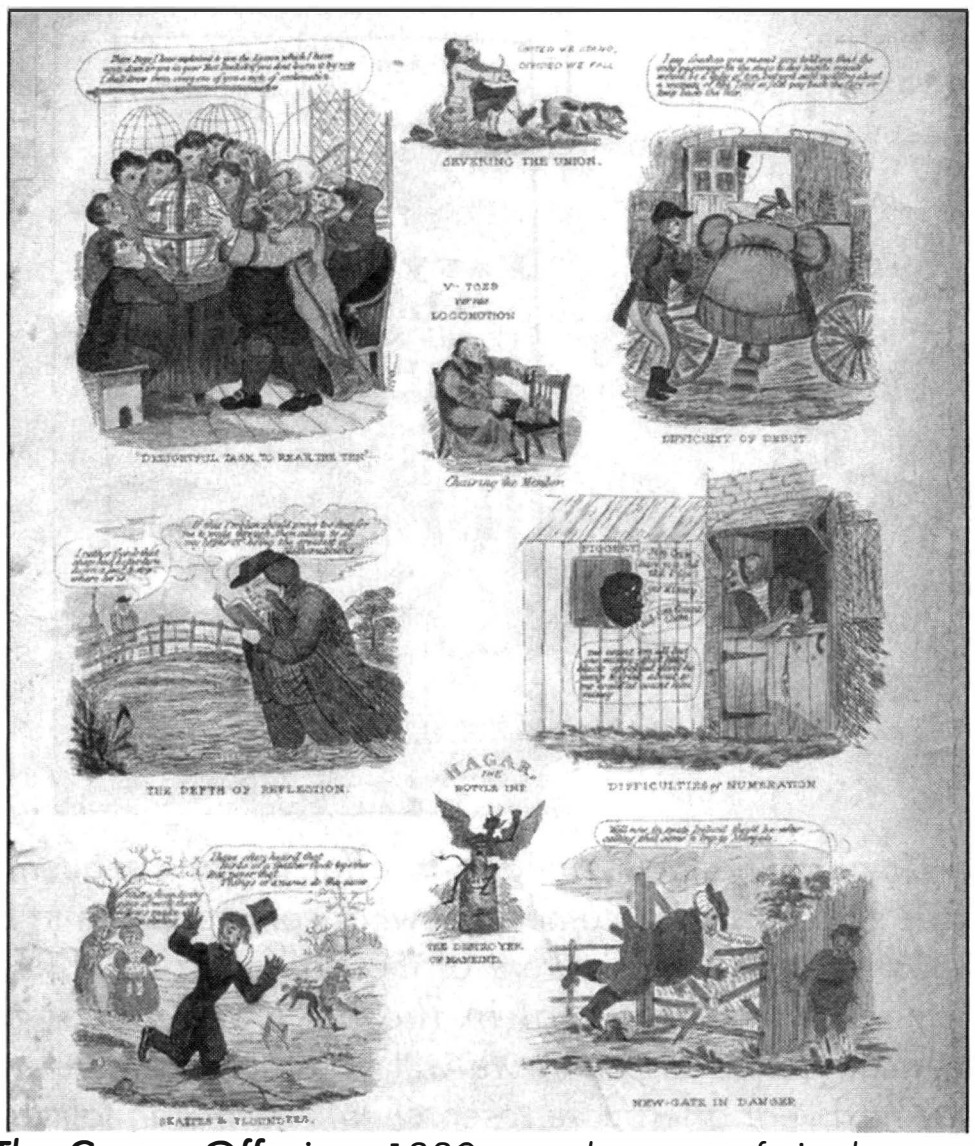
"God's Revenge For Murder" By John Reynolds, unknown artist, 1656. Earliest-known sequential comic "panel" strip created in the English language.

Left: From his pamphlet Plain Truth 1747 containing Ben Franklin's earliest-known cartoon titled "Heaven Helps Only Those Who Help Themselves" depicting ancient "super hero" Hercules in the upper right corner. Middle: "A Warm Place - Hell", one of two images definitely known to be drawn and engraved by Paul Revere, 1768. Word balloons had wide-spread usage in many cartoons in the 1700s. Right: The Tables Turned by James Gillray, 1797 com-menting on an "invasion" of England by 1400 French convicts. The use of word balloons was wide spread in many parts of the world long before the Yellow Kid's parrot uttered a few words in 1896.

The Comic Almanac(k) debuted in America in 1831 with the earliest-known titles starting heavy with humor and sporting crude woodcut single panel cartoons. Ellm's American Comic Almanac was one of the first. By 1835 Davy Crockett, one of the nation's earliest national folk heroes, began issuing his own version. In the late 1840s the Comic Almanac(k)s began to offer tall-tale sequential comic strips which became somewhat commonplace in the 1850s, fueled by the advent of the California Gold Rush. They were instrumental in the development of the American comic strip and we will be reporting more new finds next year after more research into American folklore.

We have a lot of new discoveries to share with you again this year as amply evident in the price index which follows this year's history lesson. A quantum leap has finally been achieved in the area of introducing the comic book collecting world to American Comic Almanac(k)s as well as a huge multitude of American humor periodicals, many of which contained sequential comic strips.

This Victorian Era section is devoted to comic strips and books published during the years the United States expanded across the North American continent, fought a Civil War, shifted from an agrarian to an industrial society, "welcomed" waves of immigrants, and struggled over race, class, religion, temperance, and suffrage - and all of it depicted and satirized by generations of mostly now long-forgotten cartoonists. The social attitudes, beliefs, and conventions of 19th century America, the good as well as the bad, are to be found in abundance. Perhaps the first question to pop into most readers' minds will be, "What, beyond the happenstance of publication date, are Victorian Era comics?"



There has been a long slow-motion evolution of the comic strip which was not invented in America, contrary to many previous history books on the subject. One must examine many aspects of concurrent popular culture. The main aspect that we believe most distinguishes Victorian Era comic strips from those of later eras was the extremely rare use of word balloons within sequential (multi-picture) comic stories. When word balloons were used, it was nearly always within single-panel cartoons. On the occasions when they appeared inside a strip, with very few exceptions, the ballooned dialogue was inconsequential. Nineteenth-century comics tended to place both narration and dialogue beneath comic panels rather than within the panel's borders as they were thought by many to interfere with the art. Many of these comics are to the word balloon-strewn post-Yellow Kid comics of the 20th Century as silent movies are to the later "talkies." Just as sound changed how stories were structured on film, so too did comic strips change when the words were moved from beneath panels to inside them, and dialogue rather than narration drove the story in conjunction with the pictures.

The Victorian Era of actual comic strip books began on different dates in different nations, depending on when the first publication of a sequential comic book on their soil is known to have occurred. For the U.S. this happened when the American literary periodical Brother Jonathan printed the 40-page, 195-panel graphic novel The Adventures of Mr. Obadiah Oldbuck as a special extra dated September 14, 1842. Almost six decades later, America's Victorian comics came to their end, replaced by the onslaught of Platinum Age books reprinting newspaper strips from Bennett, Hearst, and Pulitzer Sunday comic sections, among many others.

There is considerable overlap between Victorian Era and Platinum Age comic books and strips. Those publications that continued from one century into the next, such as Puck, Judge, and Life, have their pre-1900 issues listed within the Victorian Age section, while their post-1899 issues can be found inside the Platinum Age. Some non-sequential (i.e., single-panel) American comic items existing prior to 1842 are also listed herein, going back to 1795. These belong to what could tentatively be called the Age of Caricature (1770s through 1830s). This was a fertile period for the art in England, when Gillray and Rowlandson, and, later, Cruikshank, Heath, and Seymour were that nation's top cartoonists. During the same period in the U.S., there were no artists who made their living as caricaturists, though William Charles, printer and engraver, did produce about two dozen spirited cartoon broadsides from 1805 to 1820, the most important ones concerning events of the War of 1812.

In addition, one can trace origins of American comic books to the humorous Comic Almanacs which began in earnest in the early 1830s.

The earliest known cartoon-like woodcut printed on paper in North America was in a Puritan children's book first published in 1646. Titled simply The Burning of Mr. John

The Comus Offering, 1830 sample page of single panel cartoons using word balloons in every panel. Very Rare.

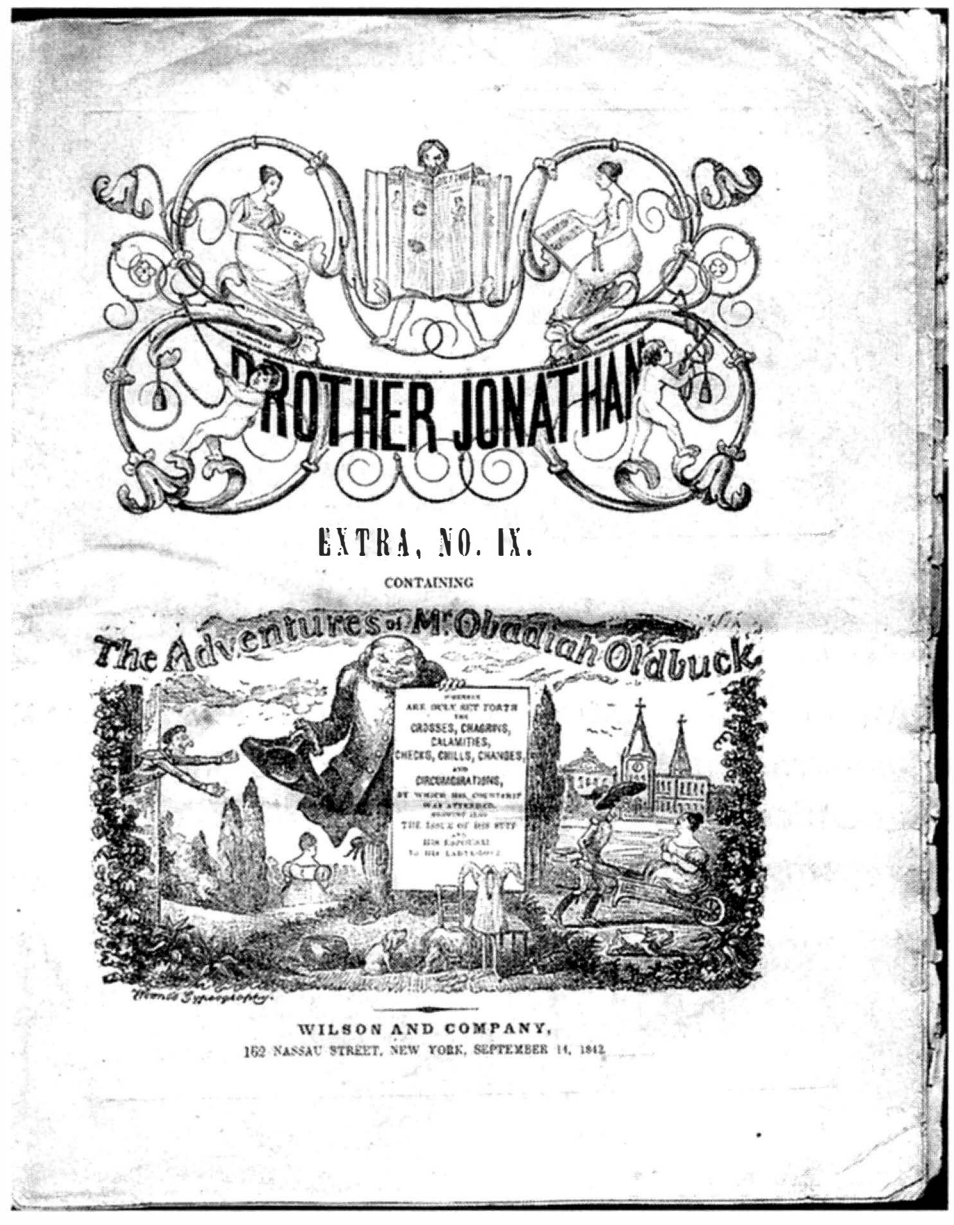
Rogers, it showed in flaming graphic detail what happens to those who stray from the flock and have to be burned at the stake. Dr. Wertham would have had a field day with that one!

Cartoon broadsides and other single panel images, often using word balloons, appeared from pre-Revolution days through the end of the 19th Century. The earliest known attributed cartoon, designed by the ubiquitous Benjamin Franklin, was "Heaven Helps Only Those Who Help Themselves," which first appeared in his pamphlet Plain Truth in 1747.

The most popularly remembered 18th-Century American cartoons are likely Franklin's "Join or Die" in 1754, representing the American Colonies as severed snake parts, and "The Bloody Massacre Perpetrated in King Street" -- Paul Revere's 1770 depiction of the Boston Massacre, which he pirated from the earlier Henry Pelham broadsheet cartoon "The Fruits of Arbitrary Power."

In September 1826, John Warner Barber, New Haven, Ct. (1798-1885) designed and self-published the broadside The Drunkard's Progress, Or The Direct Road to Poverty, Wretchedness and Ruin showing in four stages sequentially "The Morning Dram" which is "The Beginning of Sorrow, " "The Grog Shop" with its "Bad Company," "The Confirmed Drunkard" in a state of "Beastly Intoxication," and the "Concluding Scene" with the family being driven off to the alms house. It is an interesting set of cuts, faintly reminiscent of Hogarth. Barber began his career in 1819, age 21, engraving on wood. He devoted most of his career to the multitude of art chores associated with book production. As late as 1870 he was issuing Barber's Temperance Tracts, which built upon his 1826 original plus four panels showing the positive effects of living without alcohol.

The first American whose fame was based primarily on his cartoons appears to be David Claypoole Johnston (1798-1865). Johnston provided illustrations for various almanacs, books, and periodicals, including the masthead for *Brother Jonathan*s. Most notable of Johnston's comics work was his nine-issue series Scraps, which he self-published from 1828 to 1849. This series was highly influenced by George Cruikshank's series Scraps and Sketches, which first appeared in 1827. Because of the resemblance, Johnston became known in his day as "the American Cruikshank." Each issue of Johnston's Scraps consists of four large folio-sized pages, printed on one side, with nine to twelve single-panel cartoons per page, and each page often organized around a theme. Also popular was his comic album Outlines Illustrative of the Journal of F A K (1835), which parodied passages from the journal of recently published observations on America by British actress Fanny Kemble.



Johnston, himself a failed actor, had an interest in the theater his entire career. In addition to producing a number of prints depicting American actors in famous roles, he collaborated with actor Henry J. Finn to produce the 1831 (American) Comic Annual, with Finn as Editor and Johnston as artist, published by Richardson, Lord and Holbrook, Boston. It featured almost 30 full-page Johnston-designed copper engravings and woodcuts. Also that year, Finn solo produced Finn's Comic Sketch Book, a twelve-page album similar to Johnston's Scraps with upwards of half a dozen single-panel cartoons per page. It was published by Peabody and Co, of New York in business from 1831-1843. (Finn died tragically in a steamboat accident Jan. 13, 1840.)

Perhaps Johnston's most interesting contribution to the history of the comic strip in American came in 1837, when he produced the sequential comic broadside, Illustrations of the Adventures & Achievements of the Renowned Don Quixote & his Doughty Squire Sancho Panza (27.4 x 30.4 cm). This blank-reverse engraved print was an elaborate twelve-panel satire of the Andrew Jackson-Van Buren administration. It likely sold for 25 cents, seeing distribution in Boston, New York and Philadelphia. Much later, in 1863, Johnston drew another sequential comic broadside, The House the Jeff Built (27.5 x 36.7 cm), a bitter indictment of Jefferson Davis and the Southern slavocracy.

In July 1839, Wilson and Company, a newly formed New York printing firm, began publishing a mammoth newspaper by the name of Brother Jonathan. The publisher, J. Gregg Wilson had employed the newspaper format for Brother Jonathan to circumvent the higher postage rates imposed on magazines, but Brother Jonathan was a newspaper in format only -- it contained not a shred of news, instead specializing in serialized fiction, some of it written by Americans but most of it pirated from foreign sources. Despite the cost savings, the mammoth format had its limitations; when opened it measured a whopping three feet by four feet. So, once Brother Jonathan was an established success, Wilson and Day began in January 1841 the simultaneous publication of a magazine-sized quarto edition of Brother Jonathan that reprinted the contents of the mammoth edition.

Later that same year, to capitalize on the name recognition of their successful twin publications, Wilson and Company started issuing book-length Brother Jonathan Extras in the same format as the quarto magazine. These reprints are counted among the earliest paperback books in America. Most of the Extra numbers were pirated European novels. For example their eighth extra was the first American printing of a Charles Dickens novel. But for their ninth Extra, they did something no American publisher had ever done before -- they pirated a graphic novel, Rodolphe Töpffer's The Adventures of Mr. Obadiah Oldbuck. By reformatting Oldbuck from its original small oblong strip design to fit Brother Jonathan's standard quarto format Wilson and Company inadvertently made this edition (alone) of Obadiah Oldbuck resemble a modern comic book. Oldbuck's arrival on the shores of the New World would directly inspire a wave of American imitators. [This first Wilson printing of Oldbuck from 1842 was reprinted in same-size limited edition facsimile by the Naples Comicon in 2003. An English translation by Leonardo De Sá of Töpffer's original draft is at leonardo desa.interdinamica. net/comics/lds/]

Cover to the subscriber version of the earliest-known sequential comic book published in America, The Adventures of Mr. Obadiah Oldbuck, Sept. 1842, Wilson & Co. New York, originally conceived in 1828 in Geneva Switzerland by creator Rodolphe Töpffer.

Even though in 1904 (in its September 3 edition), The New York Times accurately identified the Brother Jonathan Extra as the first American comic book as well as Wilson & Co. utilizing Tilt & Bougue's original printing plates as well as still being in print for sale in New York at such a late date, Töpffer has already been largely forgotten in the New World. It is high time Töpffer received credit long overdue as the inventor of the modern comic strip, laying previously long-held myths to rest.

Töpffer (1799-1846) was a playwright, novelist, artist, and teacher from Geneva, Switzerland, who in 1827 had begun producing what he called "picture novels," sharing them with his friends and students. His earliest editions were self-published via lithography on transfer paper as they use the word "autographie" in their imprints. The earliest printers were J. Freydig, Frutiger (1830s) and Schmidt (1840s). These first sequential comic books, scripted in Töpffer's native French language, found their way to Paris and became an instant hit. According to Gombrich in Art and Illusion (1960), "Töpffer recognized that he could rely on the reader to supplement from their own lives what was omitted between the panels. This is crucial in the development of the sequential comic strip."

The demand for his comic books soon outstripped the supply, and pirated editions, redrawn by others, were created by Parisian publisher Aubert to capitalize on this. In a world where international copyright conventions did not exist, this was perfectly legal, if morally questionable. Thus, in 1841, London publisher Tilt and Bogue commissioned George Cruikshank to create an English version of Töpffer's Les Amours de M. Vieux Bois by pirating Aubert's pirated edition of the Geneva original.

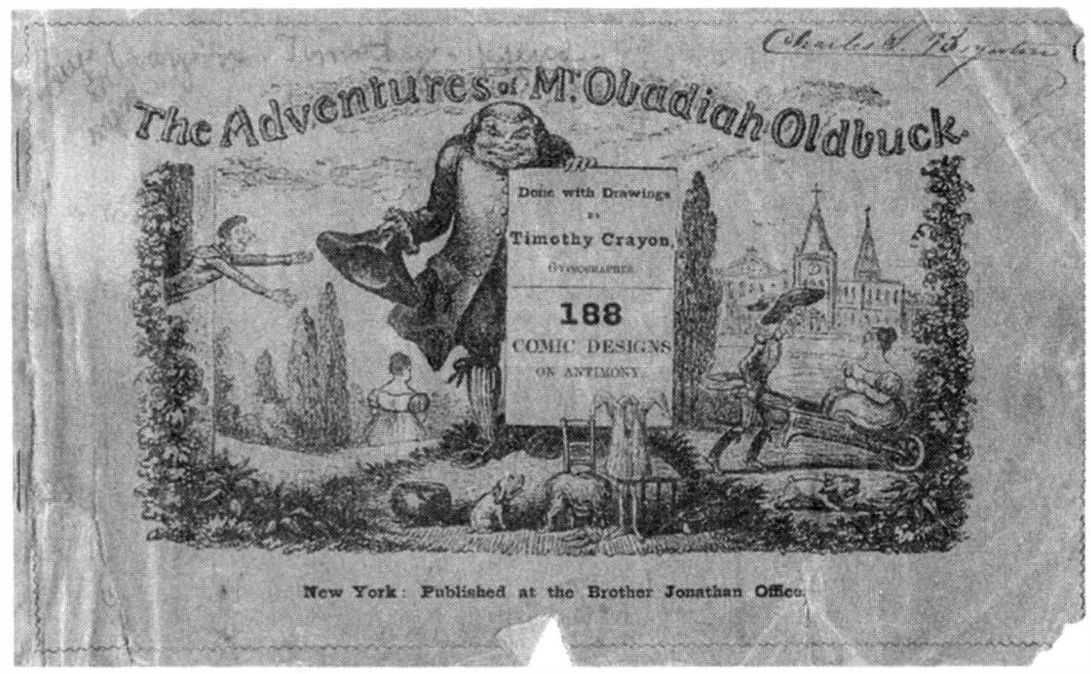
This English translation, co-financed by George Cruikshank himself, sported a new cover page by George's brother Robert, based on a montage of Töpffer's scenes. Confirmation of this fact came when George Cruikshank's personal copy surfaced in auction recently with the inscription "Copied from a French book by my Brother Robert" above the title page with the same scene. This is the translation that was reprinted by America's Wilson and Company as The Adventures of Mr. Obadiah Oldbuck utilizing the original Tilt and Bogue printing plates.

Tilt and Bogue followed up their success by translating into English two additional stories of Töpffer's seven published graphic novels: Beau Ogleby, circa 1843 (originally Histoire de M. Jabot), and Bachelor Butterfly two years later (from Histoire de M. Cryptogame). David Bogue also published picture-story strip books by John Leighton using the pseudonym Luke Limner. He wrote and drew beautiful comic books titled London Out of Town or The Adventures of the Browns At The Seaside; Comic Art-Manufactures; and The Ancient Story of the Old Dame and Her Pig starting in 1847, but none of these seem to have ever been republished in America. They follow a definite Töpffer influence. This growing body of comic book production was made easier by the spreading understanding of transfer paper lithography, otherwise the panels would have had to have been drawn and lettered mirror reverse. Gombrich referred to Töpffer's comic books as "the innocent ancestors of today's manufactured dreams... everywhere in these countless episodes of almost surrealist inconsequence we find a mastery of physiognomic characterization which sets the standard for such influential humorous draftsmen in the 19th century as Wilhelm Busch in Germany."

A Register of The New York City Book Trades 1821-1842 by Sidney F. & Elizabeth Stege12, Huttner (The Bibliographical Society of America, NYC, 1993) mentions Benjamin H. Day bought into Brother Jonathan's publisher,

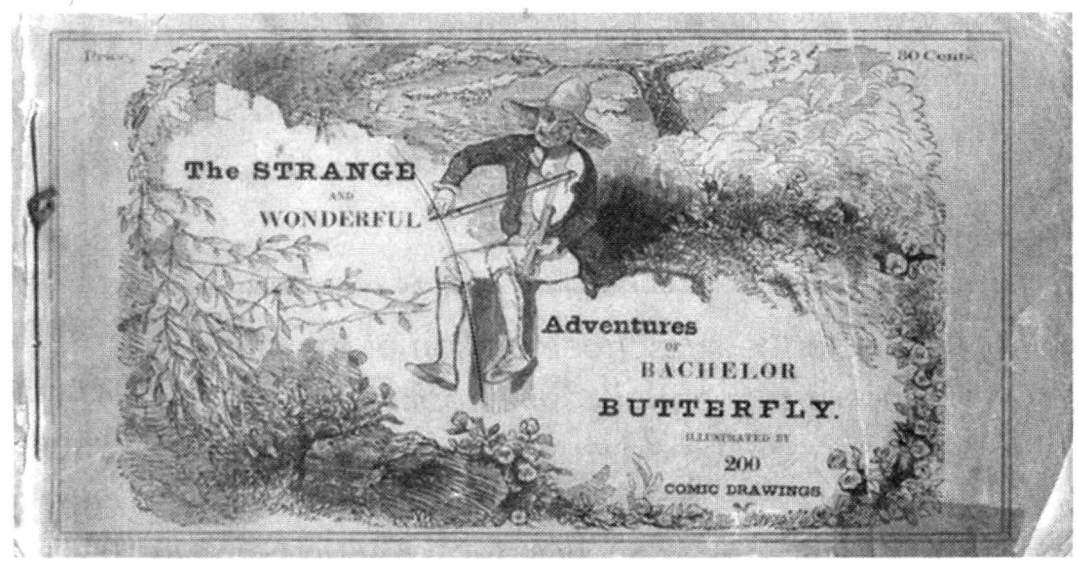
Wilson and Company, in this year, becoming at some point an equal partner with owner J. Gregg Wilson. The Register lists them both as publishers of Brother Jonathan at the same address of 162 Nassau Street. Other historical artifacts state Day eventually became sole-owner and publisher. Exactly when has not yet been determined, though we have figured out with certainly before 1850 .

This is the same Benjamin H. Day who started the first successful penny newspaper in 1833, The (New York) Sun, transforming it in four short years into the largest circulation daily in the world at that time. He sold out his ownership of the Sun to his brother-in-law during the financial "panic" of 1837, a mistake he regretted the rest of his life. He re-emerged heavily involved in Brother Jonathan definitely by 1840 and as a partner by 1841. Brother Jonathan's offices were right next door to Tamany Hall. (See the first 20 minutes of the 2002 movie Gangs of New York to visualize the period atmosphere and their customer base.) According to The Brothers Harper by Eugene Exmen (Harper & Row, 1965), on page 125, "Brother Jonathan... offered in its weekly edition and also in special supplements very cheap reprints of English novels. In effect, it began a price-cutting war against the older established 'pirates' among the book publishers..." Day, it appears, had found the perfect project on which to build a new empire.



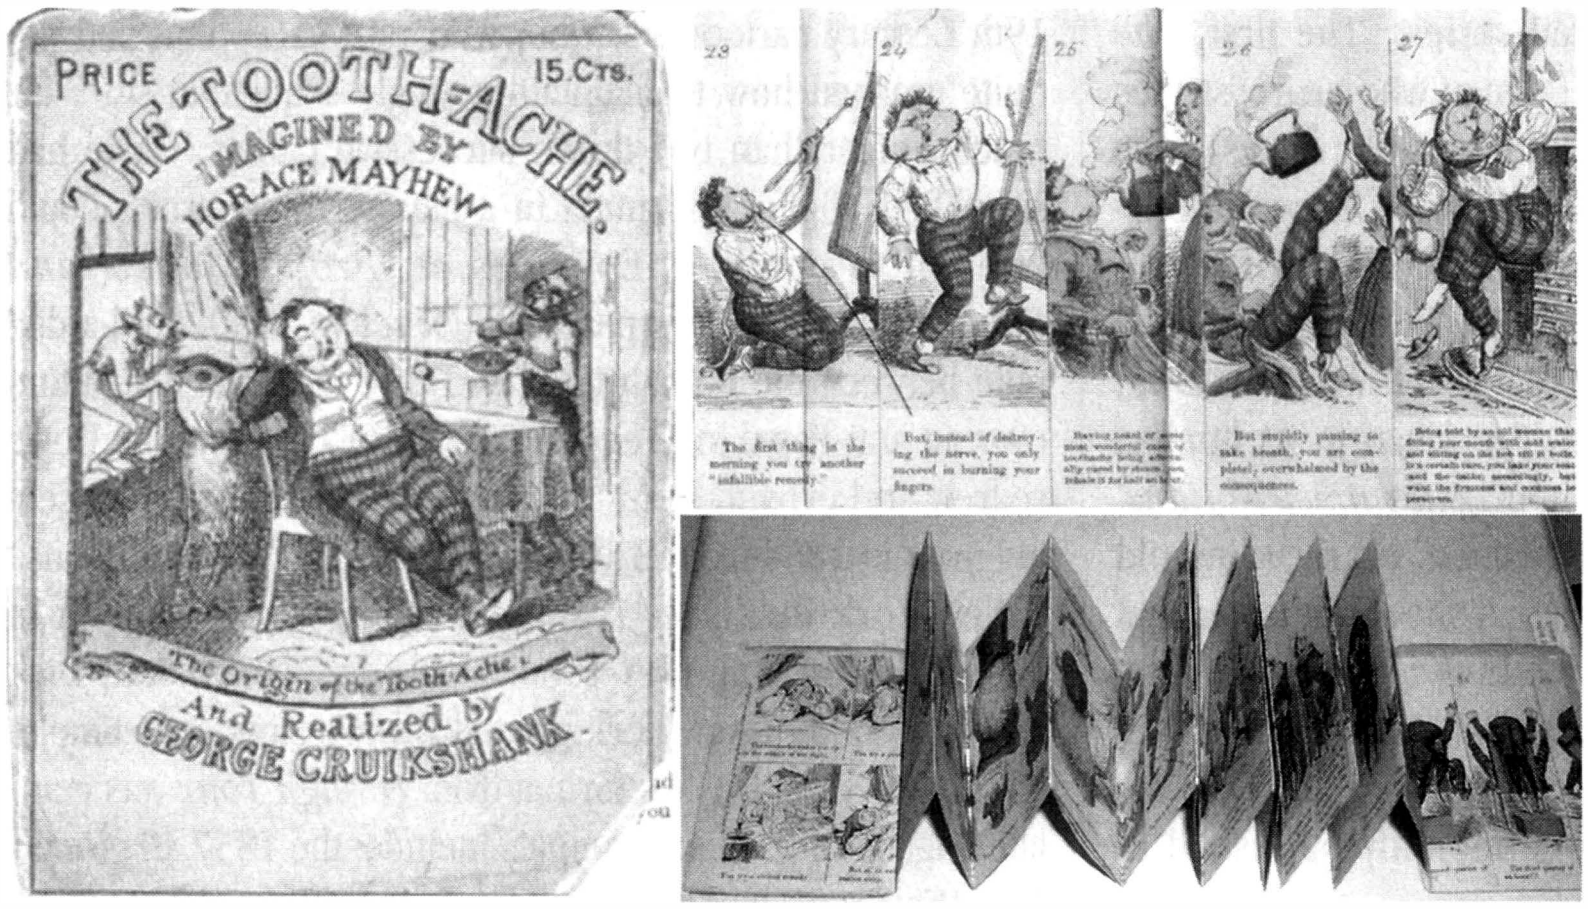
Desirous of repeating the success they had with Obadiah Oldbuck, Wilson and Company published the first American edition of Bachelor Butterfly in 1846. Three years later, they reformatted Obadiah Oldbuck back into its original British shape using lithography, dropping a handful of comic panels and altering the text to hide these deletions. Soon thereafter, they published other comic books for a steadily growing market that they had helped to stimulate. In recognition of their significant role in the dissemination of sequential comics, Wilson and Company deserve to be remembered as the first comic book publisher in America.

Back in Europe, perhaps inspired by his involvement with Töpffer's Obadiah Oldbuck, George Cruikshank soon created several sequential comic books of his own. These too found their way to America. The Bachelor's Own Book, published first in Britain in 1844, became the second known U.S. published sequential comic book when it was reprinted by Burgess, Stringer and Company the following year. Next was Cruikshank's masterpiece The Bottle, the Hogarthian-style tale of a man whose addiction to alcohol brings himself and his family to ruin. After debuting in London in 1847, it was reprinted the same year in a British-American co-publication between David Bogue and Americans Wiley and Putnam. Both printings were in huge folio form, available in either black and white or professionally hand-tinted versions. In 1848, the story saw American print again, this time in smaller form, placed at the front of the otherwise prose volume Temperance Tales; Or, Six Nights with the Washing-tonians. It continued to be reprinted by a variety of publishers into the early 20th Century. The Bottle was even reproduced onto painted glass slides and then projected by magic lantern onto a screen for the moral edification of temperance audiences. The Drunkard's Children, Cruikshank's sequel to The Bottle, was issued July 1, 1848 as a British-American-Australian co-publishing venture, but was less successful, and had not nearly as many reprints.



The most clearly sequential, as well as fun, of George Cruikshank's comic books was The Tooth-Ache, first issued in London in 1849. It was reprinted in America later that same year by Philadelphia map maker J.L. Smith. An additional concurrent version was also issued from Boston.

When closed, this booklet appears an unassuming 5-1/4 inches tall by 3-1/4 inches wide. Its striking feature is that the book folds open accordion style, stretching the entire 43-panel story along one single strip of paper, which when fully extended is seven feet, three inches long! The Tooth-Ache was issued in both black and white and professionally hand-colored editions. Abridged editions of the story, printed in black and white and with a "normal" page-turning rather than foldout presentation, appeared inside promotional give-away comics issued by American companies in the 1880s.



Thanks to Töpffer, Cruikshank, and a handful of enterprising American publishers, the 1840s should be remembered as the decade when America first fell in love with the comics.

It had seen the U.S. publication of six sequential comic books, as well as the importation of other comics with foreign imprints. America's growing interest in graphic humor was further stimulated by the growth of two other fields: the cartoon broadside and the humor magazine.

As mentioned before, the cartoon broadside had been a part of the American scene since pre-Revolution days, but it did not flourish until stone lithography (introduced in 1818 and in wide use by the 1830s) made the reproduction of images relatively fast and cheap. From the early 1830s into the mid 1840s, the leading producer of cartoon broadsides in America was New York printer H. R. Robinson, who either drew his own cartoons or employed others, especially E. W. Clay, to do it. Clay is notable for having produced the first sequential comic broadside in America. Published in 1834 and entitled, "This Is the House that Jack Built" (50 x 32 cm), the nine-panel parody of the classic nursery rhyme was an attack on the Jackson Administration. The dominant theme of American cartoon broadsides was political, as befitted a nation where politics was the leading spectator sport. As the American electorate grew increasingly educated and prosperous, the demand for cartoon broadside also increased. During the 1840s, lithographers in New York, Boston, and Philadelphia, entered the field to satisfy that demand. The best known of these, Nathaniel Currier, later Currier and Ives, joined the fray in 1848. The firm employed many artists, but its chief political cartoonist was Louis Maurer and its chief comic artist was Thomas Worth.

Except for the three previously cited sequential cartoon broadsides, nearly all of the cartoon broadsides published in America from 1832 to 1876, its dominant era, were single panels. From the 1860s onward, broadside series on a single comic theme became common, the most famous being Thomas Worth's Darktown series. These can be loosely categorized as sequential comics since they employed the same characters and formed a story of sorts when hung together on a wall, as was the publisher's expectation. Sequential art or not, the cartoon broadsides nearly always employed the speech balloons that later became one of the defining characteristic of the American comic strip.

During the same decade that sequential comics and cartoon broadsides were growing in popularity, the illustrated American humor magazine made its debut. The British comic weekly Punch, founded in 1841, was an immediate success, both in England and the United States. It was a handsomely printed quarto, initially twelve pages and later sixteen, with a repeating cover design, backed by a page of small advertisements, humorous text interspersed with comic spot art, and a single panel full-page cartoon. A significant subset of Punch's subscriber base was located in the U.S., to which thousands of copies were exported on an ongoing trans-Atlantic basis. Inevitably, enterprising American publishers attempted to repulse this invader with a home-grown comic weekly. The first, Yankee Doodle, came to town (New York, that is) on October 10, 1846, for one year. Judy (November 28, 1846 to February 20, 1847), The John-Donkey (January 1 to October 21, 1848), and The Elephant (January 22 to February 19, 1848) soon followed. None of them was successful, but all of them continued to feed the growing American interest in comic art.

By the late 1840s, comic art was flourishing in America. The conditions were right for the production of the earliest known American-created sequential comic book. Brothers James and Donald Read, who had worked for a time as cartoonists on Yankee Doodle, were the creators of Journey to the Gold Diggins by Jeremiah Saddlebags. This spirited send-up of the California gold rush craze was published in June 1849 by Stringer and Townsend, the late publishers of Judy, and, soon after, by U. P. James of Cincinnati. This Töpffer-influenced comic book chronicles the adventures of its hero Jeremiah Saddlebags in his get-rich-quick quest for gold in California. It is highly sought by collectors of Western Americana. Interestingly, the back cover of the Stringer and Townsend edition carries an advertisement for Rose and Gertrude - a Genevese Story, one of Rodolphe Töpffer's non-comics prose novels.

Stringer and Townsend was making something of a name for itself as a publisher of comic art. It will be remembered that it was one of the 1845 participants in the American publication of The Bachelor's Own Book. And, then, in 1846-47, it published Judy. Its decision to issue Jeremiah Saddlebags was all in due course.

The Gold Rush proved to be a gold mine for American comic artists. Aside from being a featured topic in the 1849 edition of David Claypool Johnston's Scraps, in comic almanacs, and in Currier cartoon prints, it was the subject of several other significant sequential series. The first, The Adventures of Mr. Tom Plump (a fat man who nearly starves to death in his failed attempt at California Gold riches), saw print in 1850. The second, The Adventures of Jeremiah Old-Pot (a twelve-part burlesque narrative of a New York businessman who attempts to get rich selling tin in price-inflated California), ran throughout 1852 in Yankee Notions. Though the narrative was distinctly American in its humor, the artwork was probably German in origin. Yankee Notions' Publisher, T. W. Strong, built his business on recycling old woodcuts with new captions attached. It should be noted that the Old-Pot series, borrowed or otherwise, was the first sequential art to appear in an American humor magazine. Yankee Notions, published from 1852 to 1875, also has the distinction of being the first comic monthly published in America.

"Moses Keyser the Bowery Bully's Trip to the California Gold Mines," was a 13-page comic story that appeared in Elton's Californian Comic All-My-Nack for 1850. It was reprinted at least twice in the circa 1850-51 booklet The Clown, Or The Banquet of Wit and later again in Sam Slick's Comic Almanac in 1857. The Clown is also notable as the earliest known anthology of sequential comics, with the bonus that each multi-panel story is by a different artist. Many of the artists are as yet unidentified, and how much of it is original American material versus that reprinted from Europe is presently unknown. But verified are cartoons by George Cruikshank, Elton (American), the Read brothers, Grandville (French), and Richard Doyle (British). The Doyle contribution reprints the comics story "Brown, Jones and Robinson and How They Went to a Ball," which originally saw print in the August 24, 1850 issue of Punch. This is the first known American appearance of these Doyle characters, and was almost certainly pirated.

Richard Doyle's The Foreign Tour of Messrs. Brown, Jones, and Robinson is basically a travelogue in illustrated form, told via humorous episodes, part sequential cartoon sequences, and part snapshots of moments jumping forward in time. This halfway sequential format was ideal for most 19th Century cartoonists, who, with rare exception, had not quite grasped how to maintain a single sequential story for much longer than two dozen successive panels. Doyle had simplified Töpffer's formula in a manner most artists could attempt to emulate. Episodes of "Brown, Jones, and Robinson" originally appeared in Punch in 1850, until a dispute between the Roman Catholic Doyle and Punch's editors over an anti-Papal joke ended with Doyle's resignation. Doyle redrew and expanded the story into a single album, first seeing print in 1854 from British publisher Bradbury and Evans.

New York Publisher D. Appleton brought the album to America, reprinting it in 1860, 1871, and 1877. Next, Dick and Fitzgerald of New York pirated Doyle's story sometime in the early 1870s. Doyle's format from Foreign Tour was emulated again and again. Examples include: the 1857 Mr. Hardy Lee, His Yacht, by Charles Stedman; the 1860s- 1870s G. W. Carleton-published Our Artist In... series, set in various Latin American countries; the Augustus Hoppin 1870s sketch novels On the Nile, Crossing the Atlantic, and Ups and Downs on Land and Water; and Life founder John Ames Mitchell's 1881 (pre-Life) The Summer School of Philosophy at Mt. Desert. D. Appleton, the official, authorized American publisher of Foreign Tour, even commissioned an American artist - Toby - to create a sequel comic album involving Doyle's characters visiting the U.S. and Canada, published in 1872 as The American Tour of Messrs Brown, Jones and Robinson. In terms of influencing the development of mid-19th Century American comics, Doyle's Foreign Tour ranks with the works of Töpffer, Cruikshank, and Busch.

Doyle was also the author of an equally popular earlier cartoon series for Punch, titled, In Manners and Customs of Ye Englyshe, Mr. Pips Hys Diary, which was reprinted in 1849. In this work, Doyle told his story using a deliberately primitive almost stick-figure art style, combined with the Hogarthian structure of large single panel cartoons leaping forward in time with each picture.

Manners and Customs of Ye Harvard Studente, which ran in the first year of the Harvard Lampoon (1876-current), shows the clearest influence. The series by then stu-

Attwood later became one of the regular artists in Life.

The Extraordinary and Mirth-provoking Adventures by Sea and Land of Oscar Shanghai, inspired by Bachelor Butterfly, was issued May 1855 by Garrett and Company, Publishers, No. 18 Ann Street, New York. Oscar Shanghai has many misadventures including being swallowed by a whale, making a trip in a flying machine to Africa, where he is shot out of a huge bow by a "Black Prince" for refusing to marry a local princess of color. After more adventures, he makes it back home.

Journey to the Gold Diggins By Jeremiah Saddlebags, June 1849, so far the earliest known sequential comic book by American creators, J.A. and D.F. Read. Above: a couple sample pages. Note similarity to Töpffer's comics especially* Bachelor Butterfly

Oscar Shanghai's first publisher was confirmed in 2002 with the discovery of a very rare 36-page catalog from 1856 of books, pamphlets and prints handled by B.H. Day (successor to Wilson and Company) who was by this time publishing Brother Jonathan as a twice-a-year holiday pictorial only. The catalog has a few crossover advertisement pages from an associate publisher, Garrett and Company. This rediscovered treasure, which sold for $750 in 2002, contains within a sequential strip of one panel per page over 32 of those pages titled "Peter Piper in Bengal," by John Tenniel, reprinted from four 1853 issues of Punch. In the narrative, Peter Piper tries his hand hunting all different kinds of wild game with many misadventures.

Amongst the many varied types of "Cheap Books" for sale in this rare catalog are the comic books The Adventures of Obadiah Oldbuck, Bachelor Butterfly's Queer Love Adventures and Misfortunes, and The Fortunes of Ferdinand Flipper, plus the aforementioned Oscar Shanghai. All were priced at "25¢ per copy, postage free, refunds paid out in stamps." There is also an advertisement for a comic book entitled A Day's Sport - Or, Hunting Adventures of S. Winks Wattles, a Shopkeeper, Thomas Titt, a "legal gent," and Major Nicholas Noggin, a Jolly Good Fellow Generally by Henry L. Stephens (1824-1882) of Philadelphia.

Stephens, later the political cartoonist for Vanity Fair (New York, 1859-1863) and a leading children's book illustrator, produced his first work, Illustrations of the Poets: From Passages in the Life of Little Billy Vidkins, a small wrappered album of 32 comic woodcuts, in 1849. It was first published by S. Robinson, of Philadelphia, and reprinted with variant titles several times in the 1850s including Yankee Notions. It is likely that Little Billy Vidkins was printed before Jeremiah Saddlebags, though more research is needed before making this claim.

Garrett and Company was also responsible for the 1856 publication of The Sad Tale of the Courtship of Chevalier Slyfox-Wikof, Showing His Heart-Rending Astounding and Most Wonderful Love Adventures with Fanny Elssler and Miss Gambol. This book parodied the very public relationship between the then-famous wealthy American aristocrat Henry Wikoff, and the even more famous European actress/ dancer Fanny Elssler. It is dated thusly because Wikoff's memoir is pictured in the comic book.

Apparently in late 1854 Garrett and Company formed a brief two-year partnership with Dick and Fitzgerald, officially becoming Garrett, Dick and Fitzgerald in November 1856, while continuing to operate out of the same 18 Ann Street address in New York. One month later they issued Richard Doyle's British published graphic novel The Foreign Tour of Messrs. Brown, Jones, and Robinson, reformatting it into the same oblong shape as Garrett's two prior comic books (which in turn were formatted in imitation of Töpffer's albums). This information came to light just this year. The interested scholar is encouraged to check out the new listings for Garrett's The Home Circle in the index.

In 1858, Garrett appears to have dropped out, leaving Dick and Fitzgerald alone with the former's book stock, his place of business, and most importantly, the printing plates for his comic books. For reasons unknown, Dick and Fitzgerald steered away from reprinting Garrett's comic books for more than a decade. But in the 1870s they resumed publication - not only of the three albums published by Garrett, but also of Obadiah Oldbuck and Bachelor Butterfly from Wilson and Company, and Ferdinand Flipper from Brother Jonathan - all of them also making use of the original printing plates. The inclusion of books from Brother Jonathan, Wilson and Company, and Garrett and Company all within the same promotional Peter Piper catalog from B.H. Day suggests that these early publishers of comic books had many over-lapping fields of interest,, and that Dick and Fitzgerald became the inheritor/acquirer of all of it. Dick and Fitzgerald also reprinted in the 1870s the earlier William T. Peter published Ichabod Academicus (how that title might have connected, if at all, with B.H. Day's business remains unclear). We can now say, though, that an evolving group of a handful of publishers was responsible, over a span of 46 years, beginning with the very first graphic novel published in America in 1842, for keeping in print in America a cluster of slightly over half a dozen graphic novels.

Yankee Notions #1, January, 1852. This title began the first sequential comic strips in an American humor magazine, The Adventures of Jerimiah Old-Pot.

Tebbel's History of Book Publishing in the US (vol. 1, pages 351-2) states that Burgess and Stringer was dissolved in late 1840s and became two firms, Stringer and Townsend, and Burgess and Garrett. Burgess retired in 1850 and his nephew William Brisbane Dick stepped into the partnership, whereupon the new company was renamed Garrett, Dick and Fitzgerald. Garrett retired in 1851 and the firm became Dick and Fitzgerald. The firm persisted under that name until 1917.

Collections reprinting cartoons from Punch saw print in the U.S., such as Merry Pictures by the Comic Hands, imported for the 1859 Christmas Season, plus various John Leech, George Du Maurier, and Phil May books which appeared from the 1850s through 1910s. Finally, many American weekly newspapers and weekly and monthly magazines, humorous and non-humorous, reprinted cartoons from Punch. Such inclusions often became a prelude to switching to original material by American artists, if that publication find's cartoon section find American cartoonists of sufficient talent.

Harper's Monthly, the leading American monthly, was a prime example. Soon after it commenced publication in November 1850, it began to carry a few pages of single panel cartoons reprinted from Punch at the rear of each issue. This evolved into reprinting sequential comic pages from the British periodical Town Talk, and then, starting December 1853, original sequential comics by the great Frank Bellew.

Bellew (1828-1888) should be regarded as the "Father of American Sequential Comics." Born in India, educated in France and England, he emigrated to America in 1850. His earliest work shows an influence from Doyle, but he rapidly developed his own unique art style. Bellew's comics, both sequential and single panel, graced nearly every American comic periodical published from the 1850s into the 1870s.

A month after the publication of the anonymous first installment of Jeremiah Old-Pot in Yankee Notions, Bellew began contributing his six-part, 18-panel comic series, "Mr. Blobb in Search of a Physician" to The Lantern, a New York comic weekly published from January 10, 1852 to July 2, 1853. The series ran in six of the nine issues published from January 31 through March 27, 1852. This was followed in April and May by the 16-panel, three-issue comic sequence "Mr. Bulbear's Dream", which concluded with the main character awakened from his dream by falling out of bed, exactly like Little Nemo would do five decades later.

These two series were just the beginning for Bellew, who contributed a voluminous amount of work to the New York Picayune (1850-1860) (which he also edited for a time in 1857-58), The Comic Monthly (1859-1881), Momus, an 1860 comic daily, The Phunniest of Awl (1864-1867) (which he also edited), Punchinello (1870), and Wild Oats (1870-1881), to name the most prominent.

The Comic Monthly deserves special mention. Started in March 1859 and published by J. C. Haney and Company, of 119 Nassau Street, New York, The Comic Monthly was a profusely illustrated 16-page folio, the same size as Harper's Weekly. It focused its graphic satire on politics, the theater, and the comedy of everyday life. A preponderance of the purely comic satire took the form of sequential art. Here are random samplings of highlights from issues from 1860:

- February: "A Day of Humiliation, Fasting, Supplication, and Prayer (four panels, unsigned), "New Year Calls under the Influence of Hard Times" (twelve panels, unsigned), "Young Trouble-some; or, Master Jacky's Holidays" (nineteen panels covering three and half pages, unsigned);
- April: "Four Years After Marriage" (sixteen panels, unsigned), "Our Masked Ball" (twelve panel centerspread, Bellew), "Trials of a Witness" (eight panels, Bellew);
- May: "Precocities of Young Springles" (seven panels, unsigned), "The Fight for the Championship" (twenty-four panel centerspread, Bellew), "Steam Applied to Music" (three panels, unsigned), "The Course of True Love" (four panels, Bellew);
- June: "Further Particulars of the Fight" (nine panel cover, Bellew), "The Man Who Went to See the Fight" (twelve panels, unsigned);
- July: "Explaining American Politics to an Intelligent Foreigner" (twelve panels, unsigned), "The Meerschaum Mania" (two panels, Bellew), "The Art of Stump Speaking" (ten panels, unsigned), "Our Little Friend, Tom Noddy" (three panels, unsigned); "The Japanese in New York" (twelve panel centerspread, Bellew), "The Observant Child" (three panels, unsigned), "Mr. Dibbs Goes to Pike's Peak and Comes Back Again" (fourteen panel back cover, unsigned);
- September: "The Zouave Fever" (four panel cover, unsigned), "Mr. Lupell" (two panels, Bellew), "The Prince of Wales in America" (twenty-four panel centerspread, J. H. Howard), "D'ye Think It's True?" (three panels, Bellew);
- October: "The Duties of the Wide Awake" (four panels, Bellew), "Our Charley (two panels, unsigned), "The Three Young Friends" (eighteen panel back cover, unsigned);
- November: "The Hanlon's (sic) At Home" (nine panel back cover, unsigned);

• December: "The Target Excursion" (seventeen panel centerspread, signed with an unidentifiable monogram); "The Sporting Critic" two panels, Bellew).

The Comic Monthly also published many multi-panel cartoons grouped under a single heading, which were not strictly sequential in nature. Bellew was the monthly's chief artist, assisted by Thomas Nast, A. R Waud, and others. Some of the unsigned art was certainly by Bellew, some by journeymen artists, and some of it pirated from European journals.

The Comic Monthly was not the first folio-sized humor magazine. Those laurels go to The New York Picayune, which began as a newspaper, switched to a folio in 1856, adopted Punch's format for thirty-five issues in 1857-58, and returned to a folio for the remainder of its run.

Frank Leslie's Budget of Fun, the greatest of the folio monthlies, began in January 1859 and was published until June 1878. Its star cartoonist during the sixties was William Newman (c. 1817-1870), one of the founding artists of Punch. As we have noted, The Comic Monthly began two months later.

Frank Leslie was born Henry Cart in Ipswich, England in 1821. He became a very skilled engraver before coming over to America in 1948. He first worked as manager for P.T. Barnum's New York Illustrated News for several years. in 1850 he legally had his name changed to Frank Leslie. He died in 1880 and his wife continued the numerous publications he was publishing. Many of Frank Leslie's periodicals had a lot of sequental comic art.

Quarto-sized monthlies to compete with the successful Yankee Notions were also proliferating. Nick-Nax was the first (May 1856 to December 1875), followed by Phunny Phellow (October 1859- 1876) and Merryman's Comic Monthly (January 1863 to December 1875), to name the most prominent.

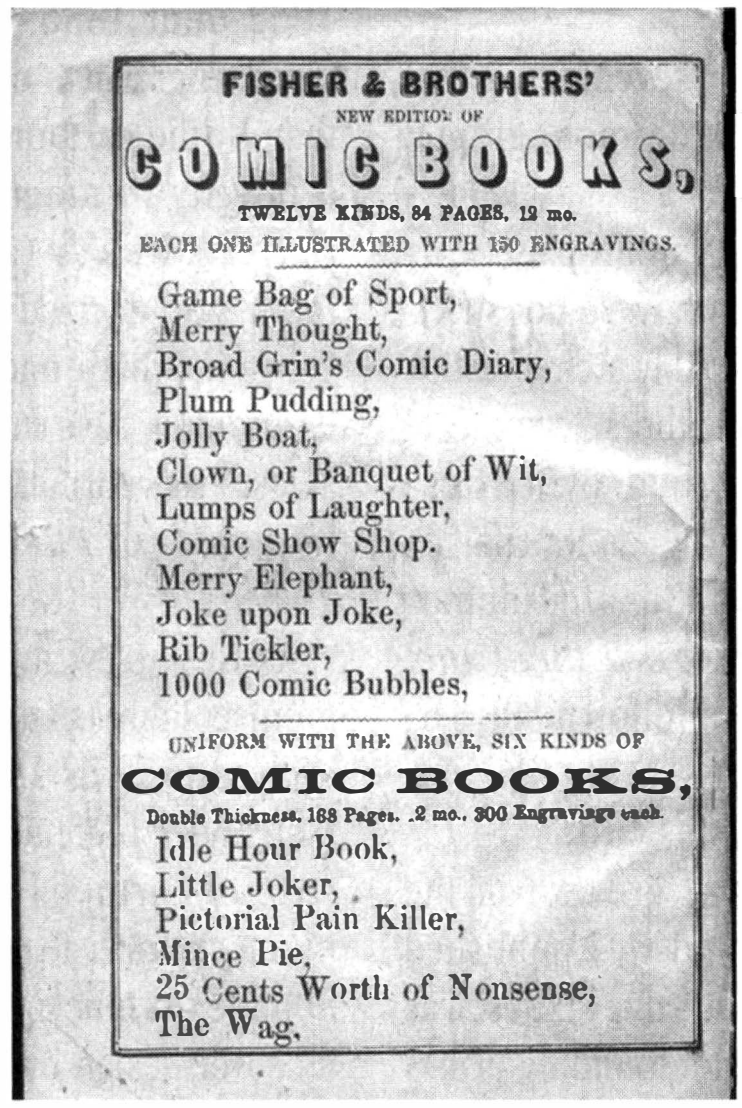
Enterprising publishers continued to attempt an American comic weekly in the style of Punch. The most notable efforts, Vanity Fair (1859-1863), Mrs. Grundy (1865), and Punchinello (1870), were distinguished but unsuccessful.

Nearly all of them, weeklies and monthlies, to varying degrees, featured sequential comic art. By the time of the American Civil War, sequential comic art was a part of the American graphic landscape.

While Bellew stood out for his sequential comics, Thomas Nast (1840-1902) brought a new style to American political cartoons, of which he is regarded the father. Even though he created several sequential strips early in his career (especially for Nick-Nax in 1859), Nast made his name in the pages of the national news periodical, Harper's Weekly, for which he worked from 1862 until 1886. Nast was influenced more by the dark wood engravings of Franco-German illustrator Gustave Dore than by the cartoonists of Punch. His somber cartoons were a novelty in American cartooning. Nast in the pages of Harper's Weekly (and Newman in the pages of the Budget of Fun) popularized the extravagant double-page folio-sized cartoon, which had no precedent in European or American cartooning, save for the separately published cartoon broadsides. This format would come to full maturity after 1876 in the pages of Puck (1876-1918) and then Judge (1881-1947).

As Nast grew in prominence and success, American cartoonists increasingly emulated him. U.S. humor publications evolved towards an amalgamation of Nast and Punch, rather than sheer imitation of the latter. After the War, with Nast's style of cartoons more entrenched in American readers' minds, efforts to launch Punch-like American periodicals floundered quickly. Mrs. Grundy, ironically most famous for its cover design by Nast, died after a mere twelve issues (running July 8 to September 23, 1865). Punchinello (April 2 to December 24, 1870) struggled nine months before its backers gave up. Punchinello had been financed by Tammany Hall politicians Tweed and Sweeney, as counter-propaganda against Nast's ongoing assault upon their corruption. They attempted to buy and threaten Nast into silence, to no avail.

American comics continued their pull away from Anglo-Franco imitation with the infusion of a third major European influence – the German humor magazine. The German-American community swelled significantly after the failed revolution of 1848. These émigrés brought with them a culture of humor, expressed most flamboyantly in their native humor magazines, the most famous being Kladderadatsch, Fliegende Blätter, and Münchener Bilderbogen. As high in quality, as were the graphic artists who contributed to them, one German comic artist in particular excelled beyond the rest, his stories breaking out and crossing over into English language translations, the demand for which resulted in numerous printings. This artist, of course, was Heinrich Christian Wilhelm Busch (1832-1908).



Frank Leslie's Budget of Fun#19 June 1860 sports a comic strip on its front cover.

Busch's work appeared in English in the 1860s in both British and American periodicals, often uncredited. For example, four of Busch's strips appeared in English in the pages of Merryman's Monthly in 1864, while in 1879 his graphic story "Fipps der Affe" was serialized across a 10-issue run of Puck as "Troddledums the Simian." The earliest known English language appearance of Busch in book form was The Flying Dutchman, or The Wrath of Herr von Stoppelnoze, in 1862, from New York publisher G. W. Carleton. Carleton not only pirated Busch's strip, but went so far as to credit the entire story to American poet John G. Saxe, with Busch's cartoons mere illustrations accompanying Saxe's prose!

The next known English language Busch book was A Bushel of Merry Thoughts, an 1868 London-published anthology collecting various Busch strips. Some of these same stories later appeared in the U.S.-published The Mischief Book (1880), newly translated and with a few more Busch tales added. One of these additions was "Hans Huckebein," a tale of a mischievous pet raven who in the end gets drunk and accidentally hangs himself. It became, at least in the States, Busch's second most popular sequential comic story. The unrepentant bird was promoted to title character in two later collections: the rare Hookeybeak the Raven and Other Tales in 1878 and Jack Huckaback, the Scapegrace Raven, circa 1888. There were also at least three trade card series in the 1870s and 1880s that reprinted the ending sequence, as Fritz Spindle-Shanks, The Raven Black.

Earliest-known use of the description COMIC BOOKS dates from the early 1850s.

The most popular Busch tale, though, was easily Max und Moritz, which in the U.S. saw print as Max and Maurice - A Juvenile History in Seven Tricks. Published in Boston in 1871, this English language version saw at minimum of 60 reprintings by the century's end, plus countless more printings thereafter. A separate British translation debuted in 1874, under the title Max and Moritz. It is well known that the later Rudolph Dirks comic strip series, Katzenjammer Kids, beginning in late 1897, was based on Max und Moritz.

According to documents found by comics historian Alfredo Castelli, Katzenjammer Kids may not have been pirated as has been assumed but was licensed by William Randolph Hearst instead. Hearst's New York Journal was published in different language editions for New York City's immigrant communities. In the German edition, the strip was published under its original name, Max und Moritz. Numerous other translations of Busch were published in America - too many to name in this article. Several can be found in the Victorian Age Price Index.

The most significant humor magazine of the 1870s, prior to the founding of the German-language Puck in 1876, was Wild Oats (1870-1881), which for part of its run also published a German-language edition, Schnedereddeng. In terms of the quality of its cartoons and comics, this New York City publication was in 1872 at an artistic level Puck would not achieve until 1880. Published by Winchell and Small (later Collin and Small) and distributed through the New York News Company, Wild Oats carried a cross-section of old and new generation comic artists, from the more established W. M. Avery, Frank Beard, Frank Bellew, E.S. Bisbee, Michael Angelo Woolf, and Thomas Worth, to up-and-comers such as Livingston Hopkins, Frederick Burr Opper, Palmer Cox, and James A. Wales.

Wild Oats began carrying sequential comic strips as early as #26, dated March 14, 1872, with the Livingston Hopkins strip pictured on the next page (we do not know anything yet about the first 25 issues). The very next issue has a Worth double-page spread titled "The Political Humpty Dumpty... Horace Greeley" told in eleven panels plus the sequential fictional "Graphic Account of the Assassination of Queen Victoria" and "Love As the Angels Love." "The Doings of the Japanese Embassy At Washington" related in twelve panels by W. M. Avery follows up in #28 April 11, 1872. An unknown hand drew "The Physiology of Moving" in six panels in #30. Hopkins returns with a beautiful intense 28-panel double-page spread in #31 May 23. Hopkins and Worth alternated for many issues with sequential comic strips on baseball, horse racing and other pertinent subjects of the day. In #45 December 5, 1872, E.S. Bisbee contributed his first sequential in seventeen panels and Worth showed up in "Humor and Pathos of a New England Thanksgiving" in eleven panels. Issue 47 expands the concept with a twelve-panel job by Bisbee, twenty-panel effort on one page by Hopkins and a three-panel effort by Worth. And on it goes through 1873 as well - comic strip after comic strip. Issue 58 June 5, 1873, includes a particularly humorous nineteen-panel double-pager drawn by someone still unknown titled "The Terrible Adventures of Messrs. Buster and Stumps, with the Indians" which begins with two white men heading out west in an effort to exterminate Indians - and their misadventures of not quite getting the job done. It reads across both pages in a unique evolution similar to Popeye #2052 (found in the Platinum listings). Issue 65 contains two nine-panel Thomas Worth strips "Only a Mad Dog Scare - Another Lesson For Nervous People" and "Only a Cholera Scare - Something For Nervous People to Read and Ponder Over." Issue 66 Sept 18, 1873, has the very funny Hopkins twelve-panel strip as well as two more ten-panel Worth strips on the delights of Hunting and Fishing plus one by Hopkins titled "The Adventures of Mr Old Party with Jersey Mosquitoes" in twelve-panels. All told, four comic strips in this issue. They obviously liked what they were doing, judging from the exuberance of the work.

The next issue has Worth's nine-panel report on "The Adventures of Young Muttonhead among the Free Lovers" which was all about the "free sex" convention recently held in Chicago. Issue 68 has a nine-panel "An Adventure with a New Jersey Mosquito" which smacks of Winsor McCay in subject and even art style. Maybe McCay was inspired by this for his later animated cartoon as well as earlier Rarebit Fiend. We'll never know for sure. On through 1875, Wild Oats presented sequential comic strips issue after issue. With #148, October 27, 1875, Frederick Opper contributes his very first Wild Oats cover, a political cartoon on inflation then rampant in the US. He does covers through at least #161 before a short break and then comes back with many more. In #158, January 5, 1876, Palmer Cox - some five years before inventing The Brownies - begins a wonderful series of 24-panel double page spread comic strips, with a couple sample titles being "The Adventures of Mr. and Mrs. Sprowl And Their Christmas Turkey-A Crashing Chasing Tearful Tragedy But Happily Ending Well" and "Bachelor Broke and Widow Snuggi: A Pictorial Account of Their Sleigh Ride and What Became of It."

Even though he had been contributing many covers and interior single panel jobs to Wild Oats for years, Frank Bellew does not show up with his first comic strip until #190, August 16, 1876, with a nine-panel effort he titled, "Rodger's Patent Mosquito Armour." By this time America's "Father of the sequential comic strip" had inspired many other cartoonists to try their hand telling stories with words and pictures.

Another highly desirable American graphic novel, sought especially by collectors of Western lore, is Quiddities of an Alaskan Trip by William H. Bell which debuted in 1873. Bell was Timothy O'Sullivan's assistant photographer on the 1871-74 expeditions of Lt. George Wheeler, surveying and mapping the western territories for the U.S. government. The story panels are laid out within ornate frames like those of stereograph cards, such as Bell was involved in creating on the expedition. It involves a parody of a trip from Washington, D.C., to survey the newly purchased territory of Alaska, which at the time was derisively referred to as "Seward's Folly." Bell published Quiddities in Portland, Oregon, in 1873, meaning that he drew it while he was on just such an expedition.

The seemingly disparate influences of Thomas Nast and German comics came together in the work of Austrian immigrant Joseph Keppler (1838-1894). Like many cartoonists in America, Keppler desired to rival Nast. Unlike most, he possessed the talent and drive to accomplish it. Keppler, trained as an artist but working as an actor, began contributing comic art to Kikeriki (1861-1923) in his native Vienna. He emigrated to St. Louis in 1868, where he took his first stab at starting a comic weekly, the German language Die Vehme (Aug 28, 1869 - Aug. 20, 1870). Seven months later, still in St. Louis, he tried again, launching another German language humor periodical, titled Puck. This German Puck began on March 18, 1871, joined by an English language version one year later, but both ended on Aug. 24, 1872.

"The Flight of Abraham Lincoln," first appeared in Harper's Weekly*, March 9, 1861.*

Keppler moved to New York City and began working for Frank Leslie. His cartoons appeared in Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, Frank Leslie's Budget of Fun, and the Leslie-owned Jolly Joker and Day's Doings. (To capitalize on the 1876 Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, Leslie published in that year a paperback collection of Centennial-related humor, Centennial Fun, most of which was Keppler's work.) Four years after the first Puck died, Keppler was ready to try again. He re-launched the German language edition of Puck in New York City on September 27, 1876.

This Puck was both familiar and exotic. Its format of an extravagant centerspread cartoon sandwiched between front and back cover cartoons had by this time become something of a comic periodical standard, certainly for the monthlies. But Puck was different from what had come before. The cartoons were lithographed, not engraved, which lent to them a softer, more pleasing quality, and they were in color, something virtually without precedent in American comic periodical literature.

Initially, the magazine's cartoons were tinted in just one color, but Puck appeared, ambitiously, every week, and the coloring set it apart from anything else on American stands. The parallel English language edition of Puck was launched six months after the German version, on March 14, 1877. This English edition of Puck was a money-loser for several years, kept afloat by the German edition's profits and the determination of the English edition's literary editor, H.C. Bunner, not to give up. By 1880, Puck was a huge success. It became the new model for American humor publications. In time, Keppler hired other artists, most notably Frederick Burr Opper, Eugene Zimmerman ("Zim") and F. M. Howarth, and added black and white sequential comics to the magazine's interior and then, with increasing frequency in the early 1890s to the magazine's back cover. Funny Folks by F. M. Howarth, 1899, collected many early sequential comics from Puck; one of the titles many consider bridges the Victorian and Platinum Ages of comics. Puck was the model that inspired William Randolph Hearst to add a color comics section to his Sunday Journal in 1895.

With the first issue dated October 29, 1881, Puck's chief rival, Judge, was born. Founded by Puck artist James A. Wales, it also featured the work of Thomas Worth and Livingston Hopkins. Judge made several forays into Puck's talent pool over the years. Its best capture was Eugene Zimmerman ("Zim"), who became for Judge the star artist that Frederick Burr Opper was for Puck.

Judge struggled financially for several years, and likely would have ceased publication had it not been for Puck's powerful performance during the 1884 election. Puck's success galvanized Republican powerbrokers into recognizing the importance of the political cartoon weekly. They financed newspaperman W. J. Arkell's purchase of Judge in 1886 to turn it into a reliable Republican house organ.

Numerous other Puck imitators emerged in the 1880s but quickly died. Note should be made of two that did not: the Puck-like San Francisco Wasp, which debuted August 5, 1876 (too early for it to be considered a Puck knockoff), and the black and white Texas Siftings, which debuted on May 9, 1881. Though neither was as successful as Puck or Judge, both cut their own paths, managing to survive as cartoon humor magazines into the 1890s.

Also worthy of mention is the New York City newspaper The Daily Graphic (March 4, 1873 to Sept 23, 1889), which claims the distinction of being the first regularly illustrated daily newspaper in the world, published every day except Sundays and holidays. The majority of its illustrations were portraits or depictions of news events, but nearly every issue contained some comic drawing, many of them gracing the front cover.

With so many pages to fill on a daily basis, The Daily Graphic became a rotating door for many young American cartoonists in the early stages of their careers (making one suspect that it was not the best paying gig in town). Within its pages, like needles to be found in the haystack of its more than 4800 issues, is early work by Livingston Hopkins (who mysteriously appears, vanishes, reappears, etc., for months to whole years at a time, right up to his 1884 departure to Australia), pre-Life work by Kemble, pre-Harper's appearances by A.B. Frost and W.A. Rogers, pre-Puck and Judge Opper, C.J. Taylor, Hamilton, and Gillam. Old hats, too, appear at times, such as Michael Woolf and Frank Bellew, Sr.

Further, The Daily Graphic regularly plundered British periodicals for its back and sometimes center pages, not only perpetrating the usual swipes of single-panel Punch cartoons, but also stealing sequential strips from Punch's two main rival publications, Judy and Fun. This included occasionally reprinting (albeit at random) episodes of continuing British strips "The British Workman" by James Sullivan, and "McNab of that Ilk" by James Brown, though, strangely enough, not Marie Duval's Ally Sloper, despite the fact that The Daily Graphic did reprint some of Duval's non-"Sloper" strips. ("Ally Sloper" was a continuing sequential strip character who debuted in 1867, lasting into the 1920s, and had very successful solo British book collections of his strip appearances published as early as 1873, more than two decades prior to Yellow Kid in McFadden's Flats).

Livingston Hopkins, whose art style changed like a chameleon from one year to the next, exhibited a definite Duval influence in his work within a year following the publication of the first Ally Sloper collection. Given that Hopkins worked for The Daily Graphic during the same period in which this newspaper was stealing cartoons from Sloper's home publication, Judy, this can hardly be considered coincidental. Hopkins contributed a daily comic strip to The Daily Graphic in 1874-75, complete with word balloons. By the time Hopkins was preparing to emigrate to Australia to become lead cartoonist for the Sydney Bulletin, his art style was an imitation of Kemble's, who was also working at The Daily Graphic.

Life debuted on January 4, 1883, founded by J.A. Mitchell, and modeled after the Harvard Lampoon. It quickly rose to become the third main pillar of late 1800s American humor periodicals. Smaller in size, black and white, and priced the same as Puck and Judge, it nevertheless succeeded by appealing to a more genteel audience. Its earliest artists included Kemble and Palmer Cox, but its foremost artist was Charles Dana Gibson, becoming world renowned as the hand behind the graceful, aristocratic "Gibson Girls."

Unlike Judge, which had to become a low-brow imitation of Life to survive in the next century, and Puck, which attempted but failed to become an American version of the highbrow European humor magazines, Life transitioned into the 20th century virtually unaltered, and thrived. By the mid-1880s, with Puck, Judge, and Life all solidly in place, American comics and cartoon humor had come very much into their own, no longer looking first at Europe to take their cues.

Almanacs began to appear in America starting in 1639. Humor was introduced as early as 1647 by Samuel Danforth. A very important one was Leed Almanac beginning in 1687. John Tulley produced the first humorous almanac in 1688. James Franklin, brother of Ben, began the Rhode Island Almanac in 1728 using the name "Poor Robin" and his younger brother began Poor Richard's Almanac in 1732. Farmer's Almanac began in 1792 and used some humor.

The first comic almanac totally devoted to humor was published by Charles Ellm in Boston in 1831 and featured the artwork of D.C. Johnston. Perhaps the most famous comic almanacs (certainly the most valuable) are the Davy Crockett series (1835-1856) which began in Nashville, Tennessee. The comic periodicals all ended up issuing comic almanacs beginning with Yankee Notions in 1856 and continuing into the 1890s with a one-shot comic almanac published by Judge for the year 1894.

Beginning in the 1850s, a new breed of almanacs appeared. Usually created by medicine and farm product companies, they were distributed for free to promote the company's product. Competition amongst companies, whose goal was to get customers to read the almanacs and the advertisements contained therein again and again, meant that attention-getting humorous cartoons soon found their way back into these giveaway pamphlets. Initially their cartoons were done cheap, either poorly drawn or pirated from elsewhere, such as those found in the Hostetter's and Wright's almanac series. More elaborate promotional almanacs eventually did evolve, though, and amongst the best of these was Barker's Illustrated Almanac, first produced for the year 1878, and annually into the 1930s. Each Barker's Almanac contained ten to twelve full page cartoons, wonderful and bizarre in design, frequently racist, but also comically manic and crammed with details in a manner similar to Outcault's much later Yellow Kid pages. The cartoons in Barker's Almanac were so popular that in 1892, The Barker, Moore, and Mein Medicine Company published their first edition of Barker's Komic Picture Souvenir, reprinting nearly 150 pages of cartoons from their almanacs.

Flag of Our Union, July 23, 1870, sample panels from Pt 1 of a 3 part comic strip depicting early baseball game.

This first Barker's Souvenir features a wraparound color cover depicting people headed towards the Columbian World's Fair Exposition, which was to be held in Chicago the next year. It is the earliest confirmed "premium" comic book, sent to customers who mailed in a box label and outside wrapper from two different Barker's products. The Souvenir album was Barker's most in-demand premium. It was reprinted as a thick unnumbered booklet three more times in the 1890s, with the contents reorganized each time. Later, between 1901 and 1903, Barker's broke the album into three separate "Parts," each of which required still more box labels and wrappers to obtain. The 3-part series of reprint albums expanded to four parts circa 1906 or 1907. Both the 3 and 4-part album series had multiple printings.

Also very American in character were the country's promotional comics, which flourished throughout the latter half of the 19th century. They trace their beginnings to Comic Almanacs, which flourished in England and the United States since they first appeared in the 1830s. The first promotional comics which did not double as almanacs began to appear in the 1870s. They included the aforementioned reprints of Cruikshank and Busch strips, reprints of strips lifted from American sources (A.B. Frost's strip "The Bull Calf" was a particular favorite), and original material placing the product being promoted as the focus of the story. These original short cartoon dramas were in many ways similar in storyline to those found in modern television advertisements, except that the clothing is Victorian, and the claims, pre-F.D.A. and F.C.C., were unabashedly wild, over-the-top, and blunt. Chewing tobacco and snuff saved romances, calmed crying babies, and made the sick well. Stove polish that propelled you to wealth and power. Corsets that brought you a husband. The objective, of course, in an era before TV or radio, was to make each comic handout so entertaining that customers would want to keep and read the advertisement again and again.

The more wonderful graphics and outrageous claims tended to come from tobacco companies, who were using comic books and strips to sell their products more than a century before cries against "Joe Camel." The most elaborate of these were printed full color, and unfolded into a single long strip, just like Cruikshank's The Tooth-Ache from the 1840s, though usually limited to just the cover plus seven panels.

Examples are the Jackson Chewing Tobacco comics How Adolphus Slim-Jim Used Jackson's Best and Ye Veracious Chronicle of Gruff and Pompey, and Durham Smoking Tobacco's Home Made Happy - A Romance for Married Men. The artists of these comics are mostly unidentified, but their level of skill was equal to anything in Puck and Judge. The Home Made Happy Comic, in fact, was produced for Durham by The Graphic Company -- the publisher of The Daily Graphic, the aforementioned 1870s illustrated newspaper which included cartoons.

The earliest known anthology devoted to collecting the comic strips of a single American artist was A.B. Frost's Stuff and Nonsense in 1884. The next known American collection came in 1888, the very rare Frederick Burr Opper anthology, Puck's Opper Book. Both proved popular, so more Frost and Opper collections followed, to be joined within a few years by reprints collecting the cartoons and strips of Keppler, Kemble, Zim, Gibson, Mayer, Taylor, Frank Bellew's son "Chip," Howarth, Woolf, etc.

Puck, Judge, and Texas Siftings all began monthly Library series - 8-1/2" x 11" magazines, mostly black and white, which organized previously published material around one theme or one artist. For example, the first Puck's Library (July 1887) was titled "The National Game," and gathered beneath one cover Puck material poking fun at the game of baseball. The third (March 1888) and ninth (November 1889) issues of Judge's Serial (later named Judge's Library) were devoted entirely to the work of Zim.

Life tended more towards hardcover collections, such as its annual ten-issue series The Good Things of Life (1884-1893), which included cartoons and strips by Palmer Cox, T.S. Sullivant, Hy Mayer, and others. The Good Things of Life was published initially by the firm of White, Stokes, and Allen, but which by the fourth book, had become simply Frederick A. Stokes. Stokes published a number of other cartoon books in the 1880s and 1890s, the majority of them reprint collections. The experience he gained at this time with these reprint albums placed Stokes in the perfect position to pick up the wealth of material about to be created for the comics supplements of William R. Hearst's newspapers, making Stokes the first major publisher of the coming Platinum Age.

In 1892, Charles Scribner's Sons published A. B. Frost's Bull Calf and Other Tales. It contains sequential comic strip art on quite a few pages as well as single panel cartoons. By 1898, Charles Scribner's Sons also issued Kemble's The Billy Goat and Other Comicalities as a 112-page hardcover, which also has sequential comic strips.

In the early 1890s, the slum children cartoons of artist Michael Woolf (many of which were reprinted in the 1896 collection 99 Woolfs from Truth and in the posthumous 1899 collection Sketches of Lowly Life in a Great City) were popular. Truth magazine, which followed Puck's format of color front cover, back cover and centerspread cartoons, but in style was more akin to the aristocratic Life, was initially unable to secure Woolf's services, creating an opportunity for the young cartoonist Richard F. Outcault, who desired to break into one of the weekly comic periodicals.

It was in his Woolf-inspired slum children cartoons for Truth that Outcault's prototype of the Yellow Kid first emerged. The bald, sack-clothed youngster made four appearances in Truth, starting with #372 on June 2, 1894, prior to his newspaper debut.

During the rise of Yellow Kid's popularity, he appeared in American comic magazines in parodies drawn by others, with politicians, even Hearst and Pulitzer, dressed up as the Yellow Kid. Such cartoons are known to have appeared in Judge, Life, The Bee, and Vim plus various newspapers across the country. More about the Yellow Kid's importance can be found in the Platinum Age section of this book.

While comics definitely have their roots in Europe, and the earliest American comic books either reprinted or emulated those of Europe, the direction of influence was by no means one way. By at least the 1870s, American cartoons were being published and seen in the Old World, as evidenced by the arrest in Spain of the on-the-lamb corrupt Tammany Hall politician Boss Tweed by Spanish police who recognized Tweed from a Nast cartoon.

European piracy of American cartoons was just as lucrative as the American piracy of Europeans. In the 1880s and '90s, the comics of Zim, Chip Bellew, and Charles Dana Gibson all saw reprint in Europe. In April 1899, Pictorial Comedy, a monthly magazine destined for a ten-year run, commenced publication in London. It was made up entirely of cartoons reprinted with permission from Puck and Life. F.M. Howarth's domestic comedies from Puck were favorites in France. American Hy Mayer was commissioned to create original comics work for Black and White (Britain), Le Rire (France), and Fliegende Blätter. Michael Woolf's slum children cartoons saw print in the British periodical Pick-Me-Up, during the same years that top British artist Phil May's first published work debuted in that publication. May later became famous for his Woolf-inspired street children cartoons as well as his influence on the development of comics in Australia.

As the 19th Century ended, American comics were coming to the fore worldwide, soon to explode into a position of dominance with the Platinum Age revolution brought about by the emergence of the color comic supplement in America's newspapers and the arrival of Richard F. Outcault's Yellow Kid.

END NOTE: Victorian Era comics were issued in many relatively obscure formats compared to what most of us are used to today. The Victorian Era section can only grow as there are many more heretofore undiscovered comics from the 1800s which have fallen off the radar of history. Some may wonder why some of the earlier items listed contain as of yet no prices. The reason is simple. These books are part of a relatively "new" market which is still establishing itself.

High-grade copies are almost unheard of in almost all instances. Some books may truly have only a handful left in existence. We are sure there are some known to have been published which no (as of yet) known copies have survived the ravages of time and neglect.

Each year expect another quantum leap in our ever-expanding knowledge of the fascinating earliest origins of the comic strip as it relates to North America. Your input in helping this section of the Guide grow and mature is most welcome!

He now owns Robert Beerbohm Comic Art that specializes in buying and selling scarce comics and related material from the 1840s-1980s. COLLECTOR'S NOTE: Most of the books listed in this section were published well over a century before organized comics fandom began archiving and helping to preserve these fragile popular culture artifacts. With some of these comics now over 160 years old, they almost never surface in Fine+ or better shape. Be happy when you simply find a copy.

This year has seen price growth in quite a few comic books in this era. Since this section began growing almost a decade now, comic books from Wilson, Brother Jonathan, Huestis & Cozans, Garrett, Dick & Fitzgerald, Frank Leslie, Street & Smith and others continue to be recognized by the more savvy in this fine hobby as legitimate comic book collectors' items. We had been more concerned with simply establishing what is known to exist. For the most part, that work is now a fait accompli in this section compiled, revised, and expanded by Robert Beerbohm with special thanks this year to Terrance Keegan plus acknowledgment to Bill Blackbeard, Chris Brown, Alfredo Castelli, Darrell Coons, Leonardo De Sá, Scott Deschaine, Joe Evans, Ron Friggle, Tom Gordon III, Michel Kempeneers, Andy Konkykru, Don Kurtz, Richard Olson, Robert Quesinberry, Joseph Rainone, Steve Rowe, Randy Scott, John Snyder, Art Spiegelman, Steve Thompson, Richard Samuel West, Doug Wheeler and Richard Wright. Special kudos to long-time collector and scholar Gabriel Laderman.

The prices given for Fair, Good and Fine categories are for strictly graded editions. If you need help grading your item, we refer you to the grading section in this book or contact the authors of this essay. Items marked Scarce, Rare or Very Rare we are still trying to figure out how many copies might still be in existence. We welcome additions and corrections from any interested collectors and scholars at robert@BLBcomics.com

NOTE: Earliest known original sequential comic book by an American creator; directly inspired by Töpffer's Obadiah Oldbuck and Bachelor Butterfly The New York and Cincinnati editions were both published in 1849, one soon after the other. Antiquarian Book sources have traditionally cited that the Cincinnati edition preceded the New York, but without referencing their evidence. Conflicting with this, the Cincinnati edition lists the New York publishers' 1849 copyright, while the New York edition makes no reference to the Cincinnati publishers. Such would indicate that the New York edition was first. Both are very rare, and until resolved both will be regarded as published simultaneously. A New York copy with missing back cover, detached front cover, and G/VG interior sold for $2000 in 2000. Two copies sold at auction in 2006 for $11,500 and 12,000. (Prices vary widely.)

Contains two sequential comic booklets: THE ADVENTURES OF MR. TOM PLUMP, and OLD MOTHER MITTEN AND HER FUNNY KITTEN, plus five heavily illustrated children's booklets - The Pretty Primer, The Funny Book, The Picture Book, The Two Sisters, and Story Of The Little Drummer. Seminal inspiration for William Randolph Hearst to acquire as a "new comic" (following the wild success of Outcault's Yellow Kid) to license M&M from Busch and hire Rudolph Dirks in late 1897 to create a New York American newspaper incarnation. In Hearst's English language newspapers it was called The Katzenjammer Kids and in his German language NYC newspaper it was titled Max & Moritz, Busch's original title. At least 50 other reprints versions are reputed to exist printed thru 1900. Translated from the 1865 German original. We are still sorting out the edition confusion.*

Early 19th century books are often found rebound, with original cover and/or title page gone. To distinguish editions having no cover or title page: the British oblong editions (published by Tilt & Bogue) use Roman Numerals to number pages. American oblong shaped editions use Arabic Numerals. British are printed on one side only. This is the earliest known English language sequential comic book. Has a new title page with art by Robert Cruikshank.*

NOTE: Art by Joseph Keppler, F. Opper, F.M. Howarth, C.J. Taylor, W.A. Rogers. This was a separate, parallel run of Puck, published during the 1893 Chicago World's Fair from within the fairgrounds, and containing all new and different material than the regular weekly Puck. Smaller sized and priced the same, this originally sold poorly, and had not as wide distribution as Puck, and so consequently issues are much more rare than regular Puck issues from the same period. Not to be confused with the larger sized regular Puck issues from 1893 which sometimes also contained World's Fair related material, and sometimes had the words "World's Fair" appear on the cover. Can also be distinguished by the fact that Puck's issue numbering was in the 800's in 1893, while these issue number 1 through 26.

NEWSPAPERS HARNESS COMICS POWER MYRIAD FORMATS COMPETE

by Robert Lee Beerbohm and Richard D. Olson, PhD ©2009, 2011

(This article was originally created by Robert L. Beerbohm and Richard D. Olson beginning in CBPG #27 1997 and is revised annually as new information comes to light.)

The story of the success of the modern comic strip as we know it today is tied closely to the companies who sponsored and bought licenses from the copyright holder for the purpose of advertising products. Platinum Age comic books have come back into their own after languishing mostly forgotten for a few decades. With this series of comics history research updates now marking its first decade, these historically important books are seem by many now as very collectible. Online sources such as eBay and bookfinder.com have demonstrate that many of these Platinum books are actually not scarce at all as previously thought, though they are in any type of higher-grade condition. Even so, most Platinum Age books are much rarer than so-called Golden Age comic books, yet despite this scarcity, Mutt & Jeff, Bringing Up Father, The Katzenjammer Kids, and many more were more popular than say Superman and Batman when they were introduced. Recent research has come up with some more amazing rediscoveries. There is much that can be learned and applied to today's comics market by a simple historical examination of the medium's evolution over more than 160 years.

The Brownies' first book, 1887 by Palmer Cox, set a precedent for the Platinum Age, collecting and reprinting previously published material.

It should be noted that "ages" are applied to historical periods in the history of comics for convenience. In fact, ages typically overlap and there is no discrete beginning or ending for any given "age." This is the case with the Platinum Age, which clearly began with Palmer Cox's creation of The Brownies in 1883 even though it overlaps with the Victorian Age which ran through the end of the 19th Century. Cox introduced a qualitative change to the field, not an incremental quantitative change. Specifically, he produced art and verse for children in children's magazines and then merchandised those characters. He published work for children not only in books but in magazines and newspapers, and he merchandised his creations to an extent that had never been done previously.

Palmer Cox was born in 1840 near Granby, Quebec. He journeyed to Oakland, California in 1863, and began publishing cartoon, prose and poems in the local press and media outlets such as The San Francisco Examiner wherein by 1867 it has been reported he also began creating sequential comic strips, though none have yet surfaced.

His first book, Squibs of California, was published in 1874. He subsequently moved to New York in 1875 and almost immediately began working for the magazine Wild Oats, of which more is written about in the preceding Victorian Age history introduction as well as a sample of his sequential work. He drew dozens of sequential comic strips for Wild Oats, a humor magazine so scarce only one issue has been offered on eBay in the past six years.

Soon thereafter he became a major contributor to the Scribner publications, including The St. Nicholas, an illustrated magazine for young folk. His first cartoon for them was "The Wasp And The Bee," published in the March 1879 cover-date issue. While it is now clear that Cox used elves and brownie-like characters in his art for several different magazines as early as 1877 in Harper's Young People magazine as well as using Brownies-type characters beginning in the Feb

The Brownies in the Philippines by Palmer Cox, Oct 1904 - scarce original art from the book. President Roosevelt is pictured within these multitudes of Brownie madness, a Cox "signature trademark." Cox's stories are comic strip-oriented in nature of time sequence as he boldly took his Brownies around the world.

1881 issue of Wide Awake, the first true appearance of the Brownies in their own story using that title, a combination of art and verse was February, 1883, in St. Nicholas. Palmer Cox's The Brownies were the first North American comics-type characters to be internationally merchandised. Even though Cox was continuously doing sequential comic strips in magazines like Wild Oats, he left the popular medium of comics when he hit paydirt with The Brownies. For over a quarter of a century, Cox deftly combined the popular advertising motifs of animals and fairies into a wonderful, whimsical world of society at its best and worst.

The Inter Ocean Jr.

[Supplement to The Sunday Inter Ocean.]

VOL. XXIII., SUNDAY MAY 27, 1894. NO. 64.

-PHONOGRAPH-
DROP A NICKEL IN THE SLOT AND HEAR THE SONGS.

THE TING-LINGS LISTEN TO THE PHONOGRAPH.

Chicago Inter Ocean Jr., May 27, 1894
Cover of The Ting-Lings by Charles W. Saalburg, was inspired by Palmer Cox's The Brownies and later provided inspiration for Outcault's Yellow Kid.

The Brownies' first book was issued in 1887, titled The Brownies: Their Book; many more followed. Cox also added a run of his hugely popular characters in Ladies Home Journal from October 1891 through February 1895, as well as a special for December 1910. With the 1892-93 World's Fair, the merchandising exploded with a host of products, including pianos, paper dolls and other figurines, chairs, stoves, puzzles, cough drops, coffee, soap, boots, candy, and many more. Brownies material was being produced in Europe as well as the United States of America.

Cox tried out The Brownies as a newspaper strip in the San Francisco Examiner during 1898, where he had begun his newspaper career over 30 years before, and then in the New York World in 1900. It was then syndicated from 1903 through 1907. He seems to have retired from regularly drawing The Brownies with the January 1914 issue of St. Nicholas when he was 74. A wealthy man, he lived to the ripe old age of 84, spending his last decade in his home he affectionately called Brownie Castle, back in Granby, Quebec.

By the mid-1890s, while keeping careful track of steadily rising circulations of magazines with graphic humor such as Harper's, Puck, St. Nicholas, Judge, Life and Truth, New York based newspaper publishers began to recognize that illustrated humor would sell extra papers. This is what The Yellow Kid taught these publishers. Thus was born the Sunday "comic supplement." Most of the super star favorites were under contract with these magazines. However, there was an artist working for Truth who wasn't. Roy L McCardell, then a staffer at Puck, informed Morrill Goddard, Sunday Editor of The New York World, that he knew someone who could fit what was needed at the then-largest newspaper in America.

Richard F. Outcault (1863-1928) first introduced his street children strip in Truth #372, June 2, 1894, somewhat inspired by Michael Angelo Woolf's slum kids single panel cartoons in Life which had begun in the mid 1880s. The interested collector should seek out a copy of Woolf's Sketches of Lowly Life In A Great City (1899) listed in the Guide for comparison study. Edward Harrigan's play "O'Reilly and the Four Hundred," which had a song beginning with the words "Down in Hogan's Alley..." also likely provided direct inspiration.

It's also probable that Outcault's Hogan's Alley cast, including the Yellow Kid, was inspired by Charles W. Saalburg's The Ting Lings, which began in the Chicago Inter Ocean Jr supplement post-dated May 1, 1894 in the April 29, 1894 edition of Chicago Inter Ocean. That first episode is titled: "The Brownies Welcome The Ting-Lings."

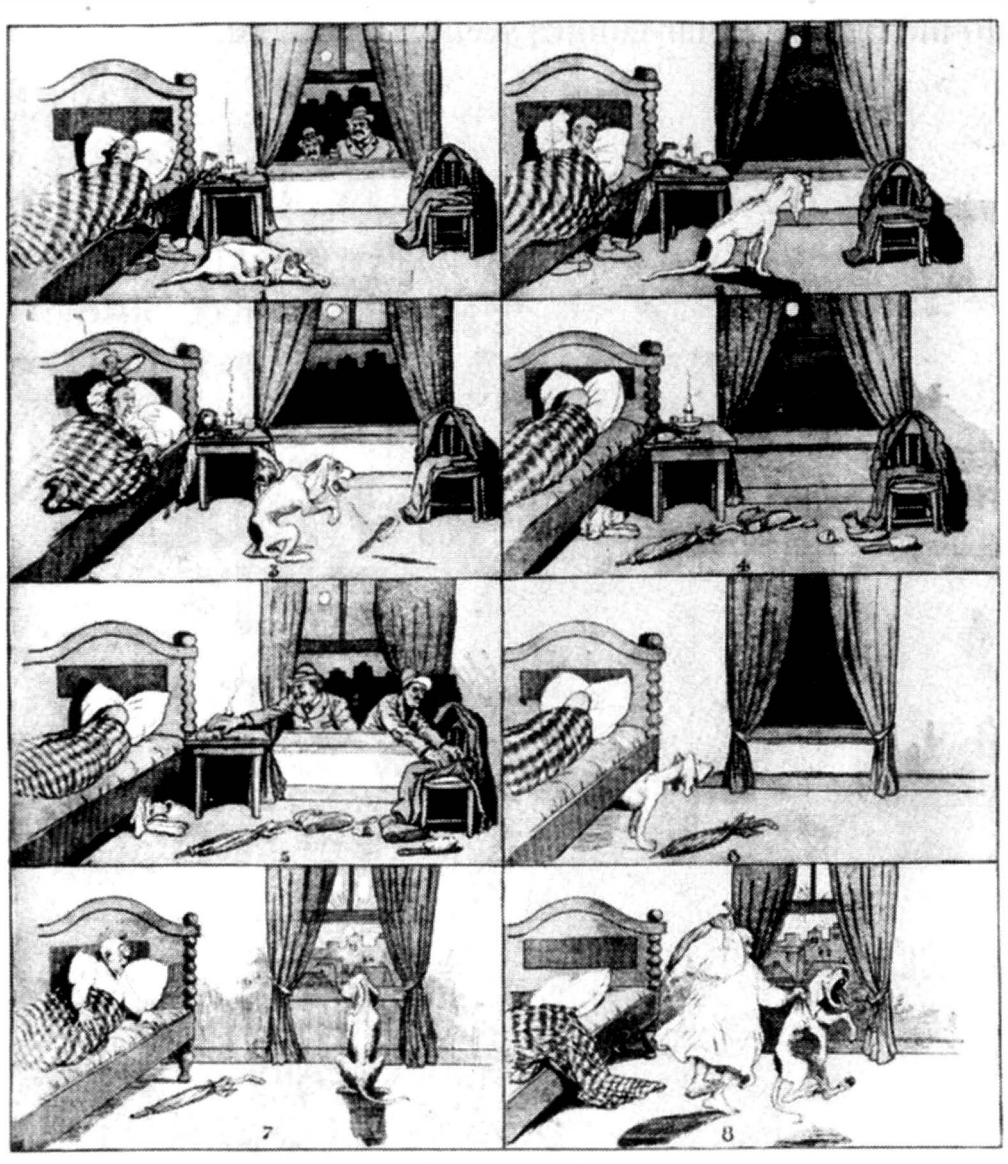
There is also a definite similarity in Mickey Dugan's appearance and clothing style to Saalburg's creation which we will now examine in more detail thanks to welcome, on-going research by long time comics historian Allan Holtz supplemented by living comics history legend Bill Blackbeard .

Charles Saalzburg was an artist who was also the genius behind color printing in newspapers. He seems to have pioneered the concept from whom all others learned their craft.

On June 23, 1892 the Chicago Inter Ocean introduced a section with mostly editorial cartoons titled the Illustrated Supplement, commemorating the Democratic National Convention held in that city. Early regulars included Thomas Nast and Art Young. Starting June 26, the Inter Ocean began steadily issuing this weekly four page supplement, typically featuring full page editorial cartoons on its front and back covers. In May 1893 the supplement began coming out twice a week, and even greater frequency to daily during the World Columbian Exposition held in Chicago later that same year as it was used as a wrapper to attract sales from fair goers. Art Young did some of the color cover art and comic strips for the early Fair supplements, printing them right at the Fair to goggle-eyed fair tourists. Thomas Nast did some art as well during a visit he made to the Fair.

By September 10, 1893 the Inter Ocean introduced color, a multi-panel editorial comic strip by Charles Saalburg. The supplement used yellow ink, a further nail in the coffin of various Yellow Kid myths which had clouded serious comics scholarship in earlier decades before being proven wrong.

On October 1, Tom E. Powers introduced their first sequential non-political comic strip in color, a humorous pantomime.



As the Exposition ended in November, the contents were soon aimed more at children, enhanced with color added to the center as well by December 24, 1893, then changing its title to Inter Ocean Jr in January 1894. This was accomplished easily by folding the single four page sheet into eight pages.

In the January 1894 Saalburg began using Brownies-inspired characters in his color comic strips. The present theory is the Ting-Ling characters took over solo five months later in response to a presumed cease and desist letter which inevitably must have been issued from Palmer Cox to the Inter Ocean.

However, on July 8 1894, the Inter Ocean Jr stopped color and full page comics-type work in this supplement, devolving back to simple small spot art works. By mid-1894, color comics printing genius Saalburg had been lured to Pulitzer's New York World, becoming Art Director in charge of coloring for the new color printing press at the New York World. The color supplement was soon to be unleashed in the largest city in America.

By the November 18, 1894 issue of the World, Outcault was working for Goddard and Saalburg. Outcault produced a successful Sunday newspaper sequential comic strip in color with "The Origin of a New Species" on the back page in the World's first colored Sunday supplement. Long time pro Walt McDougall, a famous cartoonist reputed to have turned the 1884 Presidential race with a single cartoon that ran in the World, handled the cartoon art on the front page. Earlier, The World began running full page color single panels on May 21, 1893. McDougall did various other page panels during 1893, but it was Jan. 28, 1894 when the first sequence of comic pictures in a New York World newspaper appeared in panels in the same format as our comic strips today. It was a full page cut up into nine panels. This historic sequence was drawn entirely in pantomime, with no words, by Mark Fenderson.

Walt McDougall & Mark Fenderson, the 2nd sequential comic strip in New York World, February 4, 1894, predates Yellow Kid in The World by over a year. Mark Fenderson drew the first NY World newspaper comic strip.

The second page to appear in panels was an eight panel strip from February 4, 1894, also lacking words except for the title. This page was a collaboration between Walt McDougall and Mark Fenderson titled "The Unfortunate Fate of a Well-Intentioned Dog." From then on, many full page color strips by McDougall and Fenderson appeared; they were the first cartoonists to draw for the Sunday newspaper comic section. It was Outcault, however, who soon became the most famous cartoonist featured. After first appearing in black and white in Pulitzer's The New York World on February 17, 1895 and again on March 10, 1895, The Yellow Kid was introduced to the public in color on May 5, 1895.

Some have erroneously reported in scholarly journals that perhaps it was Frank Ladendorf's "Uncle Reuben," first introduced May 26, 1895, which became the first regularly recurring comics character in newspapers. This is wrong, as even Outcault's "Yellow Kid" began in Pulitzer's paper a good three months before Uncle Reuben. Until firm evidence to the contrary comes to light, that honor will forever be enshrined with Jimmy Swinnerton's Little Bears cartoon characters, found all over inside Hearst's San Francisco Examiner beginning October 14, 1893 with the first one called "Baby Monarch. Though never actually a comic strip, they nonetheless were the earliest presently-known recurring comics-type characters in American newspapers. In June 1895, a semi-regular "Little Bears" feature began. On January 26, 1896, children were introduced, the title eventually changed to "Little Bears and Tykes," forever confusing some scholars decades later. There never was a strip titled Little Bears and Tigers, as the Tigers were strictly for New York consumption when Hearst ordered Swinnerton to move to the Big Apple to compete better in the brewing comic strip wars.

The Yellow Kid's importance is widely recognized today as the first newspaper comic strip to demonstrate without a doubt that the general public was ready for full color comics. The Yellow Kid was the first in the USA to show that comics could increase newspaper sales, and that comic characters could be merchandised. The Yellow Kid was the headlining spark of what was soon dubbed by Hearst as "eight pages of polychromatic effulgence that makes the rainbow look like a lead pipe."

Ongoing research suggests that Palmer Cox's fabulous success with The Brownies was a direct inspiration for Richard Outcault's future merchandising work. The ultimate proof lies in the fourth Yellow Kid cartoon, which appeared in the February 9, 1895 issue of Truth. It was reprinted in the New York World eight days later on February 17, 1895, becoming the first Yellow Kid cartoon in the newspapers. The caption read "FOURTH WARD BROWNIES. MICKEY, THE ARTIST (adding a finishing touch) Dere, Chimmy! If Palmer Cox wuz t' see yer, he'd git yer copyrighted in a minute." The Yellow Kid was widely licensed in the greater New York area for all kinds of products, including gum and cigarette cards, toys, pinbacks, cookies, postcards, tobacco products, and appliances. There was also a short-lived humor magazine from Street & Smith named The Yellow Kid, featuring exquisite Outcault covers, plus a 196-page comic book from Dillingham & Co. known as The Yellow Kid in McFadden's Flats, dated to early 1897. Check out the covers in "The Platinum Age" three-page comic strip elsewhere in this Guide. In addition, there were several Yellow Kid plays produced, spawning other collectibles like show posters, programs and illustrated sheet music. (For those interested in more information regarding the Yellow Kid, it is available on the Internet at www.neponset.com/yellowkid.)

Mickey Dugan burned brightly for a few years as Outcault secured a copyright on the character with the United States Government by September 1896. By the time he completed the necessary paperwork, however, hundreds of business people nationwide had pirated the image of The Yellow Kid and plastered it all over every product imaginable; mothers were even dressing their newborns to look like Dugan. Outcault, however, kept regularly utilizing images of The Yellow Kid in his comics style advertising work confirmed as late as 1915. Outcault soon found himself in a maelstrom not of his choosing, which probably pushed him to eventually drop the character. Outcault's creation went back and forth between newspaper giants Pulitzer and Hearst until Bennett's New York Herald mercifully snatched the cartoonist away in 1900 to do what amounted to a few relatively short-run strips. Later, he did one particular strip for a year–a satire of rural Black America titled Pore Li'l Mose His Letters to his Mammy, and then his newer creation, Buster Brown, debuted May 4, 1902. Mose had a very rare comic book collection published in 1902 by Cupples & Leon, now highly sought after by today's savvy collectors. Outcault continued drawing him in the background of occasional Buster Brown strips for many years to come.

William Randolph Hearst loved the comic strip medium ever since he was a little boy growing up on Max & Moritz by Wilhelm Busch in American collected book editions translated from the original German (these collections were first published in book form in 1871, serving as the influence for The Katzenjammer Kids). One of the ways Hearst responded to losing Outcault in 1900 was by purchasing the highly successful 23-year-old humor magazine Puck from the heirs of founder Joseph Keppler. With Puck and its exclusive cartoonist contracts, he commanded, among others, the very popular F. M. Howarth and Frederick Burr Opper's undivided attention. Opper first burst upon the comics scene in America back in 1880. Within a year Hearst had expanded this National Lampoon of its day into the colored Sunday comics section, Puck-The Comic Weekly. At first featuring Rudolph Dirk's The Katzenjammer Kids (1897), Happy Hooligan and other fine strips by the wildly popular Opper and a few others including Rudolph's brother Gus Dirks, the Hearst comic section steadily added more strips. For decades to come, there wasn't anything else that could compete with Puck. Hearst hired the best of the best and transformed Puck into the most popular comics section anywhere.

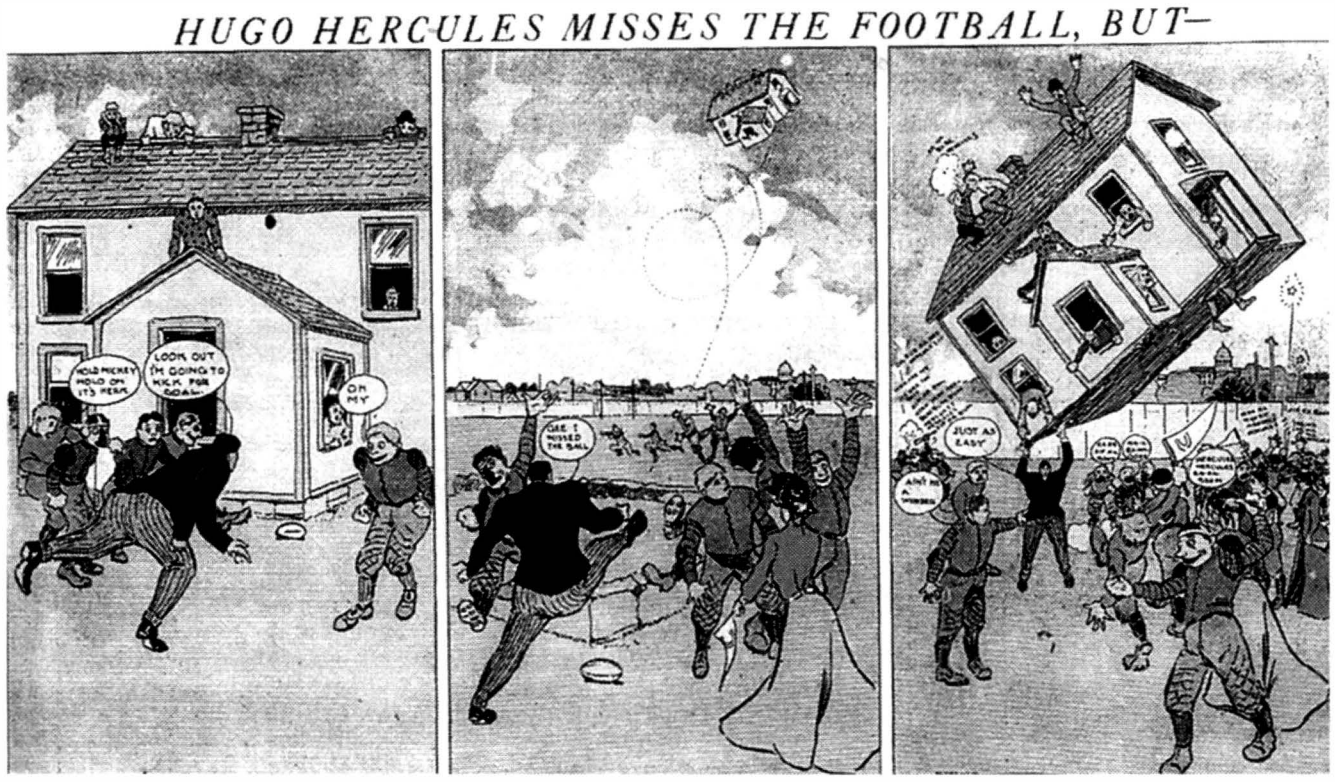
Outcault, meanwhile, followed in Palmer Cox's footprints a decade later by using the nexus of a World's Fair as a jumping off venue. Buster Brown was an instant sensation when he debuted as the new merchandising mascot of the Brown Shoe Company at the 1904 St. Louis World's Fair in a special Buster Brown Shoes pavilion. The character has the honor of being the first nationally licensed comic strip character in America with this time Outcault in almost full control. Many hundreds of different Buster Brown premiums have been issued. Comic books by Frederick A. Stokes Company featuring Buster Brown & His Dog Tige began as early as 1903 with Buster Brown and His Resolutions, simultaneously published in several different languages throughout the world.

After a few years, Buster and Outcault returned to Hearst in late 1905, joining what soon became the flagship of the comics world. Buster's popularity quickly spread all over the United States and then the world as he single-handedly spawned the first great comic strip licensing dynasty. For years, there were little people traveling from town to town performing as Buster Brown and selling shoes while accompanied by small dogs named Tige. Many other highly competitive licensed strips would soon follow. We suggest getting Hake's Price Guide to Character Toys for info on several hundred Buster Brown competitors, as well as several pages of the more fascinating Buster Brown material.

Soon there were many comic strip syndicates not only offering hundreds of various comic strips but also offering to license the characters for any company interested in paying the fee. The history of the comic strip with wide popularity since The Yellow Kid has been intertwined with giveaway premiums and character-based, store-bought merchandise of all kinds. Since its infancy as a profitable art form unto itself with The Yellow Kid, the comic strip world has profited from selling all sorts of "stuff" to the public featuring their favorite character or strip as its motif. American business gladly responded to the desire for comic character memorabilia with thousands of fun items to enjoy and collect. Most of the early comics were not aimed specifically at kids, though children understandably enjoyed them as well.



Comic books have generally been associated with almost all of the licensed merchandise in this century. In the Platinum Age section beginning right after this essay, you will find a great many comic books in varied formats and sizes published before the advent of the first successful monthly newsstand comic magazine, Famous Funnies. What drove each of these evolutionary format changes was the need by their producers to make money so more books could be issued.

A very significant format was F. M. Howarth's Funny Folks, published in 1899 by E. P. Dutton and drawn from color as well as black and white pages of Puck. This rather large hardcover volume measured 16 1/2" wide by 12" tall. It contains numerous sequential comic strip pages as well as single gag illustrations. Howarth's art was a joy to behold and deserves wider recognition.

By Oct. 1900, Hearst had already caused Opper's Folks In Funnyville to be collected by publisher R. H. Russell, NY in a 12x9 hard cover format from his New York Journal American Humorist section. At the end of 1900, Carl Shultze had a first edition of Vaudevilles and Other Things published by Isaac H. Blanchard Co., NY. It measures 10 1/2" wide by 13" tall with 22 pages including covers. Each interior page is a 2 to 7 panel comic strip with lots of color.

There were also recently unearthed format variation second and third printings of Vaudevilles with the inscription "From the Originator of the 'Foxy Grandpa' Series" at the bottom of its front cover of the third printing. This note is lacking on the earlier first two editions, and it also switches format size to 11" tall by 13" wide. Discovered last year was a heretofore undocumented The Adventures of Foxy Grandpa - also issued in 1900 - new to the Platinum listings. The second number dated 1901 drops the words "The Adventures of..." from the title.

E. W. Kemble's The Blackberries had a color collection by 1901, also published by R. H. Russell, NY, as well as a few other comic-related volumes by Kemble still to be unearthed and properly identified. An earlier one was titled Coontown's 400 (1899) newly listed this year. While the title is definitely not "PC" by today's standards, Kemble's drawings are excellent slices of African-American life in the USA with some humor injected. Kemble did a good job documenting aspects of life.

The Chicago Tribune introduced a straight super hero with obvious super strength called "Hugo Hercules" by the unknown artist J. Koerner. This Sunday strip ran September 7, 1902 through January 11, 1903 and ran only in this one paper. It is entirely possible a very young Chicago-resident named Philip Wylie read "Hugo" since that was the same name he gave his super-heroic main character in his much-later book The Gladiator (1930). Other appearances have Hugo running with almost super speed.

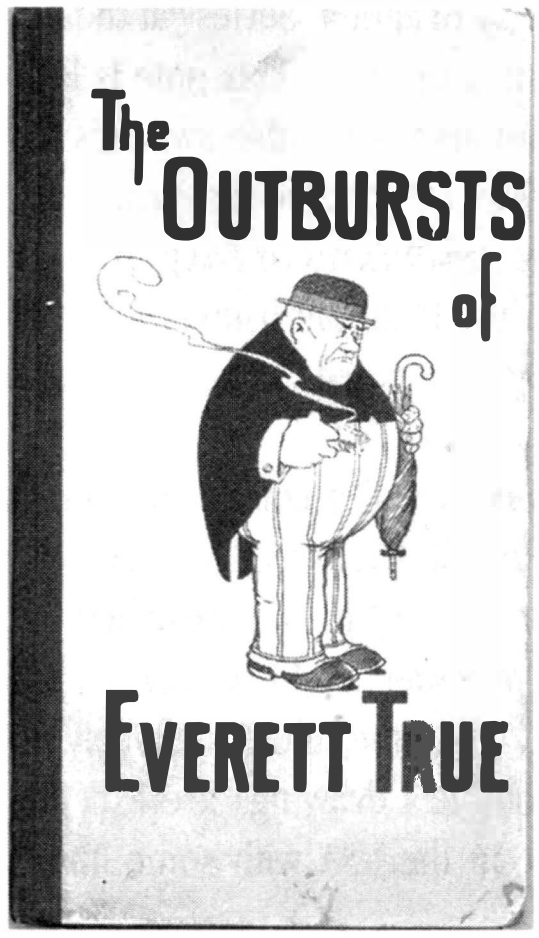
Confirmed is the exact format of Hearst's 1902 The Katzenjammer Kids and Happy Hooligan And His Brother Gloomy Gus. They both measure 15 5/16" wide by 10" tall and contain 88 pages including covers. Confirmed also is the fact that there are two separate editions with different covers for the pictured 1902 first edition and a 1903 Frederick Stokes edition of Katzenjammer Kids and Happy Hooligan with differing contents. They both are two different books entirely, and what confuses many collectors is that they have identical indicia title pages, but so does an entirely different KK from 1905.

Settling on a popular size of 17" wide by 11" tall, comic books were soon available that featured Charles "Bunny" Schultze's Foxy Grandpa, Rudolph Dirk's The Katzenjammer Kids, Winsor McCay's Little Sammy Sneeze, Rarebit Fiend and Little Nemo, and Fred Opper's Happy Hooligan and Maud, in addition to dozens of Buster Brown comic books. For well over a decade, these large-size, full-color volumes were the norm, retailing for 60¢. These collections offered full-size Sunday comics with the back side blank per page.



Though not the first daily newspaper strip, the very rare Brainy Bowers and Drowsy Dugan by R. W. Taylor is now crowned the first collection of strip reprints from a daily newspaper published in America. There are now four different collections of Brainy Bower known to exist.

The Outbursts of Everett True by A. D. Condo and J. W. Raper was first published by Saalfield in 1907 in an 88-page hardcover collection. It qualifies as the second daily comic strip collection as it predates the first Mutt & Jeff collection from Ball by three years. Condo & Raper's creation began its regular run several times a week in 1905 daily newspapers and lasted until 1927, when Condo became too sick to continue. This same Everett True collection was later truncated a bit by Saalfield in 1921 to 56 strips in just 32 pages measuring the standard 10"x10" Cupples & Leon size.

By 1908 Stokes had a large backlist of full color comic books for sale at 60¢ each. Some of these titles date back to 1903 and were reprinted over and over as demand warranted. Note the number of titles in the advertisement pulled from the back of The Three Fun Makers shown below.

With the ever-increasing popularity of Bud Fisher's new daily strip sensation, Mutt & Jeff, a new format was created for reprinting daily strips in black and white, a hardcover book about 15" wide by 5" tall, published by Ball starting in 1910 for five volumes. In 1912, Ball also branched out with at least the now-obscure Doings of the Van Loons by Fred I. Leipziger, a rare comic book in the same format as the Mutt & Jeffs.

Cartoons Magazine also began in 1912 and ran through 1921 before undergoing a radical format change. It is notable as a wonderful source for information on early comics and their creators. See also the Platinum index.

The next significant evolutionary change occurred in 1919, when Cupples & Leon began issuing their black and white daily strip reprint books in a new aforementioned format, about 10" wide by 10" tall, with four panels reprinted per page in a two by two matrix. These books were 52 pages for 25¢. The first ones featured Bringing Up Father and Mutt & Jeff; there were about 100 others.

By 1921, the last of the oblong (11"x15") color comic books were issued, with Cupples & Leon's Jimmie Dugan and The Reg'lar Fellers by Gene Byrne, and EmBee's The Trouble Of Bringing Up Father by self publisher George McManus. Of special historical interest, Embee issued the first 10¢ monthly comic book, Comic Monthly, with the first issue dated January 1922. A dozen 8-1/2"x9" issues were published, each featuring solo adventures of popular King Features strips. The monthly 10¢ comic book concept had finally arrived, though it would be more than a decade before it became truly successful.

Skippy by Percy Crosby debuted in the long-running humor magazine Life in the March 22, 1923 issue. By 1924 the first hard cover collection, Life Presents Skippy, was published. The newspaper comic strip debuted June 23, 1925 with the McClure syndicate. Hearst soon picked up a Sunday page a year later in mid-1926, then added a daily strip in 1929. By the 1930s it was red hot - think Calvin & Hobbes or Peanuts in popularity. In its day, it was one of the most popular comic strips ever created. Read the Modern era essay for more on Skippy's immense popularity.

In 1926, Cupples & Leon added a new 7" wide by 9" tall format with Little Orphan Annie, Smitty, and others. These were issued in both softcover and hardcover editions with dust jackets, and became extremely popular at 60¢ per copy.

Dell began publishing all original material in The Funnies in late 1929 in a larger tabloid format. At least three dozen issues were published before Delacorte threw in the towel. Even the extremely popular Big Little Book, introduced in 1932, can be viewed as a smaller version of the existing formats. The competition amongst publishers now included Dell, McKay, Sonnet, Saalfield and Whitman. The 1930s saw a definite shift in merchandising comic strip material from adults to children. This was the decade when Kellogg's placed Buck Rogers on the map, when Ovaltine issued tons of Little Orphan Annie material. Merchandising from such pioneers as Sam Gold and Kay Kamen spearheaded this next transformation of the comics biz beginning in the early 1930s.

Upwards of a thousand of these Funnies On Parade precursors, in all formats, were published through 1935 and were very popular. Towards the end of this era of once-popular comic book formats, beautiful collections of Popeye, Mickey Mouse, Dick Tracy, and many others were published which today command ever higher prices on the open market as they are rediscovered by the advanced collector who appreciates and enjoys truly great classic comics.

END NOTE: Each year we strive to add to the many 1930s variant formats. This Platinum Age section has grown as a result of advanced collectors who continue to report in with new finds. We encourage interested collectors and scholars to help with this section of the book, as each new data entry is very important for recovering our history. The PLATINUM AGE 1883–1938

by J.C. Vaughn & Gene Gonzales

OKAY, I'VE GOT A QUESTION FOR YOU.

WHY WOULD ANYONE IGNORE FACTS IN FAVOR OF OPINION?

WHY IN THE FACE OF OVERWHELMING EMPIRICAL EVIDENCE WOULD SOMEONE SAY THAT THE COMIC BOOKS OF THE VICTORIAN AGE AND THE PLATINUM AGE AREN'T COMIC BOOKS?

GOSH, I FEEL LIKE THE RIDDLER.

THE FIRST COLLECTION OF PREVIOUSLY PUBLISHED STRIPS FEATURING THE BROWNIES WAS PRINTED IN 1887.

THE BROWNIES BECAME THE ROAD MAP FOR SUCCESSFUL LICENSED CHARACTERS . . .

THE PATH THAT WAS LATER FOLLOWED BY THE YELLOW KID, MICKEY MOUSE, AND SUPERMAN.

THE YELLOW KID IN MCFADDEN'S FLATS WAS COLLECTED R.F. OUTCAULT'S SUCCESSFUL CHARACTER IN BOOK FORM.

LIKE MANY OTHERS IN THAT TIME, IT WAS A HUGE SUCCESS.

BUT NO ONE WOULD CALL THIS COLLECTION A COMIC BOOK, WOULD THEY?

THE MOST POPULAR COMIC BOOKS EVER PUBLISHED.

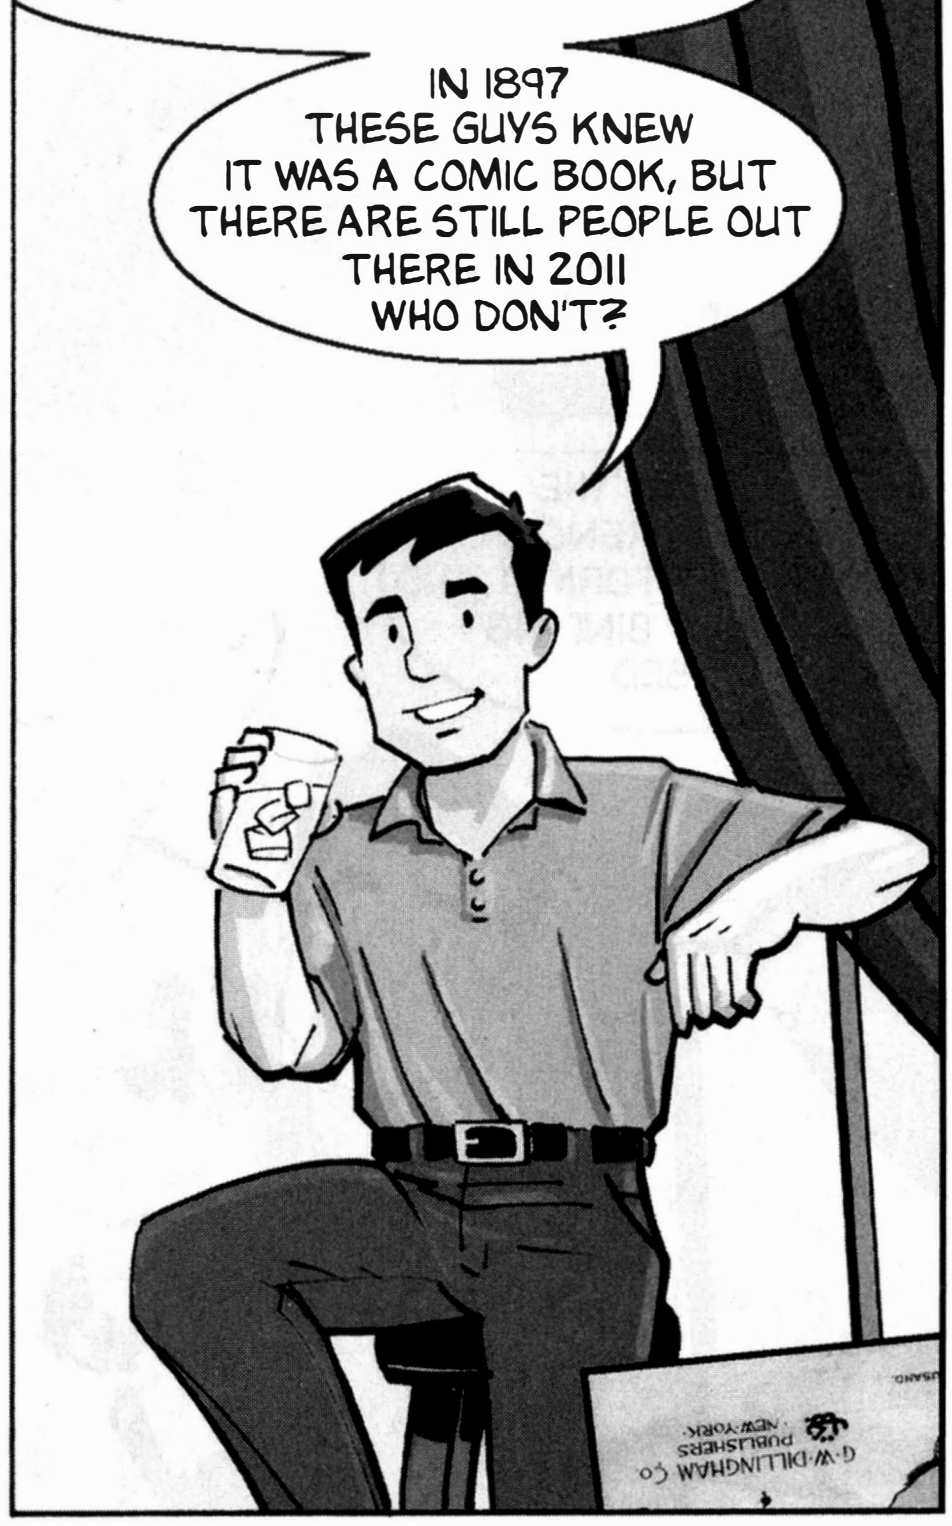
ARTEMUS WARD. HIS COMPLETE COMIC WRITINGS, WITH BIOGRAPHY AND ONE HUNDRED ILLUSTRATIONS. THE BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH BY "ELI PERKINS." CLOTH BOUND, PRICE $1.50.

JOSH BILLINGS. HIS WORKS COMPLETE (FOUR VOLUMES IN ONE), WITH ONE HUNDRED ILLUSTRATIONS, BY THOMAS NAST, AND OTHERS. CLOTH BOUND, PRICE $2.00.



VERDANT GREEN. A RACY ENGLISH COLLEGE STORY, BY CUTHBERT BEDE. PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED, AND CLOTH BOUND. PRICE $1.50.

SOLD EVERYWHERE, AND SENT BY MAIL, POSTAGE FREE, ON RECEIPT OF PRICE, BY G.W. DILLINGHAM CO., PUBLISHERS, 33 WEST 23D STREET, NEW YORK.

SO, LET'S GET THIS STRAIGHT . . .

IN 1897 THESE GUYS KNEW IT WAS A COMIC BOOK, BUT THERE ARE STILL PEOPLE OUT THERE IN 2011 WHO DON'T?

WHO ELSE MIGHT HAVE BEEN DOING COMIC BOOKS?

I CREATED LITTLE NEMO IN 1905 AND SOON IT WAS BEING COLLECTED INTO COMIC BOOK REPRINTS.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN, WINSOR McCAY.

LATER, COMIC MONTHLY, WHICH DEBUTED IN 1922, WAS THE FIRST MONTHLY NEWSSTAND COMIC BOOK.

Comic Monthly PRICE 10¢
POLLY & HER PALS

BY GEORGE, THE REPRINTS OF MY STRIP, BRINGING UP FATHER, SOLD MORE THAN 4 MILLION COPIES EACH . . .

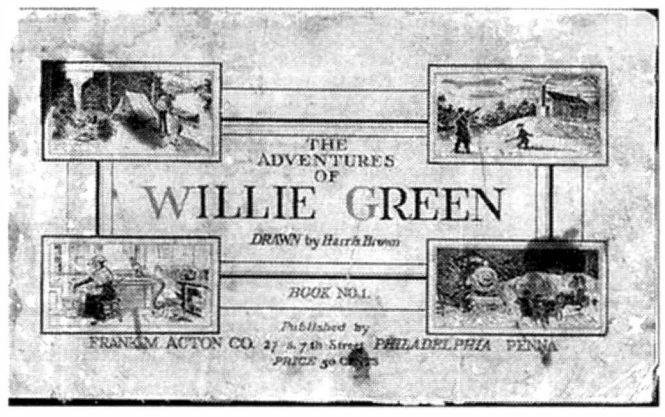
BRINGING UP FATHER
by GEO McMANUS

FUNNIES ON PARADE, WHICH IS LITTLE MORE THAN AN INTERESTING FOOTNOTE IN COMICS HISTORY, WAS PUBLISHED IN 1933 . . .

IT WAS, OF COURSE, A COLLECTION OF REPRINTS . . .

. . . AND THE ONLY DIFFERENCE, OF COURSE, THE FORMAT AND TYPE OF BINDING USED.



SO WHY IS ONE A COMIC BOOK AND THE OTHER IS NOT?

THE BROWNIES THEIR BOOK

COLLECTOR'S NOTE: The books listed in this section were published many decades before organized comics fandom began archiving and helping to preserve these fragile popular culture artifacts. Consequently, copies of most all of these comics do not often surface in Fine+ or better shape. eBay has proven after more than a decade that many items once considered rare actually are not, though they almost always are in higher grades. For items marked scarce, we are trying to ascertain how many copies might still be in existence. Your input is always welcome.

Most Platinum Age comic books are in the Fair to VG range. If you want to collect these only in high grade, your collection will be extremely small. The prices given for Good, Fine and Very Fine categories are for strictly graded editions. If you need help grading your item, we refer you to the grading section in the front of this price guide or contact the authors of the Platinum essay. Most measurements are in inches. A few measurements are in centimeters. The first dimension given is Height and the second is Width.

For ease of ascertaining the contents of each item of this listing, there is a code letter or two following most titles we have been adding in over the years to aid you. A helpful list of categories pertaining to these codes can be found at the beginning of the Victorian Age pricing sections.This section created, revised, and expanded by Robert Beerbohm and Richard Olson with able assistance from Ray Agricola, Jon Berk, Bill Blackbeard, Roy Bonario, Ray Bottorff Jr., Chris Brown, Alfredo Castelli, Darrell Coons, Sol Davidson, Leonardo De Sá, Scott Deschaine, Mitchell Duval, Joe Evans, Tom Gordon III, Bruce Hamilton, Andy Konkykru, Don Kurtz, Gabriel Laderman, Bruce Mason, Donald Puff, Robert Quesinberry, Steve Rowe, Randy Scott, John Snyder, Art Spiegelman, Steve Thompson, Joan Crosby Tibbets, Richard Samuel West, Doug Wheeler, Richard Wright and Craig Yoe.

His description of his Cockney driver, "Harold" is amusing. Also describes his experience visiting Chicago to speak out against Capone, his concerns over the evils of Prohibition, and the economy prior to the 1929 crash. This book reveals he was aware of the dangers of his outspoken views, and is prophetic, re: his later years as political prisoner. Also reveals his religious beliefs.*

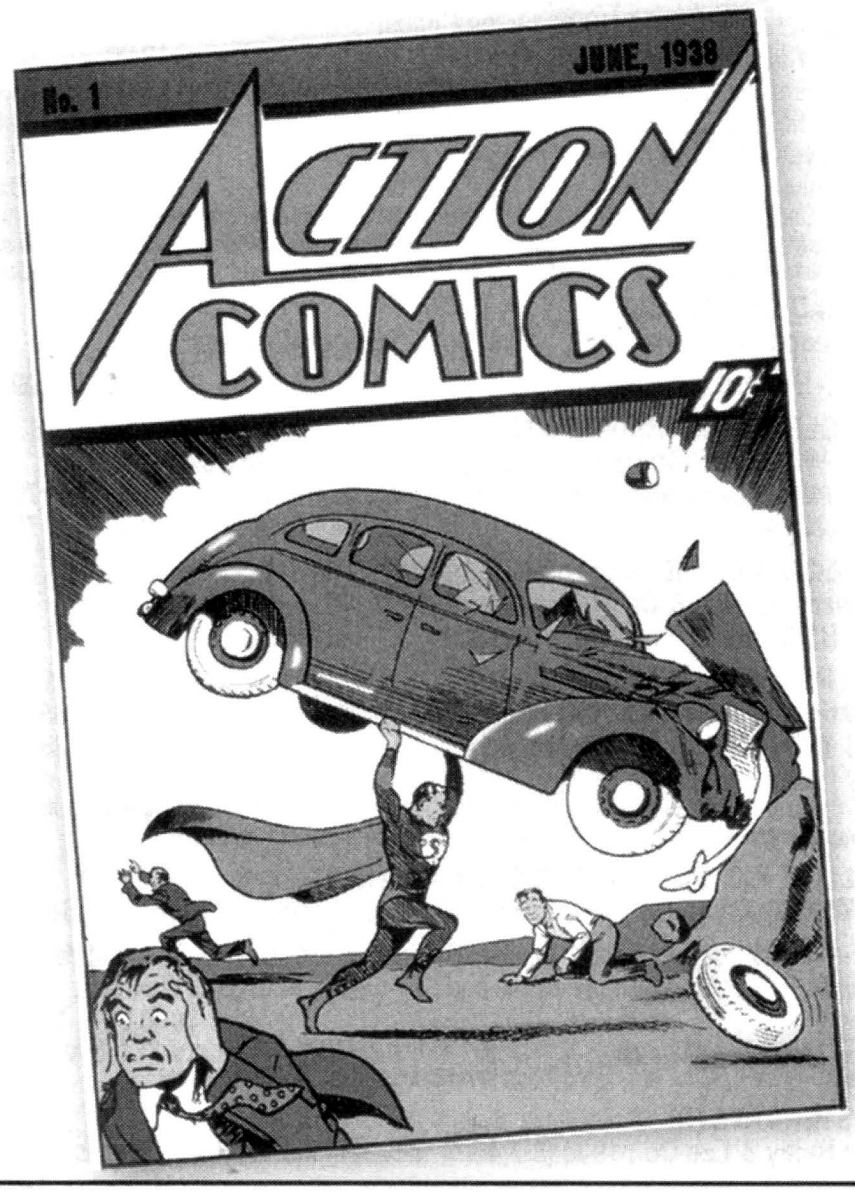
Golden Age & Beyond

The American Comic Book 1938–Present

by J.C. Vaughn & Gene Gonzales



EVERYTHING CHANGED IN JUNE 1938.

AT THE SAME TIME NOTHING CHANGED.

THE ERA OF THE SUPERHEROES ARRIVED, SO THE CONTENT OF COMICS DEFINITELY CHANGED . . .

. . . BUT NOTHING FUNDAMENTALLY CHANGED IN THE METHOD OF DELIVERING SEQUENTIAL STORYTELLING TO THE MASSES.

STILL, IT'S HARD TO IGNORE WHAT FOLLOWED.

AND IT'S HARD TO IGNORE THE VALUE ATTACHED TO SOME OF THE COMICS LISTED IN THIS SECTION.

FIRST, THOUGH, WE'LL TAKE A CLOSE-UP LOOK AT THE COMICS OF THE 1970S COURTESY OF BACK ISSUE EDITOR AND OVERSTREET ADVISOR MICHAEL EURY . . .

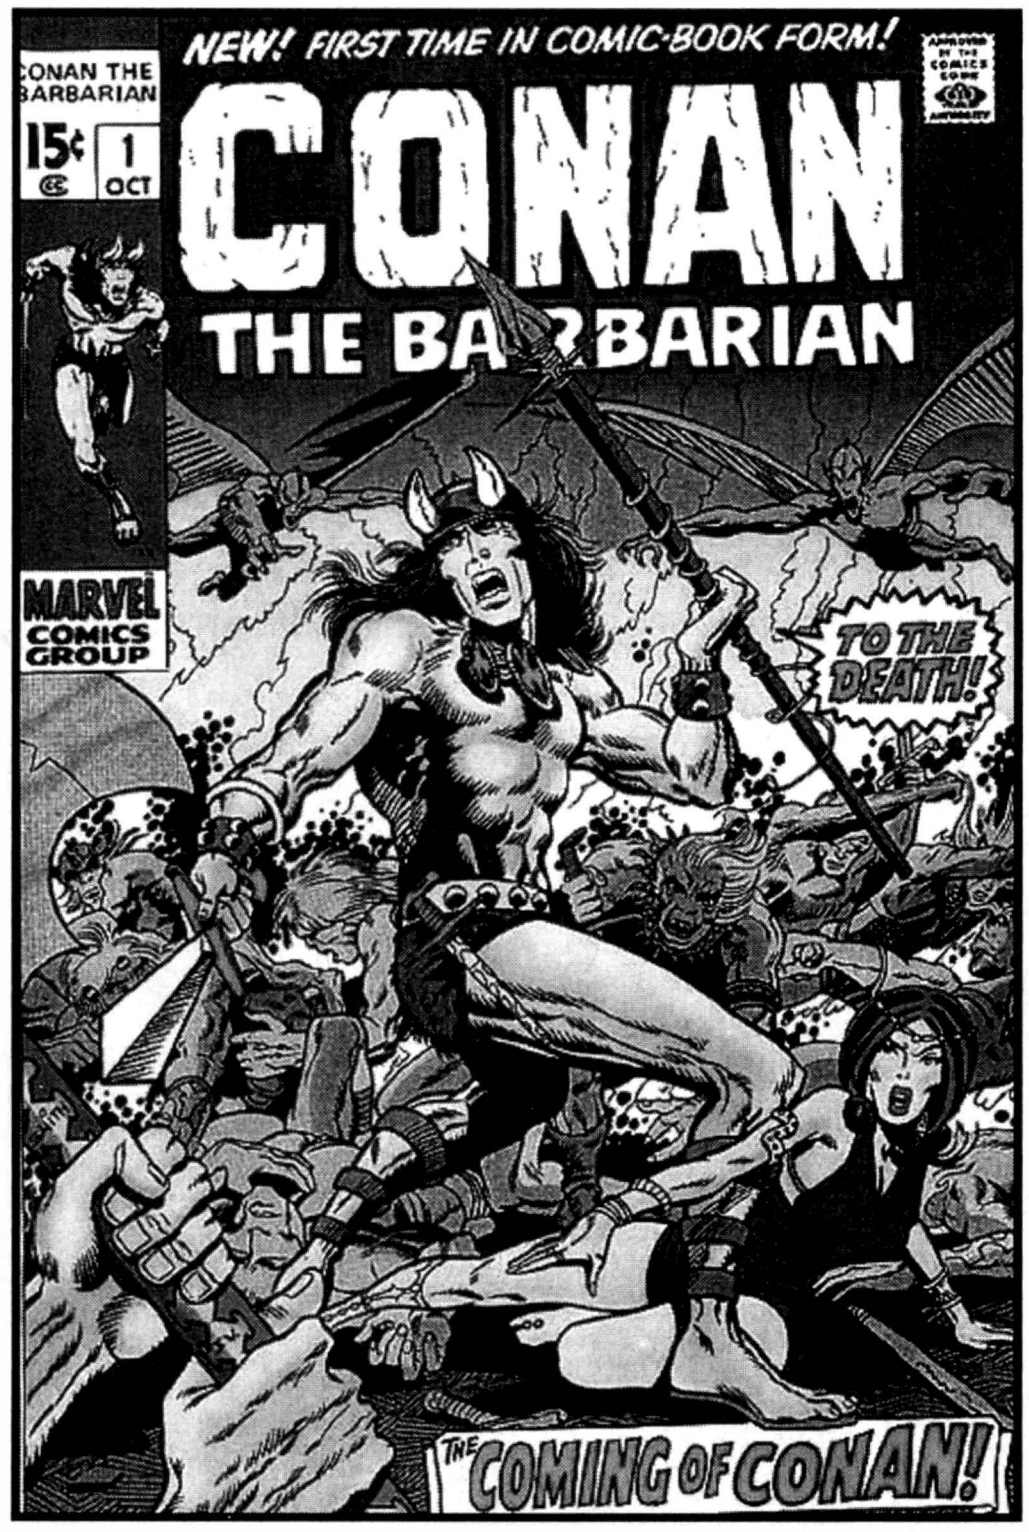
FOLLOWED BY OUR LARGEST PRICING SECTION.

TAKE IT AWAY, MICHAEL!

GOING FOR THE BRONZE: LIFE AFTER THE SILVER AGE

by Michael Eury

It was 1970, and the Silver Age was over.



The Silver Age's innovations, the Julie Schwartz-edited revamps of Golden Age favorites and the Lee/Kirby/et al.-constructed House of Ideas, had grown familiar, and in some cases, stale. The bottom had dropped out of the TV Batman superhero boom and the Big Two and its competitors, reeling from declining sales, scratched their heads and pondered, "What do we try next?"

Their answer: Try everything! The 1970s was the decade of excess, after all, when there was no such thing as "too much" and nothing we, as a culture, wouldn't try. Hair got longer, music got louder, lapels got wider, bras got burned, movies got bloodier, drugs got mainstreamed . . . and Mom wore pantsuits while Dad sprouted muttonchops. Marvel and DC also got "with it," trying new genres, new ideas, and new formats, all in a hungry pursuit of the one thing there could never be too much of: money.

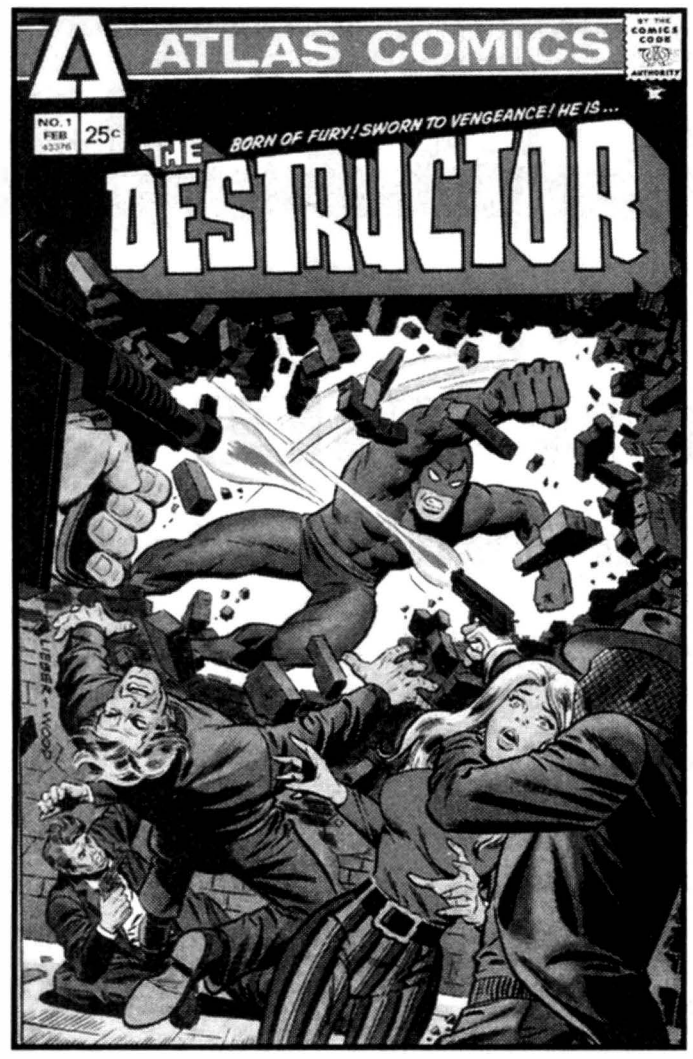
Today, Mom's pantsuits may have elastic waistlines and Dad's muttonchops-and hair-may be a distant memory, but the decade we now call the Bronze Age-1970–1979-was, arguably, the most influential of all of comics' landmark eras. It could have been comics' last dance, but instead it became a decade of renaissance, when through trial and error inroads were made that paved the way for the innovations of the 1980s, the 1990s, and the comic book industry we know today.



In their quest to find the next big thing, the first place publishers looked was outside of comics. For a mere $200 licensing fee ($50 beyond tight-fisted publisher Martin Goodman's budgeted $150), Marvel Comics writer/editor Roy Thomas landed the publication rights to Robert E. Howard's famed swordsman Conan. And while Marvel's Conan the Barbarian #1, written by Thomas, drawn by newcomer Barry (Windsor-) Smith, and cover-dated October 1970, didn't instantly ignite the comics world (Conan didn't look or read like the other material available, and early issues suffered from distribution challenges), before long the series developed a growing audience, and proved to publishers that they could sell material other than caped crusaders and lovesick all-American teens.

Sword-and-sorcery comics soon cut a swath through the stands, with licensed acquisitions Kull, Red Sonja, Thongor, and Solomon Kane joining Marvel's line, and DC countering with its acquisition of Fritz Leiber's Fafhrd and the Grey Mouser, in a 1973 series that made no attempt to hide the craze upon which it was capitalizing: Sword and Sorcery (original characters like the Warlord, Starfire, Stalker, Claw the Unconquered, IronJaw, and Wulf the Barbarian also premiered). Yet DC had already ventured into licensed terrain with its April 1972 cover–dated first issue of Tarzan (#207, continuing the numbering from previous publisher Gold Key). "[The estate of Tarzan creator Edgar Rice Burroughs| wanted their creative people on Tarzan," Carmine Infantino, at the time DC's Editorial Director, revealed, a request to which he responded, "No, I want my guys on the book"—actually his "guy," Joe Kubert, whose heralded stint as writer/artist/editor produced some of, perhaps the, finest illustrated Tarzan stories ever.

Tomb of Dracula (TOD), first seen in (cover date) April 1972, was not a licensed property but might have been had Bram Stoker's 1897 vampire novel not fallen into public domain. TOD and Werewolf by Night, which preceded it into print by two months in Marvel Spotlight #2, were Marvel's response to the 1971 lifting of the Comics Code Authority's prohibition against the depiction of vampires, werewolves, and the undead (although Morbius the Living Vampire, who debuted in October 1971's Amazing Spider-Man #101, was first out the gruesome gate), and spawned one of the decade's most popular trends. Frankenstein, Swamp Thing, Man-Thing, Bog Beast, Brother Voodoo, the Demon, and the Living Mummy were among the macabre protagonists in 1970s comics ("I pray that you will discontinue this corruption of impressionable young minds. . ." penned one concerned mother in response to Marvel's hellspawned super-hero, the Son of Satan). Some of them have resurfaced in the 2000s and have achieved acclaim beyond the four-color pages, including Ghost Rider, the star of a 2006 motion picture starring Nicolas Cage—who was weaned on Bronze Age comics (and chose his stage name from Marvel's own Hero for Hire, Luke Cage, another product of the 1970s).

Fu Manchu, the fictional "Yellow Peril" mastermind and subject of a series of novels by Sax Rohmer, brought his claw-fingered menace to comics in Special Marvel Edition #15 (December 1973), the first appearance of his created-for-comics son, Shang-Chi, better known as the Master of Kung Fu. Steve Englehart and Jim Starlin's response to the TV hit Kung Fu (1972–1975)—which itself was television's response to the trend of Hong Kong–born martial-arts movies and their patron saint, Bruce Lee—Master of Kung Fu became a long-running success for Marvel (most notably under Doug Moench and Paul Gulacy's tenure), and encouraged a gaggle of companions and imitators, including Sons of the Tiger, Iron Fist, Bronze Tiger, Lady Shiva, Karate Kid, and Richard Dragon, Kung Fu Fighter, as well as Seaboard/Atlas' 1975 copycat title The Hands of the Dragon.

Martial arts aside, Rohmer's Fu Manchu novels represented another 1970s' comics trend: pulp heroes. Doc Savage returned to spin racks in the form of a Marvel series in 1972. Dennis O'Neil and Michael Kaluta brought The Shadow to DC in 1973 (Jim Steranko, Alex Toth, and Bernie Wrightson were considered as the Shadow artist before then-newcomer Kaluta was signed). In 1975 DC also published four issues of Justice, Inc., starring the chalk-skinned globe-trotter the Avenger, and Howard Chaykin's mid-1970s' Dominic Fortune (for Marvel) and the Scorpion (for Seaboard) mined this pulp vein.

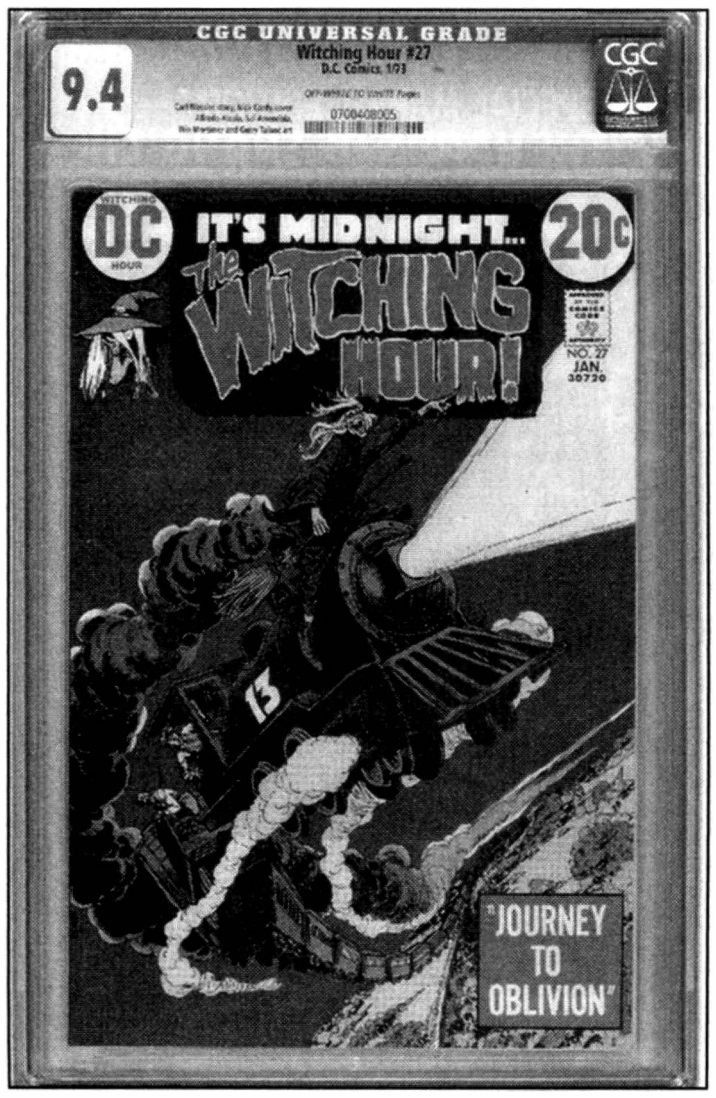
Beyond the world of pop literature, Marvel found mass media a ripe market for exploitation. Rock stars KISS became super-heroes, even fighting Dr. Doom (premiering in a magazine-formatted comic featuring the audacious stunt of mixing the band's blood with the printer's ink!), and comics based upon popular sci-fi films Logan's Run, Planet of the Apes, Godzilla, and 2001: A Space Odyssey invaded the racks. DC was less ambitious in adapting cinematic properties, although its "DC TV Comic" line, including Welcome Back, Kotter, is noteworthy if for no other reason than the utter strangeness of it all.



No 1970s' screen property was more popular as a comic book than Star Wars, which premiered a few months before the May 25, 1977 release of the film, an anticipation-building maneuver brainstormed by Jedi master George Lucas. Roy Thomas was at the writing helm, and as he told BACK ISSUE in 2005, Lucas "had in mind the idea of Howard Chaykin as the artist." Star Wars' success title paved the way for other popular late-1970s' Marvel titles based upon sci-fi and toy properties, such as Battlestar Galactica, The Micronauts, and Rom.

Chaykin as Lucas' go-to artist illustrates another hallmark of 1970s' comics: the emergence of young talent. Comics publishing houses had been the exclusive domain of stuffed shirts in elbow-patched tweed jackets, but while looking outside of the field for new properties, the medium also looked within its fan base for the next talent wave. The transition, however, was not without its bumps in the road. As one of the "long-hairs" who broke the barrier, writer Denny O'Neil revealed, reflecting upon his visits to DC's headquarters, that "Steve Skeates and I were told by one of the functionaries not to walk past the Big Boss' office 'looking like that,' to take the long way around." "DC had been a closed shop," concurred Carmine Infantino, who "put aside a room for the freelance artists and writers, a place for them to go and discuss and enjoy each other's work." Another such site was Continuity Associates, the studio co-founded in 1971 by Neal Adams and Dick Giordano. Following the lead established in the late 1960s by visionaries Adams and his contemporary Steranko, who demonstrated that comics storytelling was not restricted to stodgy panel layouts or stereotypical dialogue, new artists and writers stormed the medium, daring to do things differently, Frank Brunner, John Byrne, Chris Claremont, Gerry Conway, Dave Cockrum, José Luis Garcia-Lopez, Steve Gerber, Michael Golden, Mike Grell, George Pérez, Mike Ploog, Frank Miller, Marshall Rogers, Bill Sienkiewicz, Walter Simonson, Len Wein, and Marv Wolfman, among their number.

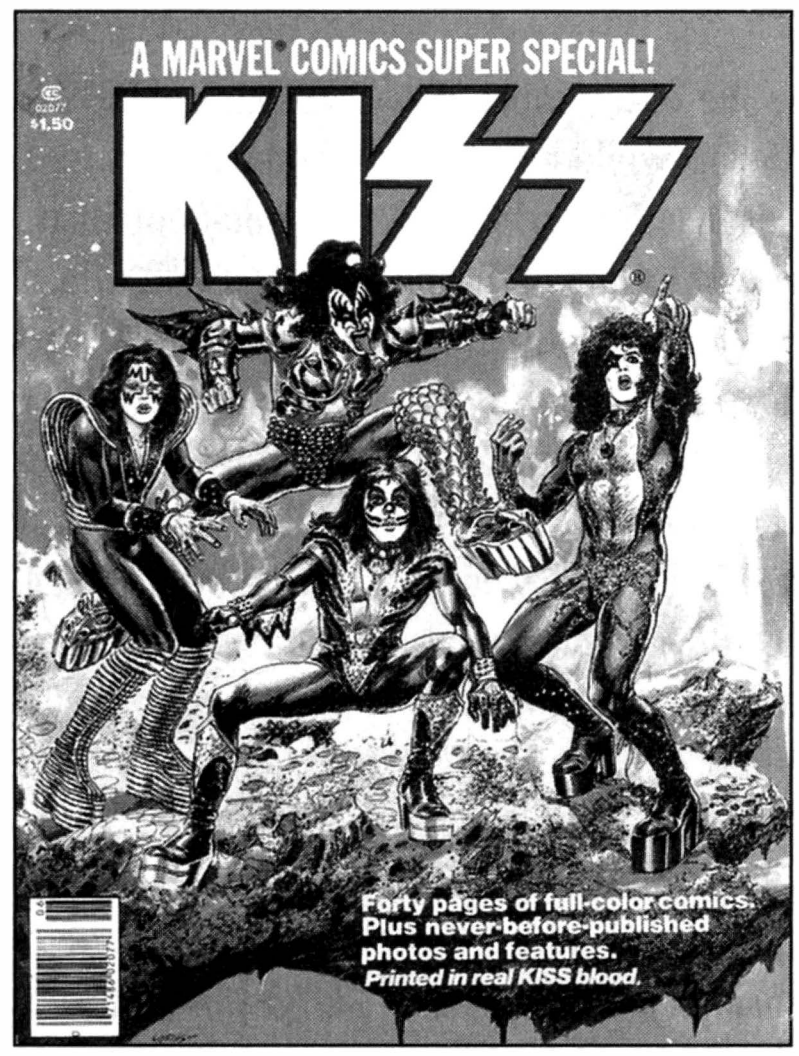
Not to rest on their laurels, established talent became energized by this exciting new climate: John Buscema, Nick Cardy, Gene Colan, Gil Kane, Jack Kirby, Joe Kubert, Stan Lee, and John Romita, Sr. produced some of their best work in the 1970s, as did Curt Swan and Murphy Anderson with their "Swanderson" pairing on Superman. Marvel and DC took chances with traditional characters and with new characters existing within their universes. The coming of Kirby's Fourth World, Green Lantern/Green Arrow, Swamp Thing, Jonah Hex, the Punisher and Wolverine, Howard the Duck, Warlock, ethnic characters, and the new X-Men, plus the Joker's return to his homicidal roots and the deaths of Gwen

Stacy and the Green Goblin, suggest that the most significant innovation of the 1970s might have been a willingness to explore new directions with icons.



With new properties, new talent, and new characters bombarding the reader at a dizzying pace, little stability was to be found in the shapes of the comic books themselves. Publishers experimented with a variety of formats, in a move initially inspired by that perennial enemy of the long-time comic-book reader: the price increase.

Two years after jumping from a 12- to a 15-cent cover price, the 25-cent comic originated in the summer of 1971, as DC's titles, with their August cover dates, were now 48 pages (52 counting covers), hyped as "bigger and better" with roughly 22–25 new story pages backed up by 6–12 pages of Golden and Silver Age reprints. Marvel sucker-punched DC, delaying their price hike by one month (while blurbing their covers "Still 15¢"), then matching DC's price the next month, but trumping their original page count with 34–35 new story pages—and then undercutting their competitor by reverting to the standard 32–page format the following month, but at the cover price of 20 cents. DC, however, offered its readers something that Marvel's streamlined package could not: history. Newer readers sampled adventures of long-retired characters like Starman and Sandman, or more recently cancelled heroes including Deadman, keeping them alive in the fandom consciousness and inspiring budding writers and artists to, in later years, resuscitate them.

Is there any format that "says" the 1970s more than DC's 100-page Super Spectacular? In June and July 1971, DC published a trio of 100-pagers—Weird Mystery Tales, Love Stories, and World's Greatest Super-Heroes—each priced at 50 cents and reprinting material from the publisher's rich past. By 1973, 100-pagers returned as reprint specials, following in the footsteps of the Silver Age's beloved Annuals and 80-page giants. Before long several of DC's regular titles were converted to a bimonthly 100-page format, with new lead feature (or features) backed up by classics from yesteryear. (In December 1976 DC similarly converted some of its character-heavy titles like Superman Family into its new "Dollar Comic" format, featuring all-new stories in an 80-page [later a 64-page] package.)

Sharing the Super Spectacular's page count but at a much smaller size, the digest-sized comic (which began in the late 1960s at Gold Key) gained prominence in the 1970s in an attempt to broaden comics' availability. DC experimented with a 1972 Tarzan digest, announcing but never releasing a Laurel and Hardy digest (DC did, however, release a Laurel and Hardy one-shot comic). By decade's end, DC, Marvel, and Archie were publishing a host of reprint digests, aggressively fighting for rack space in supermarkets' highly visible checkouts. DC's and Marvel's digests were cancelled by the mid-1980s, but Archie's remain a durable fixture today, and the digest has morphed into a popular format for manga.

Comics reprints gained a bookstore presence throughout the 1970s, including Bonanza's trio of hardcovers, Batman: From the 30's to the 70's, Superman: From the 30's to the 70's, and Shazam: From the 40's to the 70's, the latter of which, not experiencing reprintings like the Batman and Superman editions, being quite scarce in today's collectibles market. Fireside's full-color trade paperback collections of Marvel and DC material were popular, particularly the Stan Lee–sanctioned line of super-hero trades beginning with Origins of Marvel Comics (1974). Near the end of the decade, Tempo Books' black-and-white paperback reprints of 1950s and 1960s DC material could be found in bookstores and K-Marts, as could Pocket Books' full-color line of reprints of early Marvels.

The biggest reprint format of the 1970s, bar none, was the tabloid, measuring approximately 10 1/4" x 13 1/4" and called "Treasury Editions" by Marvel and "Limited Collectors' Editions" by DC. Offering the added bonus of printing comics art close to full size (the standard dimensions of comics artboard of the day was 10" x 15"), these oversized comics soon housed all-new as well as classic material, and became the spotlight format for influential projects, including DC and Marvel's first super-hero team-up, Superman vs. The Amazing Spider-Man (1976).

Tabloids were envisioned as a doorway for comics to hop off the claustrophobic, kid-centric spin rack and be shelved alongside compatibly sized periodicals, but the black-and-white (B&W) comics magazine was most attractive to publishers as a means of luring the older, more discerning reader to the comic-book art form. While the medium had previously dabbled in this arena, E.C.'s "Picto-Fiction" B&Ws of the 1950s being an early example, during the 1970s almost every comics house tried its hand at it, following the lead of publisher James Warren, the indisputable champ of black-and-whites since his 1964 launch of Creepy. Skywald's Psycho, Ross Andru and Mike Esposito's Up Your Nose and Out Your Ear, and Charlton's TV-licensed The Six Million Dollar Man were among 1970s' B&W comics magazine fare, but Marvel successfully milked this trend for several years, most notably with its long-running Savage Sword of Conan. A single issue each of Jack Kirby's ill-fated "Speak-Out" black-and-whites In the Days of the Mob and Spirit World, DC's 1971 attempt to stick an apprehensive toe in the B&W waters, was released under the banner of "Hampshire Distributor's Ltd." Always the trailblazer, Kirby had high hopes for finding a new audience with these magazines (he was developing two other titles, True Divorce Cases and Soul Love, but they were not produced), but spotty distribution of Mob and Spirit intimidated the publisher from releasing additional B&Ws.

The graphic novel was also born in the 1970s, thanks to Will Eisner's A Contract with God (1978). The biographical "comix" found in the undergrounds motivated Eisner to return to the fold after a hiatus, and at a time when he could have easily retired, Eisner essentially re-created the comics art form by producing this pioneering collection of intensely personal stories.

The final, but widest-reaching, breakthrough of the Bronze Age was merchandising. While popular comics stars had long been licensed for various products, comic-book characters became household names during the 1970s due to a ubiquitous barrage of Saturday-morning TV cartoons and primetime live-action dramas, action figures, records, coloring books, 7-11 Slurpee cups, lunchboxes, electric toothbrushes, Colorforms, clothing patches, View-Master reels, and Halloween costumes, culminating in Superman: The Movie's elevation of the comic-book film to blockbuster status in 1978. While the innovations of 1970s publishing rebuilt the industry from within, the non-comics retailing of its characters cemented their statuses as cultural institutions.

The correct title listing for each comic book can be determined by consulting the indicia (publication data) on the beginning interior pages of the comic. The official title is determined by those words of the title in capital letters only, and not by what is on the cover. Titles are listed in this book as if they were one word, ignoring spaces, hyphens, and apostrophes, to make finding titles easier. Exceptions are made in rare cases. Comic books listed should be assumed to be in color unless noted "B&W".

Comic publishers are invited to send us sample copies for possible inclusion in future guides.

PRICING IN THIS GUIDE: Prices for GD 2.0 (Good), VG 4.0 (Very Good), FN 6.0 (Fine), VF 8.0 (Very Fine), VF/NM 9.0 (Very Fine/Near Mint),and NM- 9.2 (Near Mint-) are listed in whole U.S. dollars except for prices below $7 which show dollars and cents. The minimum price listed is $3.00, the cover price for current new comics. Many books listed at this price can be found in $1.00 boxes at conventions and dealers stores.
